C. P. R. FREIGHT DERAILED EAST OF CITY, 4 HURT

Collision With Handcar Breaks Engine Pilot Rod; 19 Cars Strewn on Rails

Crew of Three on Hand Car Jumped Just Before Collision and Were Uninjured—Brakeman Riding The Front End Carried to Ditch in Wreckage—Engine Crew Leaped But Were Hurt in Fall.

HEAVY FOG GIVEN AS CAUSE

Injured Train Crew And Transient Riding "Blind" Rushed to Hospital — Doctors in Attendance Say All Will Recover—Goo da Strewn About Right-of-way But C.P.R. Officia ls Quickly on Guard.

Four men were seriously injured and nineteen loaded freight cars and a heavy locomotive were hurled into the ditch, one mile west of Shannonville this morning when a fast westbound Canadian Pacific Railway freight train collided with a section handcar eastbound to Shannonville.

The injured are:

L. Black, Smiths Falls, brakeman; fractured ribs, head and leg lacerations and possible internal injuries.

G. H. Francis, engineer, Smiths Falls; concussion, face and head lacerations.

J. Carpenter, fireman, Smiths Falls; fractured ankle, broken ribs.

Timothy Healey, transient, no address; fractured pelvis and other injuries.

Two Jumped to Safety

Francis and Carpenter jumped to safety, when they saw the impending crash. Black, who was riding in the cab of the engine refused to jump and was buried in the wreckage. He was extricated, severely injured by other members of the crew. The crew of the handcar jumped to safety.

Conductor J. Hart, of Smiths Falls and rear end brakeman C. Warren, same address, who were riding in the caboose at the rear of the train were uninjured. A transient crewded out

Premier Hepburn Makes Statement at Woodstock Meeting

A. S. DEWAN NAMED

Nominee States His Stand On C. I. O. Issue

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP)—Promising for collection of succession duties is not "soaking the rich, but collecting monies actually due the state," Premier Mitchell Hepburn told Oxford Liberals last night, met in convention here for renomination of A. S. Dewan, the riding's representative in the last legislature.

Mr. Hepburn said he feared that if the Conservatives were to win the provincial election Oct. 1 legislation now under way to collect duties from certain estates would be abandoned. He appealed for re-election of his government that the suits might be enforced to collect.

An increase in taxation would be the alternative if the reopening of Ontario House, the Provincial trade agreement with England, called by his government, said the premier, but it was in keeping with other things that have happened since Mr. Rowe to increase taxation. Ontario House had been a useless duplication of Federal trade agencies.

Sweat Lumber Industry.

His administration had practically "saved" Northern Ontario's lumber industry and greatly reduced unemployment there by opening new markets for pulpwood and by other measures, Mr. Hepburn said.

The issue revolving around the Committee for Industrial Organization, United States labor organization, bobbed up in the speeches of both Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Dewan, the latter saying:

"I am against any organization of the type which is nothing but racketeering, fighting among men in the working man in order to let a few men get the luxury money."

Mr. Hepburn said C.I.O. activities had cost many men jobs in Toronto. He said, "Let us be fair to both employers, who had not made money for long years, and forced the entry of business to an overseas plant and the 300 men lost their jobs.

Not Concerned

Mr. Hepburn declared he was not concerned with the C.I.O. activities which the new case was reported was closed.

17 Ontario Deaths

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP)—The death of a child during the night in a Toronto hospital raised the number of fatalities in the epidemic of infantile paralysis now prevalent in Ontario to 17, with the second death in the province reported today. Sir Malcolm Campbell Sets New Motorboat Record Today

Sends Boat Flying Over Waters of Swiss Lake at 125 M.P.H.

ROLLS ROYCE ENGINE

Locarno, Switzerland, Sept. 1 (AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell, famed British sportsman, added the world's motorboat speed record to his international automobile speed standard today.

The 53-year-old Briton piloted his Rolls Royce-powered, Bluebird, over Lake Maggiore's smooth waters at a rate of 125.795 miles per hour to eclipse Car Wood's five-year-old mark of 124.86 m.p.h.

Sir Malcolm already holds the world automobile record of 301.33 m.p.h., set at Bonneville Salt Flats in Utah in 1935.

Sir Malcolm's aquatic Bluebird—his record-smashing automobile was called by the same name—was powered by a Rolls Royce aero engine which has been used in the air mail route in smooth and effortless fashion.

With the land speed record already among his trophies, Sir Malcolm built his motorboat with the idea of breaking the water speed record as well. With that now in his grasp, it is suggested Sir Britton might well turn to the air in his never-ending search for new thrills. He was in the Royal Flying Corps during the Great War.

Bluebird, not only captured the unlimited motorboat record, but also set up a new mark for single engined boats. The previous record for this type of craft was 110.10 m.p.h., established by Robert Jones Paine's Miss Britton III at Venice, Italy, in 1934.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiesson
Science Service Meteorologist

Beginning of autumn! September 23 is the beginning of autumn for the northern hemisphere, the astronomers place their beginning on Sept. 23 of the year. The word season comes from a Latin word meaning "to sow", and "spring" or "springing time" means the same. Autumn is no time in the fields to increase, or the time for starting or fruiting. The home gardener is getting his increase this month. In the North potatoes will dead tops should be dug. It is recommended that "if such bags heads begin to crack, bend them so as to break the roots as not start growth, should be carefully banked. In the South dahlias may be planted, and if desired lettuce may still be sown, also spinach and parsley for spring use.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP)—Pressure is high over Eastern Canada and the Atlantic States but over the greater part of the Western States and the north portion of Hudson Bay. Showers and local thunderstorms have occurred in many districts of Northern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes, but it has been fair with unusually high temperatures over Southern and Eastern Ontario and Southwest Quebec. Except for light showers in Southern Saskatchewan the weather has been fair throughout the West.

Lake Superior—Moderate northeast to southwest winds; partly cloudy today and Thursday with thunderstowers in many districts, somewhat warmer in north portion.

Manitoba—Partly cloudy and moderately warm today and Thursday; light thundrshowers in a few districts.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Partly cloudy today and Thursday; not much change in temperature.

Children Romp, Visit Midway In Merry Care-Free Manner As Fair Board Plays Hosts

Opening Day of Belleville Fair One of Best in History

GRANDSTAND SHOW

Novelty Acts, Circus Turns And Expert Juggling Provide Thrills

Children's Day at the Fair with its Pied Piper atmosphere, and youthful revelry piping his mythical music of Carnival attracted thousands of children to the Agricultural Grounds yesterday, where under ideal weather conditions the 1937 edition of the Belleville Fair was ushered in. Officially opened shortly after two o'clock by Dr. A. H. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture in the booming ceremony of cannon, the fall classic of Hastings County opened its arms to the youth of the city and district.

Carefree youth, yelling and shrieking its delight at the magic and mystery of the midway lights exemplified in the many attractions so dear to the heart of the young as to be priceless, filled the grounds in a milling mass totally oblivious of the close humidity which sent many grownups to the shade of trees, the comparative coolness of their cars and the cold drink booths. Youth at play was personified by the concourse of laughing youngsters as they dominated the midway, the concessions, the grandstand and the many other attractions offered by a far-seeing directorate.

Humidity High

The humidity of the day which failing to lessen in the evening did not deter a record crowd coming into the thousands from attending the opening night's show. As early as six o'clock a steady parade of cars entered the gates, while others, looking for better parking accommodations, left their vehicles outside. Long before the scheduled time for the main features to start laughing care-free milling crowds of people of all ages and sizes filled in and around the brilliantly lighted Midway, which was alive around the many concessions. Here with countless prizes tempted the cold drink and hot dog concessions. The more pedate crowd slowly paraded through the many exhibits, where exhibits of all kinds became the object of their admirations. The livestock sheds and cattle barns were the mecca for thousands of lovers of horses and cattle. And over all was plainly noticeable a vast difference in general feeling to that of other years.

Refrigerator Salesman Achieves Food Dream

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP)—A refrigerator salesman at the Canadian National Exhibition achieved his fondest dream today. He sold an electric ice box to an Eskimo.

Philip Godsell, P.R.G.S. veteran Winnipeg explorer and trapper, sold the box to Ikey Ikey.

It seems the Eskimos at Exhibition Park were suffering from the heat and had for the past few days. They missed their Arctic snow box outside the Igloo door. One short demonstration was enough when the salesman produced his "white man's igloo."

Emile St. Goddard, veteran St. Boniface musher, also with the show, had to send out his refrigerator to keep his husky pups cool when they got overheated.

FIRES RAGING ACROSS SHANGHAI NEAR BOUNDARY

21 Japanese Destroyers And Cruisers Pump Shells at Chapei

Shanghai, Sept. 1 (AP)—A terrifying series of new fires roared in Shanghai tonight. The blazes, one of them in the Chinese district facing the International Settlement, provided lurid background for Japan's military operations.

Twenty-one Japanese destroyers and cruisers lobbed shells into the Chapei and Kiangwan sectors of Shanghai's north end. Japanese aircraft bombed the Chinese positions.

Woosung, Shanghai's historic defence post at the wide river bend where the Whangpoo meets the Yangtze, lurked in the Japanese hands. But the hard-pressed Chinese having the flagship with cruisers Idzumo, Yahagi and Asigara and a British merchant vessel were hit by abnormal fires during Sino-Japanese air fights.

The ships were the cruiser Dezaa, flying the flag of Admiral Sir Chas. Little, commander-in-chief of the China station of the Royal Navy, the sloop Falmouth, and the coastal steamship Shanghai.

The vessels were damaged but no casualties were reported.

PARALYSIS PEAK NOT TO COME FOR TWO WEEKS

727 Persons Have 'Caught' Disease In Ontario

CAUTION URGED

Health Officials Forecast 2100 Cases Yet to Develop

Toronto, Sept. 1 (CP)—The Ontario Department of Health announced today that as 10:30 a.m. the number of infantile paralysis cases in the province stood at 727, an increase of 36 since the last official tabulation at midnight Monday. There have been 31 deaths since the epidemic broke out early in June.

(By Canadian Press)

A picture of Ontario's worst infantile paralysis epidemic was before the province today, etched in its broad outlines by the Department of Health, as all precautions may be taken. Here were the blackest spots in Canada.

Since early June, 727 persons have "caught" the disease, 31 have died.

The peak, health officials estimate, will not be reached until mid-September.

Within the next two months approximately 2,100 more cases will develop.

Can Touch Succeeding

Approximately one-tenth of Ontario's population of 3,500,000 or 350,000 persons — are "susceptible" to the disease.

In announcing these details, on authority of Health Minister Dr. J. A. Faulkner, public health officials stressed they were not making an alarmist view of the situation. They merely emphasized the need for extreme caution.

"The schools should be closed where there is trouble," said Dr. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister. Health officials generally were agreed parents should not be under compulsion to send their children to school.

Many Schools Closed

In more than a score of Ontario municipalities, however, this precaution had already been taken and schools, auditoriums, churches closed today, did not open their doors. In other places, even where the disease was more than prevalent, the view was held that children were better in school where they might be watched than allowed to congregate on the streets.

Several municipalities made last-minute decisions to postpone school openings tomorrow. Among them:

Toronto, most populous, remained the "storm centre" where the new cases reported yesterday, its case list since June 10 stood at 323. This figure included 31 cases of the 1929 epidemic in which 263 cases led to 28 deaths. Toronto's death toll in the current outbreak was 11.

Chicago Delays School Opening

Chicago, Sept. 1 (AP)—Chicago Health authorities, faced with the largest number of August infantile paralysis cases in years today, postponed reopening of school for 619,000 children today "until the danger has passed." Only one case reached and the sickness is definitely on the wane."

Public and parochial schools were scheduled to reopen next Tuesday. Kindergartens were ordered after the Board of Health found that 21 of the 44 cases were re-

Armed Convoys Proposed To Force Way for Mercy Ships

Japanese Warn Shipping to Steer Clear of Naval Concentrations

ARMED SHIPMENTS

By JAMES A. MILLS

Shanghai, Sept. 1 (AP)—Japanese naval authorities warned all foreign shipping today to steer clear of the Japanese naval concentrations in the Whangpoo River and the Yangtze mouth, and to keep to the open sea and safety for hundreds of foreigners marooned in Shanghai.

British and United States naval commanders were understood to be discussing inauguration of naval convoys to force a safe passage down the river for Mercy ships carrying refugees.

Under the proposed plan armed warship escorts would resist forcibly any attempts to molest foreign shipping.

Arms Shipments.

The Japanese naval authorities further announced developments might compel their fleet to take stringent action to stop shipments of arms and munitions to China from foreign nations.

Meanwhile fighting swept the Whangpoo's banks from the north-ern edge of the city to Woosung where it meets the Yangtze twelve miles north of the International Settlement.

Chinese admitted "heavy losses in the Changyahwapang area" where Japanese, near Woosung, from Japanese naval shelling and aerial bombardment.

The Chinese were withdrawing slowly to prepared second line positions further in and out of range of the Japanese naval guns.

Eight Bombs Dropped.

Japanese planes dropped eight bombs on Chinese positions near the British patrol lines on the northwestern edge of the International Settlement. British troops were ordered to withdraw temporarily out of danger.

Greek Cargo Ship Tsepo Bombed And Forced Ashore

CARRIES MUNITIONS

Helmsman of Tsepo Is Killed And One Sailor Wounded

London, Sept. 1 (AP)—The admiralty announced today that the destroyer Havock had been attacked during the night by an unidentified submarine off Cape San Antonio in the Mediterran. The warship was not hit.

Her sister destroyer, the Hyperion, and the flotilla leader Hardy were speeding under forced draught to the Havock's assistance.

Position Not Disclosed.

The British warship's exact position was not disclosed. The admiralty merely said the attack occurred near Cape San Antonio off the eastern coast of Spain, midway between Alicante and Valencia.

The 1,325-ton Havock carries a complement of 145 officers and men.

The Hardy and the Hyperion left Gibraltar late last night.

Today's mercantile sailing orders were received, special patrols were put out to round up the sailors from the cafes and bars where they were spending shore leave. Then the two warships steamed out of the bay at full speed in an easterly direction.

Torpedo Misses Steamship.

The admiralty said the unidentified submarine first attacked at the Havock which narrowly missed the vessel.

Then, unsuccessful, the Greek cargo steamship Tsepo was bombed and forced ashore, badly damaged, 30 miles north of Barcelona, by Insurgent Spanish planes. The helmsman was killed and one sailor wounded. The ship had been carrying ammunition to Government Spain and was being escorted by two government warships which driven off by the attackers.

The attack on H.M.S. Havock was one of a long series of mysterious submarine assaults in the western Mediterranean, with Spanish government steamships the principal targets. Only Monday, the Soviet freighter Timiriazev was torpedoed and sunk off the Algerian coast.

SURPRISE PARTY MARKS WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

A number of friends honored Mr. and Mrs. W. Masterson, 94 East Moira Street, at a surprise party on Saturday evening, when they gathered at their home to celebrate with them the 30th anniversary of their marriage. The evening was spent in playing progressive euchre, the winners being Mrs. Harold Donovan, ladies' first, Mrs. Jordan, second; Mr. Harry Ives, gents' first and Mr. Albert Ives, second. With an attitude of congratulation and good wishes, Mr. and Mrs. Masterson were presented with a beautiful table lamp, after which all joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows." The evening closed with a delicious lunch, and all wished Mr. and Mrs. Masterson many happy years of wedded life.

CHILD RUNS INTO SIDE OF MOTOR CAR

Four-year-old Ronald Donovan, address not known, by authorities, sustained a bruised left hand and general shock, when he ran into the side of a passing motor car that was travelling at a fast clip this afternoon. The little lad was with his mother who had just stepped from his mother's sight momentarily and started out on one of his thoroughfare, where he ran directly into the rear fender of a passing motor driven by Mr. Harry Pringle, 31 Pine Street. Fortunately the car was not fast travelling at a very fast rate of speed and upon hearing a slight bump, stopped immediately. Mrs. Donovan was immediately upon the scene, after hearing screams, it was believed the little lad was more frightened than actually injured, although a small gash was noticed on one arm. He was later taken home by his mother.

TRUCK IS STOLEN NEAR FAIRGROUNDS

While taking in the sights at the Belleville Fair on Friday night, Kenneth Reid, R. R. No. 4, Belleville, had the ill-fortune to lose his truck. The vehicle had been parked in the designated parking lanes early in the evening but was missing when Mr. Reid returned to locate his truck for home at a late hour. The truck was reported to the local police and despite thorough investigations, no reports of the recovery of the vehicle were available today.

COMPLAINT LODGED BUT SEARCH FUTILE

Stephen Salaman, 163 James Street, complained to the police last night he had been set upon and beaten by two men at the Belleville Fair. Salaman informed the authorities he was taking in the sights around the midway when two men knocked him down. When he protested relative to their actions, one of the men struck him, Mr. Salaman complained. A description of the pair was given the police by the complainant, both reported to be dark in complexion and between 21 and 30 years of age. Subsequent police investigations and searching failed to disclose the identity of the alleged pair of assailants.

THREE THOUSAND CHILDREN TROOP BACK TO SCHOOL
Fear of Paralysis Has Little Affect on Registration
MANY BEGINNERS

Belleville streets echoed to the familiar sounds of "children off to school" today as nearly three thousand children set aside the playthings of leisure hours for the implements of "reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic".

A new experience awaits the children in first years at public and collegiate schools for the new course study of the Department of Education begins with the term. For junior schools the course will be introduced up to, and including Grade Six (formerly Form Third) and will be used in the first year of the Collegiate.

Although the registration at all the schools is large, there are many absentees, the usual number will wait until after Labor Day to resume their studies. Their return will increase attendance at all schools.

At Queen Victoria School, 338 began the terms, with twenty-seven tiny beginners. Queen Ida School had an attendance of 461, thirty-three of whom undertook studies for the first time. At Queen Alexandra School over five hundred were present in the various classes. Fifty-four new comers were welcomed, only twenty-five of these being beginners, the others were transferred from other centres. One new teacher was added to the staff, Mr. Harold Mott. King George School had a total number of about three hundred and fifty, with thirty beginners.

While formal registration had not been completed at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, a large increase over last year, judging from advance numbers was noted. The first year, now known as Grade Nine, has attracted the new general course and three hundred and fifty students were registered.

At St. Michael's College three hundred and twenty-five students were present. They assembled first in St. Michael's Church where a special Mass for the children was celebrated at eight o'clock by the Pastor, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., who addressed the people who began the school year by seeking the blessing of God. The entire school then gathered in the Academy Auditorium where an address of welcome by Mr. Charles Dolan, chairman of the School Board, who spoke to the pupils on the qualities necessary for a successful scholastic career and wished the students every success in the coming year. A short address was given by Monsignor Michelon on the place education holds in their lives. Registration took place following the addresses. Fifty-two children entered school for the first time and the total number of pupils in the elementary school was 415, with 110 in the High school Department.

HARRY C. EARLE DIES SUDDENLY
Member of Harbor Commission And Prominent Insurance Broker

Sincere feelings of regret were expressed by citizens this morning when it became known that Harry C. Earle had passed away suddenly at the family residence, 224 Ann Street, early Tuesday morning, Sept. 1st. Mr. Earle was at his office yesterday, and was apparently in good health. During the night, however, he was taken suddenly ill and expired before help came.

The late Harry C. Earle was well-known in this city and district and high regard by many friends and acquaintances. He was a man of fine character and was as an aldersman during the years 1915 and 1916 and at the time of his death he was a member of the Harbor Commission. In religion he was a prominent and faithful member of Bridge Street United Church, and fraternally he was a member of Moira Lodge No. 11, A.F. & A.M. The greater part of his life was passed in the retail business and for a number of years he was a member of the dry-goods firm known as Earle & Cook in this city. Upon retiring from the firm about a few years ago he entered the fire insurance business here with Mr. William J. Hall, the firm being known as Hall & Earle. At the time of his death he was a member of the firm. For forty years he resided at Belleville and prior to that period he made his home at Shannonville, where he was born, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. George Earle.

Surviving him are his widow, who prior to her marriage was Miss Elizabeth J. Williams; one son, Mr. Charles Earle of Belleville; one brother, Mr. James Earle, Flint, Mich.; one sister, Mrs. J. P. MacParlain, Shannonville.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

August Customs Receipts Up $21,494

A decided increase in customs collecting for this district by the Belleville Port of Customs during the month of August over that for the same month one year ago is shown in returns released at the office this morning.

In August, 1937 a total of $66,-681.06 was returned to the office. During August, 1936 total collections amounted to $77,187.94.

Better business conditions are wholly responsible for the gain that has been consistent during the present year over last year, it is reported.

Bathing Ban Placed Today By City Medical Officer
Action Taken in Interests of Harbor And River to Bathing Cases Here
Health Closes Waterfront; — No Paralysis

Bathing in water along the Belleville waterfront including the bay, the harbor and in the river Moira was prohibited today by Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, in a precautionary measure owing to the amount of sickness in other parts of the Province.

The M.O.H. stated: "I do not think there should be any bathing along the waterfront, in the harbor and in the river."

Dr. Cronk said there was no evidence of the dread infantile paralysis in this city. The present order was given in the nature of a precaution.

Mr. Hope McGinnis, sanitary inspector, began the work of placing signs along the prohibited areas. This work will be continued in the morning until all the regions under the ban have been placarded.

In addition, Coloumn appears the medical officer's notice of authority closing these waters to bathing.

FIRE AND WATER CAUSE BIG LOSS TO GROCERY FIRM
Burned Out Motor Believed Cause of The Blaze

Stock loss of thousands of dollars is reported as a result from fire which broke out in the rear of the National Grocers wholesale house on Pinnacle street shortly before seven o'clock this morning. An overheated electric motor used as equipment in the cold storage room is believed the cause of the blaze.

Hampered by rolling clouds of black smoke which first attracted attention to the outbreak, and arose from ignited grease buckets, cartons of breakfast food and other burning commodities of grocery stock, firemen equipped with smoke masks, the helmet of the department, groped their way through the dark interior of the building in an effort to trace the source of the outbreak. Streams of water poured into the rear of the building waterlogging stock causing the greater loss to the firm. Chief Robert W. Fire Chief William Lynch to be about 75 per cent. Lack of ventilation in the building resulted in the damage.

Adjusters today made a hundred trip to investigate.

FAIR OFFICIALS HAD BUSY TIME CHILDREN'S DAY
Excited Youngsters Crowded Midway Most of Yesterday
1000 ATTEND

Over one thousand people wended their way through the turnstiles into the Belleville Fair grounds yesterday, the first day of the Fair. This number was counted today as paid admissions by Secretary-Manager Ross Gay. Today's attendance is expected to exceed that figure.

Two hundred seals in the grandstand were also counted as paid for during the day, a number not revealed.

Tuesday was Children's Day, with a newer and perhaps slightly better bill of fare in entertainment provided. The crowds that were there expected to be present. Authorities admitted today that there was a bit hampered yesterday due to the hundreds of children who whooped and hollered and raced from one place to another during the grandstand. Along the midway, also, excited youngsters, their droning calls extended the freedom of the midway colored, fantastically alluring 'Alley' through which the children swooped and hungry and thirsty many last minute hitches held up some of the attractions and midway but will be completely at home today.

"The morning things looked good. We're satisfied that we had expect a good crowd, maybe a record one. Secretary-Manager Gay said this watchful guardian of the turnstiles, this morning. "It will be a good day for racing, for judging, and to see that Great Ontario Boys' Band, the Canadian Grenadiers. We will see this feature".

In closing up Ontario House in London, England, Premier Hepburn had also shown little respect for lack of custom, a custom which it was also reported by the speaker had been of direct benefit to residents of not only Ontario but of the Dominion. This in spite of the fact that Canada had always been given protection under the British rule."

Previous to the chief speaker of the evening, ex-Reeve Arthur Burks, Sidney Township, also spoke briefly upon topics closely related to agricultural conditions under the present rule.

Quints to be Seen Just One Hour Daily

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP)—Daily showings of the Dionne quintuplets will be cut from three to one hour starting Sunday, Sept. 12, it was announced today. They will be seen in their nursery playground from 2 p.m. to 10 a.m. and from 2.30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Despite a falling off in attendance in the last week, there are still 10,000 more persons saw the famous children in that week than in July figures released by Dr. A. R. Dafoe today showed.

During August 138,660 persons saw the quintuplets, compared to 119,700 in July. There were also 34,562 automobiles, 93 buses and 278 trailers. In July 29,826 cars, 84 buses and 310 trailers were parked in the grounds.

Decrease in attendance in the last week was attributed to the infantile paralysis epidemic in Southern Ontario, the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition and the general reopening of schools.

Dr. Dafoe reiterated there was no infantile paralysis in Callander.

GENERAL CROZIER DIES IN LONDON

Precipitated International Controversy With His Latest Book

London, Aug. 31 (CP)—Brigadier-General Frank Percy Crozier, whose book "The Men I Killed" precipitated an international controversy last week, died today at his home at Walton-on-Thames. He was 58 years old.

A veteran of the South African and Great Wars, he made his experiences the subject of considerable writing.

The controversy over "The Men I Killed" was capped last week by a Lisbon newspaper's urging of the Portuguese government to make an official inquiry into Crozier's statement he had ordered his troops to shoot Portuguese fleeing their positions in the Great War.

The newspaper, Diario de Noticias, declared the Friday night Portugal should obtain complete reparation.

The book also related Crozier personally killed a British Subaltern fleeing from the Germans and a British soldier who had attacked a French woman.

Crozier's Explanation.

Crozier in a letter to the press explained "the main purpose of this book is to expose the humbug of those in authority, false imperialists, and church leaders and others."

A demand for a public inquiry into the charges was voiced by Sir Cleo. Edwards, former Member of Parliament for a Welsh constituency. In his book, Crozier declared: "My Welshmen took and held Bouron Wood against endless counter attacks because they understood it is better to die all in the hands of the enemy than be shot out of hand like rats by their own officers."

In a letter to War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha, Sir Charles said he believed he was writing on behalf of the Welsh nation as a whole in demanding that the government take immediate action to clear Crozier's name. He suggested a full apology from the author to the Welsh soldiers and the Welsh nation unless they were able to justify the allegations.

One of Crozier's previous works, "A Brass Hat In No Man's Land" published in 1930, also aroused the ire of sections of the army. It expressed "the brutelike bestiality which is so necessary for victory."

Crozier until recently was Inspector-General of the Lithuanian army and military advisor to the Lithuanian government.

Machine Gunned Portuguese.

The General declared it was by his orders machine-guns were turned on the Portuguese who died in disorder south of Armentiers on April 9, 1918, during a critical situation.

"Because of that," he wrote, "I ordered the shooting by machine-gun and rifle fire of many Portuguese in order to stem the flight."

General Crozier added: "Strictly from the military point of view I do not have my regrets for having killed a subaltern of the British Empire on the same morning I ordered our machine-guns and rifles to be turned on fleeing Portuguese."

Army indignation was voiced against Crozier in a protest to the war book by the General "A Brass Hat in No Man's Land" published in 1932. The book, described as "one of the most sensational developments of the year," was written in 10 days, according to the General.

In it he told of a private soldier being shot for cowardice and deserting. Private McCue, Wigan blown up by his own men, battalion commanders, "to whom the safety of the line was more than young manhood than the whitkey bottle," and other splendid men of the men and scrubbings of modern warfare.

Brutality Needed For Victory

The author's views of war were expressed in the following passages:

"The German atrocities, the employment of gas in action, the violation of Belgian women, and the 'official murder' of Nurse Cavell, all help to show the British how the bestiality which is so necessary for victory.

"The better to eradicate the cause—war itself—than to build up false hopes that it can be waged in any other way than by brute force and brutal means."

An attack on some features of the high command during the war was made by the General in another book, "Impressions and Recollections," issued in 1930.

In it he refers to the "trouble, waste, disorganization and worry individual demoralization caused by alcohol in France and at home during the war."

"Many Colonels, Majors, Captains and Subalterns in my own small knowledge, rendered themselves useless for days and sometimes in France owing to their taking the wrong strong drink," he said.

He recalled his experiences in the auxiliary Royal Irish Constabulary in a book he wrote in 1932 entitled "Ireland Forever."

In it he said: "In 1920 and 1921 the whole cabinet should have been marched to the Tower in company with the Chief and the Imperial Staff, and there shot on account of what they permitted to be done in the King's name and by authority of his uniform in Ireland."

He accused Sir Henry Wilson (later assassinated by two Irishmen) of organizing a murder gang in Dublin and asserted that the 13 British officers killed on "Bloody Sunday"—Nov. 22, 1920, were "commissioned assassins."

Band Concert

The stirring music of the Belleville Municipal Band under the baton of Lieut. Fred Johnson, which rendered a highly enjoyable program in the bandstand in the afternoon, and again in the grandstand in the evening only heightened the holiday spirit that characterized the entire gathering.

The brilliant lights of Jackson's Midway shows in the evening added a gay touch of carnival color. Myriads of electric lights gleaming from atop musical entertainment appliances, the gay colors of the dresses of the ladies and the joyous laughter of youth as it enjoyed to the full the many attractions served to bid a joyous farewell to depression and hard times. Adding to this general feeling was the beautiful band of nature exemplified in the many fine agricultural exhibits, foremost of the fairs in all its colorful glory, a gorgeous cornucopia of plenty. As it were, added to the optimistic undertone which characterized the actions of the attending public.

While agriculture in its many phases naturally was predominated, sparkling exhibits of factory and industry from the principal cities of Merchants of the city in their characteristic thoroughness for detail and the last word in modernity lived up to their enviable reputation for providing unexcelled value the best for the patrons of the Fair. The Merchants and Manufacturers Buildings were alive with color and artistry of design and a large crowd availed themselves of the opportunity to see these splendid exhibits.

The Midway

A miniature model city ablaze with electric lights, the hoarse cries of the "barkers," the laughter of the fascinated crowds attracted by they milled between the lines of entertainment, the incessant roar of the whirling mechanical entertainment appliances and the blare of machine-made music featured the Jackson Midway Shows, one of the main attractions of the Fair. Here Heralded as one of the outstanding midway attractions of the year, the midway as a whole lived up to everything claimed.

With variety as a predominating keynote, the attractions held many fascination for old and young. The majority of whom gave way to their feelings of childish delight and revival with more or less abandon. And that the variety presented there is living i nand enjoys what is generally termed an age of speed, was evidenced by the following crowd old and young, who patronizing the midway provided a practical forum of amusement. Ferris wheels achieving the height in the sky and the bliss of colored lights did a roaring business. Merry-go-rounds with their gaily caparisoned monotone mechanical music maintained a steady tempo as many young and many youngsters sought places on its whirling platforms. Loop-the-Loop a fairly new innovation along thine entertainment lines had no let-up as the thrills of the curious mounted its strange cages to enjoy a new thrill, at breakneck speed.

Easily predominating this particular form of entertainment was the newly arrived auto speedway, playing at Belleville Fair, for the first time in Canada. A thrilling beautiful streamlined miniature automobiles self-powered, and controlled in both flant reds, greens and yellows, failed to cater to the large crowd of people desiring to take in the exhilarating ability. All through the night the patronage of the miniature motors as they dashed around the circular steel, track with tiny drivers at the wheel, sounded a cacophonic background to the thrills and one notes that go to make a successful midway.

Rings games catering to that love of chance inherent in the human being did a land-office business. Hot dog concessions filled the inmost wants of the crowd while soft drink caterers were kept busy during the evening.

Baseball throwing experts tried their skill at aiming at elusive targets, while the cocoanut shies aimed at swiftly moving and stationary objects with more or less success. Swarthy gypsy fortune tellers told one's past, present and future for a trifling consideration.

"The Great Ragon" magician extraordinary drew a large crowd of the curious to his splendid show. Here one saw a beautiful girl drifting dreamily through space. Here in the "Palace of Mystery" the expert produced the finest feature of the old Hindu necromancers held his audience spellbound with his feats of mystery and magic. A new bit through a box containing the body of a living girder. Again she was apparently impaled on the sharp points of swords as she was put through the "Torture Chamber." Climaxing this show is the "Great Illusion" where a beautiful girl disappears from a real undertaker's casket.

In another tent members of the snake family in all sizes and degrees of venomousness held interest by their weird appearance. Those who like this form of amusement. Games of chance where one could win useful articles attracted a large portion of the crowd.

The Midway proved a source of thrilling entertaining amusement which stands out with its cleanliness and wholesome fun and enjoyment for young and old.

Parade of Horses

One of the outstanding features of last night's performance in front of the grandstand was the parade of a dozen beautiful horses.

Each one was ridden by a girl equipped with colorful bridles and girths decked out in the colors of the Clydesdale, Percheron, Belgian, and Hackney families, presenting a pleasing picture. Each one of colored spotlights drew the well-merited applause of the large crowd gathered in the grandstand. Sleek Percheron stallions with proudly arched necks; the soft chestnut color of the haughty Belgians; the lazy and white legs of the beautiful Clydesdale and the proud mien of the Hackneys as they lined up in front of the stand made a picture of superb horseflesh that has been developed in the province.

The type of horses and breeds also the names of their owners were announced over the loud-speaking system by W. D. Reid, vice president of the Fair. Mr. Reid announced that an exhibition of carriage horses would appear before the grandstand tonight. Owners of horses participating in the parade were Messrs. Atkinson, Pitcher, Clark, Ganaonque; William Calvert, Consecon; Ed. Wood, Wooler; Osborough; Colin Wright, Waupoos; and A. Staples, Peterborough.

Grandstand Show

One of the finest entertainments presented in Belleville Fair in recent years highlighted the audiences in the grandstand last evening, its variety, originality and high standard of performance combining to give the spectators a show of the most exacting.

Spirited music by Belleville Municipal Band was a fitting overture to the evening's fun. Under the direction of Bandmaster Lieut. Fred Jobson this talented group of musicians gave of their finest. Their music in the grandstand, and their concert at the bandstand were among the enjoyable parts of the Fair program and the prolonged applause of their listeners showed keen appreciation of this outstanding band.

The spotlight then turned on the stage, handsomely decorated to form a pleasing background for the performers. With Bill Garden as Master of Ceremonies, the show moved along briskly and without a pause. Planned to present "something for everyone" the entertainment more than fulfilled its aim, for youngsters and oldsters alike were enthusiastic over the various numbers.

Variety Keynote

Variety was certainly the keynote of the evening. There was dancing, acrobatic stunts, music, comedy and thrills to keep the audience interested every second. The ballet opened the show, and this bevy of graceful girls presented a number of lively throughout the program to show amazing versatility, grace and skill. Smartly costumed for each number the dancers presented tapping numbers, beautiful toe dancing and sprightly military numbers, their routine, original, and in perfect harmony.

Charmaine, a contortionist dancer of supple grace, brought gasps of admiration from the spectators as she accomplished with ease some of those difficult feats of this particular art. To make things even more difficult for herself she danced on a "silver thread" of wire, over two feet from the ground, she rolled a hoop, walking inside the ring by at full length on the wire and swung gently to and fro, and did all manner of stunts with the same graceful bows to her dances.

Rex Engle, a crooner with personality, was heard in several numbers, very well received. The Three Musketeers did a fine dance number and Dorothy and Edgerton presenting a novelty tap, added variety to the dancing. Music throughout the evening was provided by the C. N. C. Canadaires, who accompanied the performers.

Ellis and Wood, comedy team, provoked much laughter in their acts, the Spanish dance and the military dance being especially well liked by the audience. The young lady proved herself a singer of no mean ability as she sang "Dinner Something About a Soldier."

Animal Circus

Bible Brothers' Animal Circus was one of the finest shows of its kind seen here. They were totally different. There was the usual hoop and barrel pushing to start off with, but the black Arts were artist; another which clipped the moustaches of two ladies held facing each other so that the dog serviced its entire length to mount each step; and the finest number, a twenty-three-year-old pony which counted with its hoof and nodded answers to questions; and finally a pony which lay down on the ground to take a leap into a net, astonished an entranced audience.

The Midway was conducted by the Earls, Aristocrats of the Air, and by Revel and Joyce, the Belle Skating Stars. The former gave a balancing and tumbling act that required nerve, strength and courage, possessed in a large measure by these clever, talented artists. Revel and Jeanette proved that roller skating provides a vehicle for originality in grace as they presented dances and acrobatic numbers. In the former they took delighted youngsters for a spin that left them dizzy. The final number was a fine combination spin that drew forth great applause.

But it was left for the Carr Brothers, Bert and Harold Boyd, to practically steal the show. With an complete and surprising a bag of tricks as one could wish for, these fun-makers gave tumbling exhibitions, assisted by a few "tops" in this particular line. Finally they gave the audience a violin and guitar and "marched" with one player on top of the other's back. Bert Carr, Belleville, who had been footing about with these antics suddenly found himself in every conceivable position, sharply turned the act from comedy to one of musical skill. It was a masterly rendition of the Russian Air "Dark Eyes" on the violin and "Pagliacci" to swing into the stirring interpretation of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

AN EXCELLENT FAIR

The excellence of the Belleville Fair in every department this year is a guarantee a large and enthusiastic attendance of patrons and visitors.

The stamp of returning prosperity is on everything concerned with the fair, in the enthusiastic crowds, the keenness of rivalry for the awards in the departments, and in the general excellence.

Officials of the fair, directors, the exhibitors in agricultural, industrial and business departments all continue their appeal for the generous support of the fair as in the past.

Attendance at the local fair is a badge of local interest and patriotism. Everyone must be a local patriot and a builder as far as the exhibition is concerned.

The fair has gone far ahead. And this fair can go far yet before its maximum growth can be attained. In fact there is nothing this fair cannot achieve as long as there is the will to cooperate.

TWO MEN OF MEANS

Two men died in the United States, one seemingly wealthy and the other "Poor Mr. Hassett". Everyone recognized Andrew Mellon as the possessor of wealth of almost unlimited amount while Mr. Hassett was a fish peddler and one time ball player and lived until his death in December in a two-dollar-a-week unfinished attic as a pauper. His estate has just gone through the surrogate court in New York City and is estimated at $59,908.

Hamilton Spectator commenting on these two cases, says: "Mr. Mellon presumably got a good deal out of life, in the way of business excitement and making large charitable bequests, but what 'poor Mr. Hassett' got out of it is difficult to tell." The editor notes that Hassett busied himself selling fish in order, as it turned out, to enrich to a considerable extent the treasury department over which Mr. Mellon presided for so long.

Mellon in his will left, besides the $180,000 bequested to his old employees, what is estimated at half a billion dollars, to the Mellon Charitable Trust.

He was always a great philanthropist and made huge gifts to charity and endowments. It is remarked that at the time of his death there was a little question of income tax outstanding. Says one writer "this at apparently wiped out any legal claim the United States would otherwise have upon succession duties.

A UNITED FRONT AGAINST DISEASE

How all the forces of the country rally to fight any plague is indicated in no uncertain way in the present fight of the Provincial Health Department and the health boards of the municipalities of Ontario in the present epidemic of infantile paralysis. Everyone is in earnest sympathy with the work carried on by the heads of health bodies, with the school authorities, the doctors, and the parents and families. Persons who have had the disease, willingly give their blood for serum and Quebec Province has come to the aid of Ontario with offers of blood for serum from those who recovered from the malady in Quebec in its epidemic of some years ago.

The checking everyone thought to have come in contact with cases of the disease is one of the modern means of combatting the spread of disease, particularly of the type of poliomyelitis. The advance of medical science is one of the wonders of the modern world.

One must sympathize and cooperate with the health authorities in the effort to maintain the health of the community, recognize the great benefits which are deriving to society and individual through such cooperative effort.

THE KILT

There are some Scots who do not wear kilts. They are now to have their chance. The master of Jedburgh Grammar Schools says the kilt is coming back in Scotland.

The beautiful dress of the Scot surely is entitled to survival at more than special gatherings. It may be difficult to maintain it against the inroads of the modern dress of man which has captured the world. One has but to look at the Japanese and the Chinese warriors today to see how the convenient dress of the westerner has conquered the world. But the kilt tends to preserve that flavor which goes with the health and brawn of the Scot, the wide broad accent which seems the very development of "the brown health and shaggy wood of Scotland, And the Scot is patriot enough to preserve the kilt.

Canadians take especial delight in the kilt for following General James Wolfe who made eCanada British in the battle of the Plains of Abraham at Quebec were many Scots wearing the kilt. They fought at Waterloo and at Balaclava and many gave their lives at Loos in the Great War.

Many British statesmen have been proud to wear the kilt and His Majesty King George Sixth loses no opportunity of wearing this picturesque dress. The late King George Fifth and the late King Edward Seventh also wore the Scots dress as did former King Edward Eighth as ruler and Prince of Wales.

A "PRAYING MANTES" VISITED TORONTO, alighted on the roof of a business building and started an uproar in that city. Learned scientists viewed this formidable looking insect from various angles and revealed it as the famous "Praying Mantis"—very rare and all that. Friday a praying mantis was picked up in Belleville police court and every year as far back as the memory of the oldest inhabitant goes there have been stories in this Great Family Journal about praying mantis. So common are they in Picton that the Picton Times produced a picture of one and also the history ancient and modern of this ferocious looking insect which is harmless and in fact a beneficial parasite feeder. Of course Torontonians are more familiar with cockroaches than praying mantis but that is the price they pay for replacing the grassy places with brick and cement.

O WORLD, FAREWELL!

New York Times comments upon Hitler's latest ban, forbidding Rotary meetings in Germany, as follows:

"The German takes as naturally to the Rotary idea as the American. Any traveler who happens to strike Stuttgart, Munich, Hanoves, almost any German town, on the day red-lettered by the Rotary luncheon can see how the business leaders love to get together. No Rotarians are heartier in good fellowship. No others raise their voices so lustily in the national anthem. Not from these clubby patriots rise the pale hum and blur of America's leading contribution to song—"The Star-Spangled Banner." The Germans know the words of their hymns of praise, no matter how often the tune changes. They thoroughly enjoy the one occasion that links them with the business world outside.

"But even this innocent satisfaction is to be denied them. No more will forty-three leading citizens boast to the visitor that they are presidents of the local Rotary. Evidently the powers that be find the Rotary—yes, the Rotary!—as dangerous and subversive as the Comintern. It is international, it "spreads around the earth," it might disseminate "ideas that would not be desirable." Members of the National Socialist party, officials and soldiers are forbidden to belong to this or any similar world-wide organization.

"That means the end of the German Rotary. Does it mean that the Rotarians will go underground to discuss business and sing the Nazi songs? Will they notice any inconsistency between the complaints that Germany is isolated and this prohibition of any private contact with the outer universe? Perhaps not, but the wonder of the good fellows of the Rotary must grow as the world and its contaminations recede. How they will miss those get-together luncheons."

HE NEEDN'T WORRY

The conceited young man had been in hospital for some time, and had been extremely well looked after by the pretty nurse.

"Nurse," said the patient one morning, "I'm in love with you. I don't want to get well."

"Don't worry," replied the nurse cheerfully, "you won't. The doctor's in love with me, too, and he saw you kiss me this morning."

HE WAS ALWAYS TIRED AND ILL

Three Complaints Gave Him a Miserable Time

Suffering from three complaints —disordered kidneys, sciatica, and rheumatism, how could this man be anything else but always tired and ill? This is what he writes:—

"Up to a month or so ago, I had suffered continually from kidney disorder, sciatica, rheumatism, and generally felt off colour. I was constantly tired, and under medical supervision, tried many remedies but without effect until I gave Kruschen Salts a trial. In four weeks, Kruschen has brought about a complete transformation. I have healthy appetite and once more feel that it is good to be alive." —(G.V.)

The kidneys are the filters of the human machine. If they become sluggish, impurities find their way into the blood-stream, and the seed of half-a-dozen common ailments is sown.

The scientific combination of salts in Kruschen quickly cleans the kidneys back to healthy, normal action. Soon your ailments are relieved and life becomes a joy again.

SPLENDID EXHIBITS, GOOD SHOWS SEEN AT FAIR

Products of Home and Field Artistically Arranged in Horticultural Building

Display of Vegetables Arranged by T. W. Bamford Fine Exhibit

CORONATION SCHEME

Ladies Work Exhibit tied From as Far West as Wendstock

Carrying out the Coronation colors of red, white, blue and gold, the buildings at Belleville Fair housing such varied exhibits as ladies' work, flowers, vegetables and even fine arts, presented a handsome appearance with decorations in the patriotic theme and the wealth of colour in the display adding a note of contrast. Visitors thronged the building, especially in the evening hours, as judging in the late afternoon made it impossible for spectators to view the exhibits.

Position of Interest

Commanding a position of interest and importance the display arranged by T. W. Bamford, market gardener, was a most imposing and artistic spectacle. In keeping with the building's decorations, Mr. Bamford had made the background display in front of a castle, silhouetted with plants and vegetables, while the corners representing the turret towers were made with cardboard and were complete with long windows from which light glowed. Ivory colored busts of King George and Queen Elizabeth, draped with royal purple were surrounded by beautifully tinted foliage plants. Overpowering the exhibit was devoted to vegetables, and these in generous quantity produced assumed new beauty in their richness of colour and perfection of form. An amusing feature was the group of squash at one side, with twisted necks, which gave them the appearance of goose heads. This exhibit is easily now a special feature of the building and the originality of its design, the patience with which it was completed and the beautiful picture it makes, reflects great credit on this fair booster.

A Beautiful Harvest

Continuing one's stroll about the buildings, the display of grains, of vegetables and fruits of all kinds, with special attention paid to the variety of apples, awaked one to the full harvest in store for the people of this district.

The Flower Show is equally interesting. This has been a wonderful year for flowers, if the weather is concerned, but many blossoms have been attacked by the usual insect pests. In spite of this, however, the display and quality shown are of the finest. The gladioli, asters, marigolds, to mention only a few of the flowers, are strikingly beautiful. House plants are very well represented and practically every kind of that prime household favorite, the begonia, is seen here. Ferns, for table decoration and for funeral use are artistically arranged and received much favorable comment.

Ladies Work

One half of the building is devoted to the exhibition of ladies' work. This comprises needlework, cookery and fine arts. Those in charge point out that the needlework displayed comes from as far away as Manitoba and Saskatchewan and certainly the examples of this craft are very fine. A great deal was spent in this section by the fair, that one of the well known draftsmen, who work in this capacity five, was unable to show a single article in the hall. It will be remembered that Mrs. W. S. Osborne, Massassinge Road, had her needlework displayed for the same time ago. Last year Mrs. Osborne had about one hundred and seventy five entries.

The Ladies' Work includes handiwork for bedroom, dining room, living room as well as articles of wearing apparel. The quilts and spreads make an attractive corner, kindergarten quilt of satin cross and gold merits special attention, the amusing quilt, for a baby's crib, had the patchwork alphabet, the letters being originally illustrated. Thus the "O" is shown as a patchwork replica of a card queen, the "A" is two patchwork musical notes Knitted wear, for babies and grown-ups is in complete assortment. Fine needlework, exquisite lunch set, Italian cut work in table cloths and luncheon sets, fine-ness in very wide Swedish, darning effects are only a very few of the beautiful samples exhibited. There also reflected the growing popularity of needlecraft, while the art of rug making is still a favourite with those skilled in needlework.

Fine Arts

Turning to fine arts, the display of water colours and oil paintings is varied and interesting. China painting is well represented and all such crafts as basketry, beadwork modelling in plasticine, soap, wood carving make a fascinating collection for the visitor. The work of the school children in many of these handicrafts, samples of writing and the preparation of scrap books.

Home cookery shown at the fair revealed, the fact that the home makers of this vicinity are more than skilled in the most important art of all, the culinary art. Pies, cakes, cookies, loaves, buns, in tempting array met the longing gaze of the passersby. Samples of the home canning of fruits and vegetables made a colorful exhibit.

MERCHANTS USE PRETTY SCHEMES TO DRAW CROWD

Merchants Building Attractively Designed to Show Wares of Store

SPLENDID EXHIBITS

Demonstrating Kitchen Draws Maximum of Attention

Living up to its enviable reputation of being one of the finest exhibits of the Fair, the Merchants display in the Merchants Building yesterday held the admiring attention of thousands of interested patrons of Hastings County's great agricultural fall classic. Serving the added interest and general "up-to-date" on the part of the buying public, merchants of the city outdid the display glory of other years and with one of the finest exhibitions seen here proved that in their own particular fields they rate as second to none in the province.

Originality of design, with color predominating in various shades and effects brought out its various displays in a manner pleasing to the most fastidious eye. Discerning merchants with an eye to beauty as well as the advertising value of their exhibits arranged their wares in a manner that not only attracted the attention of all to the booths themselves but brought out the salient points of their articles in a skilfully arranged display that drew the verbal approval of all who viewed it.

Pretty Scheme of Design

Outstanding in an exhibit that fairly stands out as the finest display of the Bowra Electric Co., occupying nearly one eighth of the available space, the array of various articles of merchandise offered in a scheme of design, that was a pleasure to look at, this fine exhibit drew the admiring glances of thousands of spectators yesterday afternoon and evening. The lights shed a luminous glow down upon flower-bedecked stands, brining out the startling effect the various beautiful articles exhibited.

The whole of washing machine and refrigerators was offset by the striking tones of the drawing rooms and living room and fire stoves added a further touch. Artistically arranged in sectional lots the whole appearance of this prominent firm was brought to full bloom.

A demonstrating kitchen fully equipped with all modern devices and appliances also drew a large amount of attention, electrical dishwashers, radios, refrigerators, stoves with the whole capped by a demonstrator at work made the display completed this fine exhibit.

Another splendid exhibit was that of the Quality Wash Machine Co. The latest models in this labor-saving device were on display and were many models of vacuum cleaners. The Jerseys were displayed with the latest footwear for milady and her escort with a fine exhibit of rubber goods of every variety. Otherwise rounding out a fine display.

A fully equipped modern kitchen, complete with the latest devices in charge of Mrs. O. B. Ragsdale was a decided point of interest to a large number of ladies and gentlemen yesterday afternoon and evening. Stoves and refrigerators, the last word in up-to-the-minute cleaners featured this exhibit.

Building Supplies

Building supplies were featured in artistic display, by the Building Supply Company with products including the wooden work exhibits being supplied by Arthur Bills and the Hoagland Co. A complete set of steps for a veranda was an interesting feature of this fine exhibit.

Lovers of musical instruments, pianos, the latest models in radio found their desire in the splendid exhibit of the Belleville Piano Store. The Home Appliance and others. The latest models in every piano description were on display at the booth of the Smith Hardware.

Drawing room, bedroom and sitting room suites with main articles of other phases of the furniture industry were on exhibition at the booth of the Parrottal Bloras. Beautifully arranged this exhibit drew the attention of a large number of the fair goers. The Lazier Store Store soft drink booth catered to the thirst of the spectators.

LIVESTOCK SHOW BEST IN YEARS AT LOCAL FAIR

Cattle, Horses, Sheep And Swine Vie For Many Awards

MANY ATTRACTED

Predominance of Colts Shows Horses Are Coming Back

There is always more to a fall exhibition than a few acts before the grandstand and the crowds whirling about the half mile track at a dizzy pace and merrymakers walking up and down the midway To the agriculturist, who derives his revenue from the land, there is always the treat of walking about through the various buildings and inspecting the farm stock, whether the horses, cattle, swine, sheep and poultry breed, each one be interested in some particular line. Some farmers are breeders of the heavy draught type of horses while others prefer the agricultural type, and others the general purpose. The same can be said of cattle, where some farmers prefer the Holstein others the Ayrshire, others the Jersey, while some prefer the beefy breed such as the Aberdeen and Hereford.

Quality Very High

To a reporter from the Ontario Intelligencer a trip through various barns before the rain, blue and white tickets had been placed on some animals was a revelation of the quality of stock, that is produced in this country. All the horses were slick and fat, the cattle faultlessly groomed and all blood tested, while the sheep and swine were housed to show while pens with guardians working feverishing to prepare them for the show ring. This is part of the fall exhibition, that few really see but it is an integral part of the performance and one the work, that these men do depende largely the success of the Fair. The Belleville Fair Board had been extremely fortunate this year with an exhibition of live stock that would do credit to many fairs much older and more established than this one.

Judging Will Be Keen

The quality, however, is far above the average and the prediction is out, that the judges will have a difficult time deciding the ribbons for prizes especially in the Holstein class. In this particular class there are a number of cattle on the grounds owned by four breeders. The Edgewater Farm of Colborne, Ward County is showing 13 head topped by a sire bull, two yearling bulls, 6 cows and heifers, three cows and the remainder are heifers and calves. They are showing for the spring calves. The number exhibited far fits the prize list. The Spring Valley Farm of Mr. W. A. Graham and Sons of Campbellford, are the competitors, showing fourteen head and divided in the same category as the first mentioned herd. R. J. Booker and Son of Albury, Prince Edward County, a also showing a splendid herd as are the Brothers of Bloomfield, are showing a splendid herd. Their showing is divided the same as the two above and all a grand lot of Holsteins.

The Jersey class is also in prominence at the fair with P. M. Sidlefleur of Belleville and Hall of Bonarlaw, the largest exhibitor with twenty head. T. D. Creighton of Frankford is showing eight head. These are the only two herds of importance on the grounds and the competition will be keen in every class. The Jerseys come in for a lot of attention from spectators, the younger people as Jerseys appear to be somewhat in vogue. The average onlookers on account of their colouring. Cows Marvil and Sons of Canniffton are showing a splendid head in this class, while George W. Collins and Son of Plainfield, are showing nineteen head and Garnett Kerr of Campbellford has twelve head on exhibition. This is a large showing of Jerseys and the judges are going to be hard to place them correctly in their classes.

Beef Breeds Shown

Coming in for a good breeds M. Bailey of Uxbridge, is showing seventeen head of Aberdeens, while Arnold Mallett of Bloomfield and Cobourg, have nine head on view, R. Hanna of Ivanhoe has a good first time exhibitor at Belleville, ring nine Herefords, while J. L. Skinner of Lindsay has a large time exhibitor has eighteen head of Shorthorn breed. Jas. Bleecker and Ben Bleecker is showing nine Shorthorns and Sidney Clegg of Roseneath is showing eight head of the same breed. Besides this showing of cattle which numbers 200 head, there is the Calf Clubs of Prince Edward and Hastings and Hastings Counties, which are showing their animals, which will considerably increase this total.

Large Number of Colts

Turning towards the horse barns one is met with the large number of colts running around the stalls. Apparently the horse is coming back as a necessity on the farm and the majority of farmers enjoy a good horse with the result, there is a large number on display. The heavy draught of horses are the predominate class, but there are a number of light draught, general purpose and agriculture type on exhibition. The carriage type is the most spectacular, while the Hackneys on view step off at a lively pace with arched neck and high forward action. The roadster type appeals to the average lover of horses probably more than any other type and there are a number on the grounds ready for the ring. The breeding industry is not forgotten with Belgian, Clydesdale, Percheron stallions in quantity.

There are more than seventy-five sheep on the grounds and fifty head of various breeds and many interested spectators visited the pens at the upper end of the grounds all day Tuesday to see the animals at first hand. J. H. Locke of Zephyr, James Gathuit of Belleville, Alfred Ayre of Hamilton and Everett Hicks of Pension Falls are exhibiting both sheep and swine. This is only a brief resume of the things that can be seen and a better insight into the farming life of this district obtained. The cattle are all groomed, the horses have their most shiny coat and the sheep and swine are prepared for the show ring and a visit to any of the barns on the grounds will not be time wasted. It will be an education.

POULTRY EXHIBIT IS WELL-HOUSED

Entry List Not as Heavy as Formerly But Quality Much Better

Although this year's quantity of exhibits in the poultry building at Belleville fair is not nearly as large as in some former years, the quality of the birdsmen that are showing ever displayed in Belleville. In every conceivable line of farm poultry the grades displayed on exhibition for 1937 at the Belleville Fair are all in the prize list category and worthy of interest and note.

Gayly decorated with palms the poultry building at the fair this year presents a most delightful eye of the patron from the time entrance until the last fowl has been accurately examined by the fair-goer. More of interest to the poultry fancier is the stately show birds from the farm. Every conceivable breed is well filled, however, but the fine display on exhibition gives the visitor interest of all to enter the portals of the fair.

Regardless as to which entrance is taken the fine plumage of the litter of farm and fancy poultry building at the Belleville Fair is fully. The stately Rhode Island Reds and plumed Orpingtons, to say nothing of the Sussex whites and Plymouth Rocks are pleasing to observe as they stalk staunchly in their pens, while the Plymouth Rocks and giant Wyandottes, both barred and whites, also command the interest of the onlooker.

Then there are the Game birds and the conventional snow-white Leghorns that are always of interest to all poultry lovers, while attractively And with decorating plumage are the Old English Cochins and Bright Bantams, always in the community. The huge Polish Rocks are in numbers while the Plymouth Rocks and Buffs are plentiful and pleasing to the eye.

There is a marked absence of ducks, as well as guinea pigs and rabbits, but their absence is more than made up for by the fine exhibits of ducks, geese and turkeys this year. Of these, however, in more specially noted the increased number of mammoth geese ranging in various colors, while the Toulouse (Grey) class display than in former years.

The poultry building at the Belleville Fair is surely a gala display of handsome fowls and is one of the features of the entire exhibition.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

London, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP)—

"Parental neglect" was responsible for loss of 2,564 1-3 school days by London pupils last year. However, the situation is not quite as bad as it seems. The neglect was neglect of duty, not neglect of children, it seems, such as sleeping in and failing to call Johnny or going downtown and letting Mary stay home.

London, Sept. 1 (CP)—Talk about your colorful dress.

"Last night I dreamed I holed out in one," said Walter Gatward of Galt, Ontario. He walked to the first tee at the Bush Hill golf course.

"Which hole?" asked the caddie.

"The 12th," said Gatward.

Two hours later his dream came true.

Gatward's celebrations at the club bar were abruptly stopped when another golfer came in looking and ordered drinks all round.

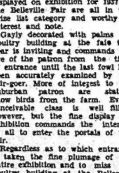
"I have just holed out in one," explained the latecomer.

"Which hole?" asked Gatward.

"The 12th," said Smith.

The distance is 112 yards.

New York, Sept. 1 (AP)—A "tailless" kitten today is the proud possession of Greenwich Village's oldest harbor shop, owned by August Schellenger.



The man whose name sounds like someone pleading a hand is closing up after a 50-year career on the Village's longhaired genius.

"So soon as it's let Ti reline," he said, looking at a row of old-time gilded shaving mugs hanging one wall. Why? The many barber schools—and too many young barbers".

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 1 (AP)—A couple entered the emergency hospital with a barking dog.

"He barks all the time and we can't sleep," they explained to a physician. "We want you to give him a sleeping powder."

The physician couldn't see it as an emergency and the couple left with the dog—still barking.

Margaret Lindsay and Pat O'Brien featured in "Slim" coming to the Belle Theatre Thursday.

PIONEER GIVES WORLD TYPING CHAMPION A LESSON

George Hossfield, who established a new official World's speed typing record at the International Contest conducted by the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, August 28th, timed by J. J. Saltz, Honorary President of Underwood Elliott Fisher Limited, who, despite his 75 years, can type a real fast minute test.

Birds Assembled in Aviary From Many Parts of Globe

R. A. Wainman of Millbrook Exhibits Portion of Collection at Belleville Fair in Interest of Bird Life

Five years ago a retiring, unassuming lawyer, R. A. Wainman of Millbrook, Ontario, had vague visions of a hobby in off-time hours, just a little different from that inspired by other men. Today he has been in other varieties of pheasants, all from various countries; a family of Japanese pheasants from Japan; pens of Japanese "Silkies and Frizwild, he specializes in gold and silver purple. Rare and foreign pigeons and other small birds from Australia, Africa, Asia and retiring and timid doves are varieties from Jerusalem, India, England, Australia.

Blue Macaw Talks

"Poll", the huge blue Macaw that stands 3 feet 6 inches from its egress as to her owner, but it is to him she confides her troubles for the most part and repeats the common words in English. Moll, with great yellow beak and bright red cheek pouch pits with her hard, sharp claw and rubbed the fingers of a man one time who teased her to exasperation. Smaller parakeets and love birds keep her company.

It is among the geese that the owner finds most pride in showing. Never exhibited before in Canada on this visit—there are a small flock of Egyptian Geese, savage and wild, and imported from that country through local custom on Tuesday of this week. They will attack a man on sight, it is claimed.

There are Arctic Blue geese and white Canada and black East Indias and Cuban wood ducks and Australian Mandarins and the common bills "scooter" ducks that most closely resemble Canada's own little divers.

English Quail

In other cages, shy and retiring and prone to scuttle behind a friendly shrub, are some of their pets are several little quail of Old England. In companion cages are Bobwhite, White Plymouth and Chinese Formosa and a Reeve of China with a five or six foot tail.

Mr. Wainman may show his several birds at three other places in Canada, leaving here. Possibly the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto; possibly Kingston and next year and the Montreal Winter Fair later.

He values his collection of showing beauty of feathered lines and plumage, not only exhibit at the Belleville Fair at over $3,000. "But it's a hobby he loves".

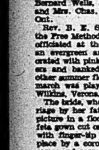
Weddings

WELLS—SIGSWORTH

At high noon on Saturday, August 28, 1937, the home of Mr. Dexter Sigsworth and the late Mrs. Sigsworth of Harrowsmith, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when their elder daughter, Phyllis Lorena, became the bride of Mr. Ritchie Bernard Wells, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Wells of Marmora, Ont.



Rev. B. E. Stevenson, pastor of the Free Methodist Church, Verona, officiated at the ceremony under an evergreen arch, tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers and banked with bluebell and other summer flowers. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Ed. Williams, Verona, aunt of the bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked very pretty in a floor length white taffeta gown on long graceful lines with finger-tip length veil held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms, and carrying a Dutch period bouquet. She was attended by her sister, Miss Ruth Sigsworth, wearing a white, floral chiffon frock and carrying an old-fashioned nosegay. The flower girls, small nieces of the groom, Eleanor Wells, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lamont Wells of Stirling, and Helen Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Robinson of Madoc, were attired in pink and white and carried nosegays of summer flowers.

The bride's aunt, Mrs. A. H. Scouten of Wilton, who received the guests, wore an ensemble of pink chiffon and corsage of cream roses and sweet peas. The groom's mother of the groom was attired in navy blue crepe with a corsage of white dahlia and fern.

Mr. Orval Wells of Marmora, was his brother's groomsman.

Following the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served to about sixty of the immediate relatives in the spacious dining room which was decorated in pink and white. After lunch the happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a honeymoon trip through the New England States. For travelling the bride wore navy crepe with navy and white accessories. On their return they will reside near Marmora, where the groom is engaged in a prosperous lumbering business.

The Last Horse

By HAL G. VERNESS

McGraw Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

Harry the Pinhead spills his sweet soul while we are all a little rare. Week just this side of the Rio Grande where we are finding the greenbacks very scarce indeed. That Harry suggests is that we run a lottery just like the big one that supplied fund on the Dust Sweeps.

"What," says Harry "we will fix it so that's put up a prize of 10,000 bucks for the horse what comes in last. Instead of a society on the side what comes in first, this one will give a prize on the nag what comes in last!"

"That is positively perfect!" agrees Dancer Bertie. "We will sell 50,000 tickets at two bucks apiece which amounts to one hundred grand. Fifty per cent for prizes, 20 per cent for charity, and we will collect twenty-five grand counsel for our trouble."

"That is it," says Harry. "We will put up a prize of 10,000 bucks for the horse what comes in last and divide up the forty grand left into a lot of smaller prizes for the winning ticket holders."

It looks so good that even Mudder Nickford, who always objected to other people's ideas, cannot find nothing to say. And it adds up okay to me.

We select a maiden event a mile and a half which nobody has a hope what hide will win. We print up the tickets and long before the last we have sold them all. Everybody buys because all Americans, and especially those steer punchers in the West, like to take a chance.

On racing day the Hills oval is mobbed with the guys what have bought tickets on our Last Horse Sweeps; and they is all much excited because nobody knows what hide will come in last. The two-year-olds what never won a race are lined up at the barrier; the bell bangs and they are off to a beautiful start.

The field goes pounding by in the clubhouse turn and runs for the back stretch. But then they do something which is very strange indeed. The pack is still pounding but so fast. No nag can reach the last turn the ponies act they are out of breath. Coming down the home stretch they settle down to a walk and fifty yards from the wire all the nags stop and lay down!

Finally we started the pool. the boys and me are sitting in the judge's stand and when this peculiar thing happens we get very specific specifics. But then Harry gets in a spiel.

"The purse for the hide what wins this race," he says thoughtful like, "is only 1,000 bucks while we are giving ten times that as a prize for the pony what comes in last. Therefore, none of the home owners may bet on the hide what wins first."

The crowd is laughing themselves sick at first but after an hour goes by and we still cannot get the horses to move, it looks like we'll had a riot.

Then Harry gets another idea and calls up the owner of one of the ponies in the race. "We will contribute 10,000 bucks out of our share of this pool," he offers. "If you will have your home finish first race. So you will get as much as the other owners and the home grand which is the purse money."

To this the owner agrees. So then Harry instructs the jock and the boy gets on the horse and hides him across the finish line. But the race is not yet over for there is still no pony what has come in first; they are only interested in the lottery tickets they already have. Finally one pony hide that ambles home last. So then Harry announces that because the other nine ponies are still laying down on the job of the home stretch he is not caring nohow about nothing.

"Well," says one of the judges, "I guess that is the end of it

Chief Lynch Receives Coronation Medal

Fire Chief William Lynch of the local department, is the recipient of the latest recipients of the city and district who have been honored by the King through presentation of a Coronation Medal. The arrival of the Medal in his possession accompanied a letter dated "From Buckingham Palace", in which "By Command of His Majesty, the King, the accompanying Medal is forwarded to William Lynch, Esq., to be worn in commemoration of Their Majesties Coronation, the 12th of May, 1937."

Fire Chief Lynch has had lengthy service with the old Argyle Light Infantry and the city fire department, and in the year 1928 rescued a small girl from a fire at which it had tumbled into the deep water from the lower revetment wall.

Weary Traveller Dislikes Reporters

A lanky gentleman from Enrope drawled in a slow Alsatian accent, clad in costume of smock closely resembling a Russian design, and striped dark trousers tucked in the chaps at the entrance to Victoria Park Police Station, trimmed with fur and a paper bag and reflecting on the surroundings in general.

"Newspaper men are tramps," he orated at length, glancing at the reporter who had come to the hand and expectant look on face.

Two squalid, dirty mops prawled-ed, hitched to a small two wheeled cart, which bore about a ton of a mile of travel growled chestily in deep harmony with sentiments of their master.

"No story to give," declared the visitor to the city in hoarse accents. "Newspapers no good. They get you 'in a hole.'"

The husky dogs, depended upon to get their well laden little cart over every hill, growled at the road, moved closer, crouching at their owner's feet.

An itinerant acrobat, the stranger explained, who performs his gymglan by birth. Since 1918 on his trip around the world, he has been on the road for 19 years. He has been ordered from time to time with spare parts and Haywire. Today he halted in the city for a time looking for, and obtaining the presence of No. 1 Station. "small fairs" where he might be able to hire as an acrobatic artist.

His wanderings, though they have been many, are not aimless. He is apt to take one road as another. "They're all the same," he confessed to the interested firemen with whom he picked up casual friendship.

Possessed of unusual physique, the stranger has the facility of being able to lengthen his arms almost twice the length of the average man's. His contortionist acts, a few of which he displayed were declared to be very difficult for the more normal person.

NEWS and VIEWS by G. M. JAMES

I am writing these lines Friday evening after attending the formal opening this afternoon of Canada's National Exhibition for 1937.

As you approach the beautiful grounds you are confronted with a hundred arcos with several scores of massive buildings, you see the walls and sides like ramparts of the eastern or western entrance according to the direction you come. Then you see flags, various colored streamers and a tumbled mass of tops of buildings, tents, light standards, and the highest amusement devices such as roller coasting and the Ferris wheel. Within the grounds everyone is busy and running to and fro. There are lawns, flowers, buildings, tents and booths attractively decorated everywhere you go apparently without end. Amid such surroundings you become happy too and enter into the spirit of everything, even to the favorite of all fairs, the Merry-go-rounds. You need never be hungry or thirsty as plenty of good things are available for every part of the immense grounds.

The entire guides and ushers are everywhere to guide and direct you. These young men are beautifully costumed in light blue tunics and pants trimmed with scarlet braiding and gold. Throughout the grounds band after band is playing, one band after another, and every band is given just like Old London's bobbies but not for the same reason. In London the white bands are necessary in order to be seen as they are waved in a fog. In Toronto no doubt they are required for the same purpose only their hands, because Toronto is proud even if it is careless.

FORMAL OPENING

The formal opening took place on the great open lawn in front of the band stand. The audience of about two thousand were seated on logo park benches, but in front was an open grassy sun; the band was almost beyond human endurance and only a half dozen umbrellas were up. Paper boys did a rushing business selling their afternoon editions not to be recorded for many years. Happily there was no wind to disturb the band stand were in the shade, but they must have been miserable watching so many of us in the burning sun.

UNITED STATES NAVY BAND

By the special permission of the President of the United States, the United States Navy Band is present at the Canadian National Exhibition. Nearly everyone has heard their excellent programs over the radio from time to time from Washington. About one hundred of these musicians, all handsome young men, are here for the season. Their band (a real band properly called band shell) half an hour before the speakers arrived. They were well received but were given a great hand when they were announced with "THE MAPLE LEAF" followed immediately by "O CANada." Every gentle had won our hearts completely, and our hearts always will be left hanging outside the door of admission. Then followed various well known selections from Wagner and others. The light and fantastic alternated the serious compositions.

More than once in recent years I have pointed out that two lovely sisters of the same mind in Canada and so-called America are becoming reconciled to each other, and that within twenty years, perhaps less, that unnatural disunion, unknown elsewhere in history, will end in deep affection and their very well-being. The Navy Band appearing here to-day gave Canada one of the finest gestures of good-will and friendship that it is possible to imagine. Canadians and Americans are coming and going, to and fro all the time now, more and more every year, and they are learning to like each other immensely. It is just as possible to turn the Canadian Niagara into gas as to stop the friendship between the growing and growing between these independent, sister nations. Canadians must work together, and together they are coming in spite of anything to protect it.

THE GUEST SPEAKER

At the appointed time a speaker was moved through the centre aisle to the platform of the band shell. It was headed by a company of infantry in marching order with fixed bayonets glittering in the bright sunlight. Then came Colonel Chidi Rowell accompanied by many distinguished gentlemen, most of whom wore gray or black top hats.

In his opening speech the Chief Justice enumerated all the virtues and ideals of The Toronto Exhibition, Canada, the Empire and the United States. Many of these have been said or read before, but they were well worth repeating to a swelling, simmering audience who were aglow when he concluded by saying, "I now open this Exhibition of 1937" and a salute of guns from the battleship Nelson and the forts on the lake. Then over the calm waters of the lake was shattered and shivered by loud and terrific explosions of aerial bombs. Then the sky was filled with daylight fireworks I ever heard, and nothing could be said or done until it was over. The Fair was open and people began to move in various directions to see the exhibits.

FOOD PRODUCTS BUILDING

I decided then to go through the most popular building on the grounds, the Food Products Building. Its popularity was manifestable in the displayed and where visitors are given samples to drink and eat. There are several thousand booths in this building all on one floor, and many of them they are separated by passages as wide almost as some streets. In the first booth you may find cans of mustard of all sizes arranged in a beautiful design, another booth with cans of tomatoes, another with jellies arranged with blue smile and welcome you, but without any mustard plasters or cures.

As you go from booth to booth you will find infinite arrangements with correspondingly infinite schemes. The design, color schemes and artistic effects are a delightful education, and the ingenuity displayed in some cases one in homes, offices and stores.

I feel that I must return once more booth. It was in the form of a circle and was planned to advertise a certain well known make of coffee. Every part of the booth was a delightful creamy color, the costumes of about a dozen girls (pretty too) were the same color, trimmed with dark brown; about the shade of your coffee after the cream has been added. If I had just described it as a strange color you would be entirely unconscious, but the graceful movements of the girls as they poured and served the coffee and cake made it a perfect picture, and I expect to go back for more coffee.

Now you can imagine what you would see when biscuits, jellies, candies, cakes, canned goods of all kinds, meats and every other foods are displayed with skill and art. No wonder these exhibits are so popular.

With all this you must understand that as you pass a booth, pretty girls hold out samples they have to sell and implore you to buy at bargain prices "just to try it." Sometimes the blandishments and a prize is given by the manager of each booth to the one who sells the most during the entire Exhibition period. This causes keen rivalry and a lot of loud exhortation. No one ever went through this building and felt depressed afterwards and the exhibits will require ear trumpets.

A RAGGED LAD

One incident made me laugh and cry at the same time. The Food Products Building is a paradise for poor lads who never have enough to eat and who never taste a delicacy. You will always find some of them going from booth to booth day after day with a shopping paper bag to carry anything that is handed to them. One very small lad, very dirty, ragged lad passed me on his rounds. A larger, more fortunate boy near by noticed that the pants were badly torn and that certain parts were protruding. In a merciless, gleeful manner he stepped up to the distressed lad and spoke so that many could hear, "I say your honor, your pa's been up to the police court again, hasn't he?"

"I know; it was getting under the fence. Anyway shut up and wipe your eye and don't be a blubber. Here's a piece of cake and a cup of tea." Some words came to me then that made me very, very serious. These are they and I have up the set of great inhabitants and now occupy the seats of the mighty. Soon we must hand these words down to others and they are worthy of much honor.

Before we leave the Food Building I must tell you about the most beautiful display of all. It was labelled "Los Angeles County" and consisted of the fruits and vegetables grown in Southern California, most of which we saw in field or garden last year. The exhibit included almost every fruit and vegetable that you know, all wonderfully grouped and arranged with a small fountain spraying flowers in the centre. The peaches attracted special attention for their size (about twice the size of the Canadian) and for their superb color. I will write about grapes later. I intend to write a little more about the Food Products soon again.

Everybody loves the several little trains, gasolene engine and two open trailers, that carry passengers between the east and west gates, stopping anywhere between, at ten cents for return ticket. Admits and children patronize these trains, and see a lot of the grounds without walking.

FROM LONDON'S CORONATION

About a hundred tall red poles, surmounted by a large crown and lion, and flying from each a Union Jack, have been brought from London's Coronation and placed along the street inside the east entrance to the Exhibition grounds. They were used as part of the street decorations in London and are very beautiful.

THE MIDWAY

Just a few words about the famous Midway where you see wonders from all over the world. The Midway will be thrilled with Tom Mix's circus, one of the best features of the Exhibition. I visited Tom Mix's beautiful home in Hollywood, California, last year. He had just returned from a broken leg caused by the kick of one of his horses, and had gone to John his circus troupe before touring the states and Canada.

There is an 18-foot-long octopus in a large tank of water and a diver fully equipped goes down to stir him up and make him earn his keep.

Bridge, the darkest, blackest man I have ever seen, is also in Shanghai.

There is an Ojibway Indian Village from Algoma, a group of Eskimos from Alaska, and a large troup (about twenty) from the Southern Pacific.

There are lions, snakes and the largest trained apes in existence. More news about the Midway later.

A CIGARETTE AND COFFEE

Many of Toronto's shop girls still breakfast on a cigarette and a cup of coffee, and they appear to be living on them. They are pale, thin and peaky, and does not reveal acceptable streamlines. It is reported that they are eating tobacco grown in Ontario, and that this fact explains the good showing. Many of these girls do not wear stockings, and their legs have become so tanned that you can hardly distinguish the difference.

Best wishes to all.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

Pat O'Brien and Frenda Star in New Thriller

A class of American workers whose trade has never before been touched by the movies . . . their adventurous and hardly lads who sting electrical power wires across the remote spots where the loot, depicted for your entertainment in the Warner Bros. melodrama, "Slim", which is scheduled for appearance at the Belle Theatre today, commencing Thursday with matinees daily.

The popular Henry Fonda, borrowed from another studio for this one picture, carries the title role of "Slim", a young lad who, fascinated by the work of a wire-stringer who is pictured by Pat O'Brien, becomes one of them, with the aid of "Red", a lovely girl and gallant wire-stringer who is portrayed by Frenda Tierney.

They are both in love with each other a while . . . with "Cally", a young man who is none too sure that he loves Margaret Lindsay. But there's no enmity between them; they're great pals and comrades, each willing to offer his life to save the other's . . . and that's what it comes to in the end.

"Slim" was made from a best-selling novel by William Rankin Haines. It has what are best described as breath-taking moments, with the high tension gang building towers 100 feet high, scrambling up and down these towers like sons of the across them, sometimes in the face of blizzard and darkness. It's an easy life, apparently, that these linemen lead. They're always on the move—down in town, and in the state.

One of the gals of the two boys is Stuart Erwin, who never fails to make a hit. Then, best of all the gang is Farrell Macdonald who in this picture turned in his one best dramatic performance to date, Catherine Hughes, Edgar Bergen and other supporting players as Joe Sawyer, Joseph Wyman, Ann Lilel and Craig Reynolds.

The authenticity of the picture as a story of linemen's activities is vouched for by the producers, who used in it several crews of experts in that line who were loaned by the contractors who are erecting the transmission wires connecting the famed Boulder Dam and the city of Los Angeles.

"Slim" had excellent notices after its early previews.

"Hollywood Screen Test" . . . Step behind the Hollywood scenes. Learn how a girl gets a screen test; the beauty secrets that help her . . . the tricks of acting and talent. See how producers pick tomorrow's stars. Discover for yourself how singing and action are match on film. Witness a picture in the making. You will see all these interesting highlights, and more in the new Paramount picture "Hollywood Screen Test" announced for the Belle Theatre screen today. The same program features Catherine Hughes, Edgar Bergen and Virginia Weidler in Ralph Murphy's "Double Talk" will be presented on the same program.

Jean Harlow Leaving

Jean Harlow, Clark Gable, and Lionel Barrymore, are appearing at the Belle tonight only in "Saratoga", M.-G.-M.'s fast moving romance of hearts and horse racing. An up to the minute newsreel, Robert Benchley comedy and "Technique South Africa" a beautiful Filmpictch travel short in Technicolor precede the feature offering.

Shannonville Barn Destroyed by Fire

Shannonville, Sept 1—(Special)—Fire of unknown origin completely destroyed a fine barn and a horse by ben house owned by Mr. Louis Reid at Shannonville early on Wednesday morning. Sept. 1st. Mr. Reid had got his horses in barn about ten minutes before the fire broke out and at that time no evidence of smoke was discernible. When he reached a nearby field he saw smoke issuing from the barn. Three loads of hay were in the barn. The hay was stacked in the field for some time before being placed in the barn recently. No livestock was in the barn and no implements scraped from the ben house.

Partly covered by insurance.

"King of Gamblers" and "Slim" Are Belle Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"King of Gamblers" and "Slim" are Belle attractions.

"Tiffany Thayer, one of America's foremost writers of thrills, romance and rackets," comes through with another winner in "King of Gamblers", a Dashiell Tyeror, who does not love him. She does not know that he is one of the city's underworld, and when she falls in love with Lloyd Nolan, a newspaperman who is on the case, she learns the truth.

The cast of "King of Gamblers" also includes Lanny Ross, Marsha Hunt, Helen Burgess and other featured players.

P. G. Wodehouse's "Step Lively Jeeves"

"Charming complexities, the gumshoes!" was Jeeves' amiable comment, but it seems they sometimes get on the nerves of Jeeves, by Jeepers, who gets tough.

P. G. Wodehouse's lovable "gentleman's gentleman" tear loose to their best to mend the mixed-up manners in Twentieth Century-Fox's rollicking comedy "Step Lively, Jeeves!" known as hit No. 2 on the same programme, with the other a newsreel and Technicolor number in the title role. Patricia Ellis and Robert Kent are featured in the romantic leads.

In a spooling mood, director Alfred Santell has provided fun and excitement no end in a story that really is the film, for the Alan Dinehart and George Givot are teamed, as a pair of Wodehouse swindler hoping to wrest an illicit livelihood from Jeeves' employer's lovely wife of a retired gang-leader, by passing off Jeeves, their confederate, as a genuine earl and long-missing heir to a tremendous fortune.

Based on Wodehouse's "Jeeves", adapted for the screen by Frank Fenton and Lynn Root, Jeeves precisely plunges the gentle, reserved Jeeves and utterly, utterly proper Jeeves into the midst of mixed shooting gangsters and assorted varieties of underworld characters, highlighted by his proper interest in the romantic problems of his lady employer's sister, Patricia and Robert, and his strict adherence to the rules of his profession.

The inimitable Jeeves wit, made famous in the original character creation by Wodehouse, steps with calm efficiency into the midst of the maddest confusion to smooth things out in imperturbable Jeeves style.

Fears for Safety of China Mission

Mrs. Alan Sherman of Brockville received a cablegram Sept. 1st. sharing with many others the anxiety they feel for the safety of their relatives situated in the war zones of China around Shanghai, Nanking and Hankow. Mrs. Sherman's brother, Dr. John C. Ferguson, has been for some years a medical foreign advisor to the Chinese government. He built the Nanking University and was also a consultant in medicine in the world on Chinese art and literature. He was acquainted with A. R. Carman, editor of the Christian Herald. On Mr. Carman visiting China, he came home to write an article on "The man who has the ear of the rulers of China, as Dr. Ferguson is known." Many of his family are in China, and are important positions. Dr. Ferguson is a graduate of Albert College.

REAL SENSATION

Cubs Regain Top Place in National Loop on Tuesday

(By Bill Bond, Associated Press Sports Writer).

Bill Terry long since discovered that when his Baldwin clubs is the thick of the pennant scramble, it can look for little or no assistance from its neighbors on the far side of Brooklyn Bridge.

Three years ago Terry was handed the bitterest proof of that credo. That was the year when, in the last few games of the season with the Giants and Cardinals in a "he's up—he's down" scrap for the hunting, the Dodgers invaded the Polo grounds and won the undying gratitude of their constituents by easing the Giants out and the Cardinals in.

Now he's had a fresh example. His own outfit, of course, dropped an 8-1 verdict in the 16-lth Cardinals yesterday. But even that wouldn't have wiped out their two-point first place margin if the Dodgers could have hog-tied the Cubs.

The Dodgers, however, lost the ball game, 4-3, with the result both series were resumed today with the standings revised thus:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Chicago	73	47	.608
New York	71	47	.602

Brooklyn had quite an afternoon. Session being thrown for a loss by Terry Carleton's eight-hit pitching, they lost Woody English at least temporarily with a sprained ankle and lost first baseman Buddy Hassett, one of the team's few consistent hitters, on a new play called "the manager's bounce."

As put on by Burleigh Grimes, it consists of storming onto the field when the ump's phone call means an error and yanking him out of the game.

While the Cubs and Giants continue to go up and down on their personal see-saw, the rest of the American League has turned over the job of keeping its own doings interesting to Rudy York, the backstopping sensation of the Tigers.

It couldn't, obviously, have been given to anyone better. Here's the latest fireworks display set off in the chagrined faces of the Senators, certainly of two homers and two singles that accounted for seven runs against the Chicagoans' sufficiency to wallop Washington 13-3.

Betters Ruth's Mark

York thereby not only put himself right behind DiMaggio, Foxx and Gehrig in the home run race at 30, but also bettered by one Babe Ruth's record of 17 homers hit in one month. The Bam got that high one for the month record on September, 1927.

Meanwhile several neat pitching performances were written on the records. Monte Pearson, Cleveland's hurler that stopped the Reds 7-2, and Bud Walters, who's a 3-0 five-hit shutout of Philadelphia, headed the list.

Bump Hadley, aided by Gehrig's four-bagger with the bases full, put the Indians on the Yankees, 7-3; the White Sox edged out the Red Sox 7-6, and the Browns and Philadelphia A's battled to a 5-5 duck winning the first 2-1, the A's the slightsay by 7-3.

NEW RACING CAR WEIGHS SEVEN TONS

New York, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Something new in race car engineering and there have been a lot of novel touches since Barney Oldfield's day, is on its way across the ocean to help Captain George Eyston joust with Sir Malcolm Campbell's world record of 301.1292 miles per hour.

Captain Eyston arrived in New York yesterday en route to Bonneville, Utah. There he will take a crack at the Campbell record in his new machine, a monster vehicle weighing seven tons, two more than Campbell's Bluebird, and developing 2,250 horsepower.

The structure is the monster's outstanding feature. The two Rolls-Royce engines which develop the horsepower are in back of Eyston who sits out in front surrounded by machinery, with two clutches and four front wheels to keep his hands and mind busy.

The four wheels, a departure from accepted construction, are placed tandem fashion attached to separate axles. There are also four rear wheels set side by side. In addition to the regular breaking the monster has wind brakes.

TORONTO LEAFS LOSE 10 IN ROW

Hugh Poland's Blow in Eighth Scored Tsein and Winning Run

(By The Associated Press)

According to the envious hurlers of the Toronto International League Club, the Newark pitchers "should pay to get in the ball park", which is a left-handed tribute to the tremendous hitting power the 1937 champions carry.

The Bears' pitchers can on occasion show they have the stuff to pitch under any conditions, as the second game, of Newark's double bill with Syracuse Chiefs last night was one of these occasions and Martin Ugo Rosso was the hurler.

Rosso turned in a three-hitter to give the Bears a 1-0 victory, their 100th, over the brilliant but erratic Johnny Vandermeer after the Chiefs had beat out a 5-3 decision with their war clubs in the opener. Rosso struck out five to lead Vandermeer in his specialty by two whiffs. Two of the three hits were to the Bears' infield.

Babe Dahlgren's triple and Charlie Keller's single won the second game. The Chiefs scored eight of their runs in the opener in the seventh on six hits and four Newark errors.

Buffalo Bisons gained a half game on Baltimore in their fight for fourth place and a shot at the playoffs by shading Montreal Royals 4-3. The hero scored three times in the seventh to take the game and reduce the Orioles' lead to two games. Truett Sewell of the Bisons wasn't around at the finish but he won his 17th game of the season, while the herd combed Crip Polli and Jim Feldman for fourteen hits.

Toronto Maple Leafs lost their tenth straight game when they bowed to Rochester Red Wings 3-2. The Wings bumped Joe Mulligan for three runs in the eighth on four straight singles. Catcher Hugh Poland's blow, the last of the four, did the fading and winning runs in.

The Baltimore-Jersey city game at Baltimore was postponed because of rain.

FRANK PRICHARD, BUFFALO, WINNER OF MARATHON SWIM

Toronto, Sept. 1.—(CP)—King of the storm-racked swimming pool, Frank Pritchard went home to his Buffalo job today after a busman's holiday that netted him $1,500. The swarthy lifeguard yesterday won the Canadian National Exhibition's 10-mile marathon swim, held this year over a 10-mile lakefront course in water, which approached bath-tub temperature.

Gone was the glamor of the event's early years, when nearly 100,000 Exhibition visitors watched the start as the swimmers carved through freezing Lake Ontario for the $2,500 prize. Then only the hardiest of the grease-coated entrants went the route—this time no more than 10,000 watched at a time, the water was the warmest of the summer and a good many of those who took the plunge did not bother to put on an outer coating of grease.

Under such sultry conditions, Pritchard provided most of the day's features. He went to the front in the fifth mile, then plodded along undisturbed to finish in 4:19:28, more than six minutes faster than Bill Nolan of Chelsea, Mass., in second place and the early leader.

Bill Nolan Second

Nolan, who finished sixth in 1936, and young Ben Gasell of Toronto, in fourth place, provided the rest of the excitement the Chelsea stylist set a torrid pace at the start then kept up a minimum stroking effort of 60 a minute all the way. Gasell, making his first professional plunge, battled with Gianni Gambi of Italy and with Pritchard over the early stages, then fell back but came in strongly.

Gambi, another fast-stroking veteran, finished third.

The first ten finishers and their rewards were: Frank Pritchard, $1,500; Bill Nolan, $750; Gianni Gambi, $350; Ben Gasell, $200; Stan Pichard, Buffalo, $150; Renato Sacripapa, Italy, $100; Ed Faulkner, Kansas City, $75; Bill Sadik, Corona, N. Y., $50; Howard Norton, Dundas, Ont., $50; Nick Ostapyk, Ottawa, $50.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

It begins to look as though Max Schmeling, the heavy "walk" champion of the art of fisticuffs, may never again get a shot at the world's title. Promoter Mike Jacobs says he is so impressed with the showings of Tommy Farr the Tonypandy Terror, who surprised the world with his marvelous showing against Joe Louis on Monday night and with Bob Pastor for riding a bicycle around Louis for ten rounds, that he may give either one another shot at the Brown Bomber, forgetting of course, that Schmeling is the only fighter who ever beat Louis in his 27 professional ring appearances and that via the K. O. route. There is little doubt but the Yankee promoters are all cocked to give Schmeling the run-around and now with Farr as a logical contender, may perhaps leave the German out on the well-known limb. There is a possible chance, however, that Schmeling may be offered a bout with Farr or Pastor, but it's safe to bet all the ties in China it will be a long day before the German ever gets a shot at the heavyweight crown again. In the meantime Farr's splendid showing is not only the talk of the realm of fisticuffs, but it cost us a "saw buck."

The newly proposed Eastern Intermediate O.H.P.U. group composed of Belleville, B. C. A. F. Royal Flyers, Kingston Frontenacs and the K.C.S.C. (Signals), will convene at the Queens Hotel Friday night and draft their group schedule. Harold R. Bailey, secretary-treasurer of the Ont. A. F. U. and member of the C.R.U. rules committee, has been invited to be present and give a football talk to the gathering. He is besides club officials and group referees. Mr. Bailey is a keen student of the fall classic and will demonstrate the many aspects of importance for those present.

Last week we stated Billie Hughes had been approached by the R. C. A. F. Flyers relative to coaching the "winged men" in their rugby football activities this fall. Well, Coach Hughes accepted the Airport offer over the week-end and commenced drilling the gang last evening. The Belleville Rugby Football Club are endeavouring to procure the services of Bill Shaw, well-known Kingston football exponent to tutor the locals this fall. Bill Shaw was a football player of note with both Queens University and Ottawa Rough Riders, while he coached the "21st Colored" juniors to numerous Junior Intercollegiate titles. The acquisition of a man of the calibre of Bill Shaw would prove profitable to the locals.

Stan Loffman, Point Anne youthful softball twirler suspended from Tweed, entered the softball hall of fame yesterday when he hurled a no hit no run game against the Cementmen's nines. It was that not only saw the "Gan" squad eliminated, but resulted in the "Cementmen" advancing to the third round of intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns. Only three Gananoque batters reached first base, two by virtue of walks and the third on an error. The game was purely a battle of Loffman versus Gananoque, as the Point Anne moundsman mowed down no less than 28 of the hometown batters via the strikeout route. Point Anne won the initial game of the series on the home lot and last evening made it "two in a row" to win the Eastern Ontario title and the right to enter the intermediate O.A.S.A. semi-finals.

Bill Terry says Mel Ott, who has played the outfield for the Giants for twelve years, will be the club's third baseman for the remainder of the season. Ott has made brief appearances at the hot corner in recent seasons but never has been stationed there for any length of time.

The surprise package of the C.O.B.L. happened yesterday when the third placed Peterboro squad stepped into Oshawa and held the 1936 provincial champions to a five-all tie, and set the ten inning route. As a matter of fact the Oshawa battery, Johnnie Turner, Oshawa's starting pitcher, from the mound in the sixth forcing Letty Riddle into action. Big Russ Kitchen pitched the entire game for the Pyles. The highlights of the game were the dizzbusters Peg Harsh's circus catch of Long's hard drive to save three certain runs, Max Thews' and Rawden's circuit blows and the collection of errors made aroand second base, that all went to keep both clubs in the running. The second game of the series will be played in Peterboro tomorrow when Riddle and Jakeway will undoubtedly tangle.

He still itches like a schoolboy, Waite Hoyt does. The records give his age as 37, but Hoyt has reached a stage where records are worthless and tasteless. He just goes in there and does the best he can, and recently he went ten innings against the Reds with a two-day rest and pitching his best game since he joined the Dodgers.

TRENT COTTONS WIN LOOP TITLE

Defeat Stoney Lonesome in Deciding Game by 15-8

Trenton, Sept. 1.—(Special)—The Cotton artinglers really went to town last night and clubbed Stoney Lonesome's softball nine into submission, 15 to 8. A crowd of several hundred witnessed the slaughter and saw the men from the hill bring up the rear in the first for the fourth after trailing the entire first part of the first three rounds. It was in the fourth session that the Cottonites really went on and let the Millmen apparently realized that it was meant that the Centennial League dethronement and mauled the delivery of Lonesome's counterfinity for seven runs. Never again were the Lonely gang on top and only once did they make a bid for the command. That was done in the last of the first when Bowler, Gray and Flindall crossed the plate, erasing all further hopes of a first half title but Tommen scored two runs in the first of the sixth and the same number in the first of the final canto. It was home run night for Victor Burtt, E. Davis and Burtt all Cotton boys who blasted circuit clouts to assist their team mates in the loop championship for the third year in a row and keep the Percy Beals trophy on display for another term.

The fixture was a fitting climax to scheduled mudball tilts in Trenton this season. Although the performance of Bruce Burtt the triumphant pitcher won't go down in the records it was good enough to stop the Lonesome sluggers. He allowed 11 hits, while Bowler the losing flinger was reached for 16-safeties. Burtt struck out six and issued four walks. The backstop twirler whiffed five and walked three. Batteries—Trent Cottons, Bowden 3b; F. Baker If; V. Burtt c; Morin ss; E. Davis lb; C. Dreize cf; B. Burtt rf; J. Richmond 2b; Chase rf. Stoney Lonesome— B. Blight, ss; M. Kennedy rf; D. Gray 3b; Flindall cf; A. Dauch c; H. Lott 2b; W. Blight lf; Heaslip lb; sub. Carr. Umpires—Bert Long behind the bat and William Miller third base. Trent Cottons, V. Burtt and Bruce Burtt.—Stoney Lonesome—A. Dauch and Ernie Bowler.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 1.—(AP)—Guess who's the highest paid manager in the Majors?..... No, not Joe McCarthy of the Yankees ($36,000 per) nor Bill Terry of the Giants ($27,500)..... The lucky guy is Mickey Cochrane of Detroit..... We can't tell you what he draws yearly but its tops..... The info comes straight down the baseball alley and will stand..... Cochrane says "Black Mike" is in so solid with his bosses he can just tell Frazee as much as he wants to—and doesn't have to sign a contract.....

Figure Mike Jacobs cleared $50,000 for himself out of the Farr-Louis brawl..... Which ain't exactly Dan..... Tommy Farr took a mangled zwig of a concoction of brandy, port wine and cherry just before he left his dressing room..... Yum, yum..... As if there isn't enough heat around, we offer you the National League Pennant Race.

Finance Dept: Jimmy Johnston, the ex-pariah manager, took one good look at Farr bobbing and weaving against Louis in the first round Monday night, then put down on Tommy to last at 3 to 1..... Also induced former mayor Jimmy Walker to do same..... Both collected..... Johnston said a week ago if the Welshman would only keep his head against Louis, he'd turn in a big surprise..... Bill Terry wants it undgrstood he isn't about to accept a reported offer of $40,000 per to shift from the Giants to Cleveland.....

STAN LUFFMAN IN HALL OF FAME WITH NO HITTER

Point Anne Hurler Strikes Out Twenty of Opposition

WIN SERIES

Stan Luffman entered softball's hall of fame yesterday, when he hurled a no hit, no run game for the Point Anne "Cementmen" in the second game of the second round of the Intermediate "B" series playdowns of the O.A.S.A., versus the Gananoque nine winning by the score of 5-0, giving the Point Anne nine the round in successive games. Only three Gananoque batters reached the initial sack, two by virtue of bases on balls and one on an error. The "Cementmen" advanced to the third round of provincial softball playdowns by virtue of their twoply victory over Gananoque.

The game was purely marked by the superb hurling of Luffman, who struck our 20 Gananoque batters, and only walked two. Luffman retiring the side via the strike-out route in the first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth. Gerald Woodley, former Bellevillian scorched the hilltop for the Cementmen and collected two hits and nicked for nine safeties, let the Point Anne squad down with five runs. The game was purely a pitchers' battle with Luffman relieving he laughs as he entered the softball hall of fame in his no hit, no run effort.

The "Cementmen" scored their initial run in the third, when Gerry Smith safe on an error and scored on Dickey's hit. The visitors added another in the fourth as Meraw and Luffman hit and two runs in the fifth as a base on balls, Greaux and Dickey. Their fifth run came as the result of a hit by Scott. Gananoque got men to first in the second and ninth, by virtue of walks and in the sixth on an error. They did not advance.

The winning of the second gave the Point Anne "Cementmen" the Eastern Ontario Intermediate "B" championship and the right to advance into the third round of O.A.S.A. playdowns.

LOUIS RETAINS TITLE BY 15- ROUND DECISION OVER FARR

Champion Joe Louis Lands His Best Punch

Fighting an aggressive and courageous battle, challenger Tommy Farr, of Wales, just failed by a decision to capture the heavyweight championship of the world. Given little chance by the majority of boxing writers to even stay the route against Louis, the Welshman from Tonypandy had Detroit's negro slugger puzzled by his persistent crowding style and a fast left hand and won recognition from the experts as a game and rugged scrapper. He failed to show enough power in his punches to threaten a knockout. Louis' best round was the seventh, when he had Tommy in trouble from a succession of left and right hands to the head which cut the challenger's mouth. Farr came back in succeeding rounds to force the champion to give ground. At the finish Tommy's face was badly battered, Louis, whose face at no bore evidence that Tommy's left had landed frequently won a unanimous decision. Three pictures from the ringside tell the story of the scrap.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, August 31.—(Special)—Making a rigid investigation after it was removed from the mouth of a man who was the victim of infantile paralysis, Dr. W. B. Crowe, M.O.H., reported yesterday that the dreaded disease had not hit Trenton. The child responsible suffering from paralysis was examined by a local physician who announced that the case was not what appeared to be.

Annual Reverse to Harbour

The Thousand Islands Steamboat of New York, which is 77 feet long from bow to stern docked at the Government dock yesterday afternoon after making a trip up the Trent waterway system. The beautiful craft is owned by Dr. Decker of New York, who spends the greater part of his time on the water. During the winter the boat travels over the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and in the summer Ontario lakes, bays and rivers are his favorite haunts. An equally elegant trailer towed by a high powered motor car accompanies the craft and speeds across the country while the "yachtsman" travels through land.

Meeting the boat at every stop the trailer provides land transportation for Dr. Decker and his wife, who are both getting along in years and find flying in this manner most enjoyable.

Hardball on Wednesday

The game next that gave a splendid display last Friday night will meet in the Trenton baseball park this afternoon. If they give the same brand of baseball that was played here the contest will be both worthwhile seeing. As nearly every body knows, Trenton defeated Brighton 10-1 behind the southpaw shinks of Sam Ellis; John Anderson, veteran catcher, was also returning in a whale of a performances for Ivan Hall and he is probably the Trenton's starting flinger. Other boys signed participants of punch in the light spots and should lick their rivals on strange soil.

Farmer Fined

Howard Armstrong, Trenton dairy farmer was fined $10 and costs for treating a horse cruelly. Magistrate Langley of Belleville presided and Col. Riggs of Cobourg, conducted the case for Inspector Thomas Taylor of Trenton, S.P.C.A. preferred the charge.

Aged Woman Buried

Many attended the funeral of John Wesley Anderson, aged 78, father of John Anderson, a prominent figure in local sporting circles, for the past forty years. Mr. Anderson died late last week and was buried in the Front of Murray Cemetery yesterday. He was born here and spent the greater part of his life in this district. Following the funeral service was Canon Beamish Smith of St. George's Anglican church. Six sons of the deceased acted as pallbearers,—Ross, Frederick, Harry, Albert, Edward and William. Besides six sons—all living in Trenton, Mrs. Anderson is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Dingwells and Mr. P. Eager of Trenton, Mrs. St. Clair of Sidney Township, Mrs. Pirman of Toronto and another daughter in Hamilton.

Schools Open Wednesday

Thousands pupils of the various Trenton Schools who have been enjoying a two months' vacation will return to their books tomorrow for studies for another ten month term. Today heads of the different educational centres were in their offices giving out information to parents, whose children, will be attending for the first time, while other students arranged for their respective classes. All teachers contacted seemed to be elated with their return to their duties as the pupils are or not remains a mystery.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Early! to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food does not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You are constipated. Harmful poisons are absorbed into your blood. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, gentle, vegetable laxative pills known as Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c at all druggists.

Tweed and District

Tweed—An enjoyable band concert was given on Sunday evening in the Memorial Park under the direction of Bandmaster Wilson. Mr. Wilson has been in charge of the local band and has proven himself a most popular and efficient leader. There is a strong possibility that Tweed may lose Mr. Wilson's services unless some form of employment is provided for him as he has several offers to play with other bands.

The following concert was presented on Sunday night:

1. March—Bandmaster.
2. Waltz—Beauty and Belles.
3. Selection.
4. Favourite Hymns.
5. March—Jolly Tars.
6. Characteristic — Coon's Holiday.
7. March — Anticipation.
8. Serenade — Cytheria.
9. Favourite Hymns.
10. March — Acclamation.
11. March—Bandmaster.

Mrs. James Goldie, A.T.C.M., of Peterboro, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sager, assisted at the morning service in the United Church on Sunday. Her solos were Liddle's "The Lord is My Shepherd", which was greatly enjoyed by all.

Services were resumed in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday last. Church services will be held at 10 a.m. and Sunday School at 10 a.m.

Sunday evening services which have been discontinued during July and August will be resumed at Tweed United Church on Sunday, September 5th. Services at the Stirling appointment will be held at 3 p.m. on Sunday afternoon.

Albert Wickware of Clorne suffered a serious injury on Saturday morning while engaged in cutting wood in his bush near his home. The axe with which he was working slipped and inflicted a deep gash in his leg. He was discovered by Constable J. C. Hayes who brought him to Tweed where he was taken by Spencer's Store. First aid was applied by Dr. Costello who took him to a doctor. He will soon be around again.

Supposing you wait and see, like everybody else, ma said, and I will let you know. Gosh, ma, how will I k now how much room to save for it if I have no idea what it is?

My my what a predickament, ma said, and I replied, in the coarse of time insurmountable problems arise to vex us all, and apparently this is one exception. How old you take another hamberger to quiet your nerves while you are thinking it out? I said

Well I've had five and there's only a certain amount of room left, I said, and pop said, Yee gods, let Nora clear the table and bring on the dinnert.

Which she did, the dinnert being plain country gravy, as he saying, Aw heck, good nite, why didn't you tell me?

You know now dont you? ma said, and I said, Sure, but G knickers I've eaten and left enough room for something swell like chocklit pudding and now I'll have to go set with Pop in the parlor.

All is not old that wrinkles, pop said. And anyway you have 2 other alimentary canals. You can go out in the kitchen and fill your empty room with hamberger number 6 and last, or you can leave the table and keep your empty room for future emergencies, I said.

Wich I did, compromising by only taking a small helping of 3 pounds with enough gravy for about 15.

CHICKEN THIEVES

BUSY IN P.E. COUNTY

Roused by a disturbance in his hen house late Sunday night, P. E. Bonter, Albury farmer disturbed a chicken thief in the midst of his activities when he switched electric lights on in the pen. The marauder made a successful getaway fleeing to safety through a nearby orchard. An intensive search failed to locate him.

One hen was found in the pen with its neck wrung while a casual checkup of the flock revealed another missing.

EIGHT CASES IN STRATFORD

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 31.—(CP)—Admittance of an 11-year-old boy to the hospital during the night brought the total number of infantile paralysis cases in Stratford to eight today.

The newest case is not considered serious. Besides the boy admitted last night there is another case which is now under observation but no announcement was made by the final diagnosis.

Livestock

Toronto, Sept. 1.—(CP)—Dull trading on the Toronto Livestock Market today found offerings mostly of plain quality. Prices generally were a shade easier on the Cattle Division. The Calf market was 50 cents easier at 49 to 50 for choice vealers.' Previous closing price on off truck bacon hogs was 13.40 to 13.50. Lambs and sheep were steady. Cattle held over from yesterday was 1,000 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were: Cattle, 2,000; calves, 1,000; hogs, 7,000; sheep and lambs 830.

Common to medium butcher cattle brought $4 to $6.50 with a few of good quality reaching $7.25. Common to medium cows sold at $3 to $4. Pet Calves brought $8 to $11 and plain quality stockers $3 up to $4.75. A few good stockers went as high as $6.

Most sales of the calf market were from $9 downward. Choice vealers went at $8 to $9.50.

Steady prices for lambs found ready sale and western selling at $9. One lot reached $9.25. Sheep were steady at $3 to $4.50 cwt.

Hogs—(CP)—Light cattle offerings failed to interest buyers in early business declining today and prices were unestablished. Cattle, however, were in good demand and prices strengthened along with hog division. Sheep and lambs were unchanged.

Receipts: Cattle, 31; Calves, 190; Sheep and lambs, 1,000; Hogs, 1,000.

Bulk of veal calves sold in mixed lots at $9 for medium good to good lambs with common kinds from $7 to $8. Graziers went from $4 to $5.

Good ewes and wethers made $4.50 with culls and bucks at $4.00. Sheep sold from $2.50 to $4. Seconds, hogs, fed and watered, went from $10 to $10.10 with selects at the usual $1 premium. Butchers' and heavies were cut 50 cents to undredweight. Sows sold from $7 to $8.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Market Comment

The industrial market is again showing signs of coming to life on the upside, with several of the leading issues meeting with an excellent demand. In this category can be included such stocks as Dominion Steel & Coal "B", Shawinigan Water and Power, Montreal Power and Brazilian Traction, the every instance there is good reason for the buying.

Shawinigan Water and Power is benefiting from the betterment in the newsprint and asbestos industries and earnings have been mounting steadily with the result that estimates for 1937 indicate that about $1.60 a share will be shown, which is the reason for the consensus that an increase in the current dividend rate from 80 cents to $1.00 will be made before the end of the current year. Excellent investment buying has been going on in Shawinigan for some little time.

Brazilian Traction's earnings in the months of June and July showed a most appreciable improvement over 1936 and if the current rate of betterment continues the company will not be long in regaining its former high earning power. Another cash disbursement of 50 cents a share is looked for for the year-end, bringing the total payments for 1937 to $1.00 a share. This security is one of the most popular on the board and over the next year or so should work materially higher, particularly in view of the company's sound financial position and improved outlook for Brazil generally.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Sept. 1.—Local produce markets were steady to slightly easier yesterday. Demand was quiet, pending announcement today of stocks in store, and orders were shaded in instances on butter and cheese. Receipts were 1321 cases of eggs, 131 boxes of butter and 5,419 boxes of cheese, excluding truck arrivals. The regular weekly auction will be held at the Board of Trade at 12.30 noon today.

The egg market was generally 2¢ to 4¢ lower. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted by jobbers at 27 1-2c to 28c for solids and 23c to 26 1-2c for prints.

The cheese market was 14 3-8c to 14 1-2c for No .1 Ontario while, 14 1-2c to 14 5-8c for No. 1 Ontario colored, 13 7-8c to 14c for No. 1 Quebec white and 14c to 14 1-8c for No. 1 colored.

On the egg market graded shipments in free cases were generally 28c for A-large, 26c for A-medium 24c for A-pullets, 23c for B and 20c for C, with some quoting the latter grades 1-2c lower.

CHINESE DICTATOR

From the executive council of the Chinese Republic at Nanking came this most recent portrait of General Chiang Kai-Shek, president of the executive Yuan, of China, and behind leader of the New United Republic. It is his leadership that resulted in a united front on the part of China in fighting the current Japanese invasion. A modern leader in an ancient land his army is said to be as well equipped with modern offensive weapons as are the troops of Nippon.

from a rear end car following the accident badly frightened but otherwise unhurt.

Pilot Rod Breaks

The force of the impact, officials say, broke the pilot rod beneath the engine causing it to plunge into the ground, where it acted as a lever. Sixty-three heavily loaded freight cars crashed into the snubbed engine driving it a distance of fifty feet down the right of way, tearing up track, and ploughing into the ground before it hurtled sidewise across the rails. Nineteen cars, the majority of them of steel construction, crashed into each other as they buckled sidewise behind the wrecked engine. Wooden freight cars were smashed into kindling wood. Steel ones were gouged and bent. Steel wheels torn. The cars lay at angles in and around the wreckage. Tracks were twisted and bent and at one point were raised in the air to a distance of four feet. Goods and merchandise lay in and about the wreckage.

The engine a powerful 900 type, lay at right angles across the track, its headlight lying over a fence at the opposite side of the south ditch. Boiling water escaping from the wrecked locomotive tore a hole four feet deep in the ground between the rails.

Heavy Fog at Time

Heavy fog was given as the cause of their inability to see the approaching freight by W. H. Hanna-Belleville, member of the crew of the handcar, who was fatally wounded by the force of the impact.

They were on our way to Shannonville," Mr. Hanna stated this morning when fog was heavy and visibility was poor. The oncoming freight suddenly loomed up in front of them. We hurriedly jumped off and endeavoured to remove the car from the tracks but my left wheel was caught in the rails and twisted the car sideways. The engine crashed into us and seeing that we had no chance to remove the car jumped to safety in the ditch. The engine ploughed down the track for a distance of fifty feet before it crashed."

J. Burshaw, another member of the handcar crew, gave a similar statement. Harold Lloyd, Belleville, was third member of the crew, all of whom escaped injury.

The injured men were rushed to Bellevelle General Hospital by Mac-tin's Ambulance of this city, where their injuries were treated by Dr. J. J. Robertson.

Auxiliary crews from Trenton and Smith's Falls were on the scene of the accident shortly after nine o'clock and after the wreckage was removed from the tracks, it was stated.

The train, one of the crack C.P.R. freights operating between Montreal and Chicago, was on her regular run, when the accident occurred.

Brakeman is Calm

Riding in a derailed locomotive plunging before the impetus of the car behind but two miles, held no terrors for J. Black, brakeman on the C.P.R. freight train wreck-ed this morning one mile west of Belleville when it collided with a hand-car.

Black, who suffered fractured ribs, and a leg lacerations, is accurred when the crash came, joked with operators at the Marlin, Ont., substance while enroute to Belleville General Hospital.

Jumping to safety ... can't say you fellows, for my eyes are full of cinders, but I would like to get a look at that engine."

Black stayed in the cab of the preforming of his duties, remaining at engine following the collision, ahead of jumping with the members of the engine crew.

PARALYSIS PEAK

ported last month. The previous peak was 90 cases in August, 1918.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Board President, said the disease rapidly was "assuming the epidemic stage" and the majority of cases reported were from school age group.

Disease Wrongly Named

"Infantile paralysis is decidedly misnamed," Dr. Bundesen said. "Only one of 121 cases reported since July 1 this year has been 1 and of a child under one year of age."

In the last four days, he said, 36 new cases were reported. Eight yesterday. The doctor said if this pace was maintained the count would reach 56 cases a week.

The death rate from the disease was 10 per cent, he stated.

Urges Isolated Trial

"I have never known the time when so many cases were reported during August," he said.

"Hundreds of boys have gone to summer camps where paralysis has not been, were exposed to it, then sent home after the camps broke up.

"This disease takes about two weeks to develop and this would mean during the opening weeks of the school year.

Dr. Bundesen called attention to an article in the Illinois Health Messenger which said that up to August 16th, infantile paralysis was more prevalent in Illinois than during the corresponding period in any previous year since 1901.

Medical Health Officer, said the children could be kept under closer supervision in camp.

His decision met with some protests from parents but the great majority sent their children back to school today.

They gave a varied program. Bill Garden was thanked by the members and encores were heartily given. The thanks of the club was expressed by the president, Reeve Logan.

SEARCH FOR CAR CARRYING THREE

Police Believe Them to be Bandits, Who Have Terrorized District

Police throughout the entire Bay of Quinte district were alert last night in search for the alleged bandit car, carrying three reported bandits, who have been last terrifying the tourist and motor traveling public in the district, robbing their daring armed holdups and robberies of late. A description of the car, and the three armed bandits, who are reported to be heavily armed, follows, one of which happened on the main highway between Napanee and Kingston motorists, were robbed and one shot as he resisted the desperadoes. The last of the robberies near Bilghton last night, that the bandits, who are said might also had been seen travelling easterly on Highway No. 2 at an excessive rate of speed. The municipal authorities throughout the district were on the alert, while Provincial Police also patrolled the highways and byways, but without results. A minute description of the trio of bandits has been afforded the authorities, although it is believed they sometimes switch motor vehicles in an effort to throw the police off their trail.

Entire 'City' of Zenda Flies To New York to See Film

Airliner Bears Goodwill Gifts of Maple Syrup And Sugar

HAMLET AND PLAY

Zenda, Ont., Sept. 1 (CP)—Headed by Reeve Vernon Fewster, and bearing international goodwill gifts of maple syrup and maple sugar, the "City" of Zenda took to the skies today, bound for New York and the world premiere of the motion picture, "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Zenda's twelve residents early today climbed into a motor caravan of five Woodstock taxis and headed for the airport at Jarvis.

Named After Novel

The giant sky liner bored into the skies bearing the dozen Zenda citizens toward a civic welcome on the steps of New York Summer City Hall, with Mayor Fiorello Laguardia extending a greeting hand. The population was scheduled to land at Floyd Bennett Field.

Named in 1895 after the famous Anthony Hope novel from which the picture was made, Zenda became the only city in history to climb into the plane and visit, en masse, the great metropolis.

Zenda is 17 miles from Woodstock, east of the rich agricultural county of Oxford. Yesterday night the "City of Zenda" will be guest of honor at the Music Hall Theatre viewing the story for which the town was named.

A Small Settlement

Three houses, a dairy, a little red school house and a general store comprise Zenda proper.

Those in the party include: Reeve Vernon Fewster, Donald and Mrs. Howes, Robert and Mrs. Fewster, Doris Hunter, Cliffe Fewster, Harry Hadcock, George Fewster, Harry A. Little, Andrew Fewster and Mary Mathison.

News of the trip swept from the Zenda hamlet throughout Ontario.

In New York the large city publications awaited the unusual sight of an entire city clambering from a plane to see the sights.

Heretofore, Zenda has been famed only for its small annual party, which draws upwards of 3,000 visitors. To Zenda, however, is also proud of their farming and dairying.

IRISH COBBLERS SIMMESE TRIPLETS

"Irish Cobblers" are noted for their size and fineness of flavor besides being unusually prolific. William Whipple, 11 Brown Street, city, has a garden in which he spends the most of his spare time after his day's work is done in the factory where he is employed. This garden is a show place for all those interested in gardening as a hobby and profitable pursuit. And a visit to Irish Cobblers which Mr. Whipple swears by. Last year its raised potatoes and proudly exhibited one weighing three pounds, which is history to climb the family plate and visit, en masse, the great metropolis.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Tony had refused to go back on the porch. At his brusque request, a maid brought out Jane's wrap, a big yellow fur jacket, and her bright curls crushed against the cushioned back of the car, she leaned in a corner, her eyes closed, behind the stiff, uniformed figure of Davis, her chauffeur, in silence.

Only as they reached the gate of Keystone did Tony speak. "What did you say to Lorna?"

She had expected him to ask that, but she was too weary to answer. It would mean another lie if she answered at all. For now she had promised Lorna not to give her away, that price of clearing Tony.

He let it go until they were in the big, massive hall of the house she had grown to love. He jerked on lights and strode to the tray of sandwiches, whiskey and soda old Matthews had thoughtfully left on a centre table. He poured two drinks.

"Better take this".

Jane took it. There would be no rest that night, she knew from the tightened line of his long profile as he bent to fix his glass, and from her heart sank. Sadly she looked up at the portraits of Keystone lining the high panelled walls. No home for her in that haughty array.

Uncertainly she moved among the dark carved shapes of furniture that seemed rooted there. The fragrance of roses and hollyhocks edged the air with sweetness, almost unbearable.

Tony drained his drink. His black hair shone smooth in the lamplight. His perfect evening clothes accented the width of his shoulders, the flat line of his hips. He looked very tall as he turned.

"Well, out with it, now. What upset you this afternoon in that bounder's studio? How did Lorna know the situation between us, or, rather, how the devil did Cotter know? he told her? Or how come she decided on any form of apology?"

Jane drew herself up her chin as obstinate as his. "I shan't answer any of those questions. It doesn't matter, anyway, does it."

Tony stared at her curiously. She was very beautiful against the straight stone of the mantelpiece, with the glimmer of the wonderthroat. Very beautiful, and dangerously intriguing.

"Haven't we had enough mystery?" he shot at her.

"It seems not," she said wearily and set down her glass.

"Of course. I can't make you talk," he went on. "I suppose you realize that it's all in the air? Donna—Lorna, the little fool! Damn her! She's gone and done it this time. That's the end of her."

Jane walked to a chair and sat down. There was a terrible bitterness in his voice.

He stood moodily, staring down at her. Then he said harshly: "I'm beginning to think you planned all this. You with a face like that, your bag, and get into other clothes."

Propped by her hand, Jane rose unsteadily from her chair. "Planned—what?" she said faintly. "Are you—sending me away?"

"Never mind what I'm doing. Hurry." His voice grew even harsher. He swung to the stairs, winding at the end of the huge hall.

On leaden feet Jane walked past him, holding her head proudly. Sending her way like a servant who hasn't given satisfaction. She heard him behind her ringing a bell that whirred through the spaces. She went on up the stairs.

In the old rose-colored room that had become home to her, she stood, her hands clasped and rigid. The windows were open on the autumn night, and from the stretches of lawn came the murmurous serenade of insects. The bed she would never sleep on again was serenely ready, silken sheets laid back, pillows smooth, a lacy chiffon gown and her slippers set out. Through an open door, the bathroom gleamed. The austere presence of old Mrs. Kaye lingered in this room, from which she had dominated her household and society.

Jane dragged herself to her closet where she kept a week-end valise. Among rows of lovely gowns hung the blue silk that had led her into adventure. Led her to Tony. Barely a month since she had donned to be Jane Carey of Pond du Lac, dreaming in her youth that she could create for other identity. Perhaps she had kept this dress to remind her of the mad, glorious day she had spent her last cent arraying herself as an enchanted princess. Believing in fairy tales. Yes, it was filling that she should wear it tonight—to walk out of fairy tales forever.

Someone knocked on the door. It was old Matthews for her bag. He avoided her eye, his faithful old shoulders bowed in the service of the Kayes.

Without a backward glance at the room, slender, erect, she went down the stairs. Tony had changed into tweeds. His roadster, loomed long and grey along the driveway. He handed her in.

Jane hadn't questioned. When they swung around the iron gates on the starlit road, her anguish pushed up in a cry: "Oh, where are you taking me?"

Tony slouched low behind his wheel, staring ahead. His short laugh was mirthless. "Where do you suppose? To wake up the only person I can trust. Were in a jam, of a jam. Tonight's business is going to look like—"

"I mean I've got to marry you now," he said grimly. "Marry you, and hustle us both out of the country before the papers get hold of this sweet story. Isn't that what you wanted?"

CHAPTER XVIX.
WEDDING CEREMONY

"Tony Kaye was going to marry her because he had to. That was all Jane grasped. With the relief of Lorna's shrill, hating voice lashing scandal upon them in Tuxedo, and the grim departure from Keystone, she had felt resigned to the inevitable. She must go. Creep back into the discarded shell of Jane Carey, shedding forever the glamorous role she had tried to play. Now, blaming himself for all that had happened this evening, but believing she had had a great deal to do with it, Tony meant to save what he could of the Kaye name.

"Isn't that what you wanted?" he repeated.

"No—not this way." Jane caught her breath. The stars seemed rushing from the deep summer sky to meet the car as it blazed along roads, tearing night scents to ribands. She fingered the ring he had given her when first they had plunged into this make-believe marriage. Lorna had challenged in front of her friends and his. Pretend enough that it should be Lorna who had brought to a crisis the train of ugly secrets and intrigue.

"A bit too late to consider either of us."

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service

Tarzan walked to the window and examined the thick wooden bars and the casing in which they were set. "Whoever placed them there was stupid! Look!" The mighty ape-man seized two of the bars close to the sill and surged backward with all his strength.

There was a rending of wood as the entire window frame was torn from its seat. Lord whistled. "Man! You're as strong as a bull." He was chided at seeing the prison bars ripped away, but his joy soon faded when he recalled the most serious obstacle to escape. "In "That won't do us much good," he said ruefully; "there's a leopard down in the courtyard. He's kept there to pounce on any prisoner that might happen to get out." "I know," Tarzan nodded; "he's a mate of mine, at least, a male. I caught his scent when we came

Now the ape-man demanded: "Where can I find Woora? He must die!" "His apartment is across the court," Lord explained; "but it won't do you any good to know. You can never get past that leopard." In confirmation, the beast below emitted a fierce growl.

BRITISH FLEET TO COMBAT SUBMARINE PIRATE

Tanker is Torpedoed, Second Engineer Killed; British People Aroused

Orders to Sink Pirate in Mediterranean After Crew Taken Off

WOODFORD OUTRAGE

There is Possibility Submarine Was Sunk by Havock

London, Sept. 2 (AP)—Great Britain ordered her Fleet reinforced in the western Mediterranean today to combat stronger and repeated submarine assaults on British vessels.

The decision was announced after cabinet members, at two sessions, attempted to shape the Empire's naval policy against the threats to her ships of war and peace.

The Spanish Ambassador was summoned to the Foreign office shortly before the second council adjourned.

The order, specifically ordering increased destroyer strength among the reinforcements, indicated that both capital ships and smaller warships would be sent into the area.

Italy Suspected.

Informed circles said that the British government suspected Italy of responsibility.

Latest victim of a Mediterranean torpedo was the tanker Woodford, flying the British flag. She was sunk, her second engineer killed and six of her crew wounded, off the Spanish shore. Other crewmembers got away.

However, there arose the possibility the submersible which Tuesday night fired a torpedo at H.M.S. Havock (Continued on Page Seven)

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

September swimming days!

There is no sport to equal swimming—say the swimmers.

There is good scientific reason for good swimming in September. Of all ordinary substances, water has the greatest specific heat; that is to say, it takes more heat to raise one pound of water one degree. For instance, it takes five times as much heat to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree as to raise one pound of earth the same number of degrees; then, is a great storehouse of heat. It records warm days in the earth and air have become chilled. So to get warm in September cold days jump in and have a swim.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 2—(CP)—Pressure is high over the eastern states with a deep disturbance centred in Hudson Bay similar to a moderate depression is moving eastward from Saskatchewan. Thunderstorms have occurred in Northern Ontario also in many parts of Quebec and the Maritimes. Cool to warm weather fair and decidedly warm in Southern and Southwestern Ontario and Southwest Quebec. Light to moderate showers have fallen in many districts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Northern Alberta.

Lake Superior—Moderate winds; partly cloudy today and Friday with thunderstorms and many districts; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba—Partly cloudy and warm with thunderstorms in many districts. Friday—Partly cloudy with a few scattered showers; cooler in north portion.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Mostly fair and warm with scattered showers.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—Planned in the first Indian pageant ever held in the west, the marriage of two players in the Indian harvest festival at the Canadian National Exhibition has been called off, Elmer C. Odell, man of the South Sio. Marie, Ont., Star announced last night. Mr. Curran was active in bringing the pageant here. The wedding was to have taken place today in the miniature Indian village erected in the Exhibition grounds. The bride was to be Grace Kadena.

Ogilvy and Mather, Ltd. and Wabbsmen the bridegroom.

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 2 (CP)—Maybe the dentist weather is responsible but, whatever it is, it fell swing at the Granite Club here this week. The club is said to derive enough revenue from archery shooting to offset many of the maintenance costs for curling during the winter.

Middle River, Minn., Sept. 2 (AP)—CATERPILLERING AND FILLmustrels are getting lazy.

They aren't working much even Nature's most keen. Members of a relief camp, 18 miles east of here got plenty of bread, thinking the muskrats would use the material to build houses. But the animals waited until the water levels had risen, plastered mud over the bread and moved in.

Sept. 1st Unlucky Day for W. Hanna

Was on Wrecked Handcart in Morning And Injured by Steel Sliver in Afternoon

September 1st, 1937, will be a day long remembered by Willis Hanna, 100 John Street, a Canadian Pacific Railway employee. Reckoning possible death or injury when he leaped from a section handcar on the south main line of the C.P.R. near Shannonville when it collided with a fast freight train yesterday morning, Hanna's good luck went into reverse in the afternoon. He was taken to Belleville General Hospital where he underwent an operation to remove a piece of steel two inches long which had entered below the left eye and taken a downward course to lodge above the windpipe. The operation was performed by Dr. J. J. Robertson.

Hanna was brushing dust at the C.P.R. yards when the sliver flew upwards striking him in the chin. His condition is reported to be satisfactory.

Must Return Only if They Ask For No Conditions

FACE MANY PROBLEMS

(Editor's Note: Labor's civil war in the United States daily grows more bitter. Lawyers for the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis', rebel C.I.O. battle in the courts and before the National Labor Relations Board. Civil disturbances carry the fight to almost every corner of the land in almost every case made. The Associated Press reporter asked William Green, A.F. of L. president, that question today. He gave his answer in the following interview.)

By JOSEPH MILLER.

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 2 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today the Federation would welcome back the ten suspended C.I.O. unions if they returned without any conditions.

Their return, he said, would be the first step toward ending the United States labor movement, divided into two bitterly warring camps since John L. Lewis started the Committee for Industrial Organization in November, 1935.

If the C.I.O. unions took this step Green said, they would be doubled by would—the next move toward final peace, he said, would be appointment of a joint committee of A.F. of L. and C.I.O. leaders to carry out a plan of settlement.

"I recognize that there would be many complicated problems to be solved," Green said.

"The hardest of these probably would be the question of the representation of dual unions in the radio and electrical and shipbuilding industries. Those unions never belonged to the American Federation of Labor.

"The Radio and Electrical Workers' Union (C.I.O.) has a right to organize the territory that belongs to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A.F. of L.) The Marine and Shipyard Workers (C.I. O.) is trying to enroll the workers who should go into various Metal Trades Unions (A.F. of L.).

"On the other hand, we have organized textile workers, metal workers, leather garment workers, and have chartered the Progressive Mine Workers of America, all in territory claimed by the C.I.O. unions.

"There would be dozens of these problems, some hard and some easy. But I think there are men big enough on both sides, like Lewis, Sidney Hillman, Matthew Woll and Dan Tobin, just to name a few—to solve those problems once the C.I.O. leaders decide to try.

"The issue of craft versus industry unionism would still remain. But we could fight it out in the true Democratic way within the family of labor — not between two warring groups as we are fighting today."

CHINESE PLANES FLY TO JAPAN AND BOMB PORT

Unconfirmed Story Tells of Bombardment of Kagoshima

AIMS OF JAPAN

Japanese Consulate Reports 20 Russian Planes in North China

Shanghai, Sept. 3 (Friday)—(AP)—Chinese planes report early today said Chinese military airplanes had flown to Japan and bombed Kagoshima, southern port of importance in Japan proper.

Tientsin, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Japanese Consulate General reported today a flight of Russian airplanes had arrived at the North Central China Provinces of Shensi, 500 air miles from Tientsin.

Seventy More On Way.

Seventy additional Russian planes were flying to China, Japanese said, adding they did not know whether the planes were granted from Russia or were "a Soviet contribution to a Chinese Communist" Japanese report.

Tokyo, Sept. 2 (AP)—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota indicated today that Japan's objective in China is the elimination of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, premier of China.

Shanghai, Sept. 3 (AP)—Japanese naval authorities advised British troops today to evacuate outposts on the Soochow Creek north of the International Settlement as they were preparing to bomb the Chinese communication lines in the adjacent Jessfield Park district. The British complied.

20 YOUNG MEN TO UNDERGO TRAINING FOR REFORESTATION

Under the extensive programs being planned for reforestation of various parts of the country by the Department of Lands and Forests in connection with Provincial and Provincial Youths' Training Camps, twenty young men between the ages of eighteen and twenty-three years left Belleville, yesterday for Trenton, where each one will they will undergo six weeks training in reforestation at a training camp under the eyes of skilled experienced officials.

Pronounced medically and physically fit by a local physician, the twenty-man quota left Belleville and the remainder in Deseronto, both by train and car for their destination.

Application and adaptability to their new work will be carefully observed by officials in charge during the training period with those qualifying and showing a marked ability in this particular type of work will be given personal positions.

Hepburn Gov't. Saves County $490,477 in Three Years Says McQuesten at Madoc

Fred E. Brown, Farmer, Candidate at East Hastings

CAMPBELL SPEAKS

Minister of Highways Upholds Hydro Action in Ontario

(By Staff Reporter)

Madoc, Ont., Sept. 2nd—Political drama was enacted in the Armouries of this historic village, scene of many a hard-fought campaign, yesterday when Fred E. Brown, Tweed farmer was the unanimous choice of one hundred and sixty Liberal delegates from the far flung corners of East Hastings ninety mile riding, to contest the seat now held by Dr. Harold Wesson in the coming general election.

Withdrawing his name from the primary list of seven potential nominees, Mr. Brown was prevailed upon by the large delegation present to let his name stand after three of the proposed had withdrawn. Messrs Peter McLaren of Tweed, Lorne Wright, George Jordan of Hungerford, allowed their names to stand. Vociferous applause greeted the nomination of Brown's name before the delegation, which quickly developed into a demonstration when the elderly Tweed farmer withdrew from the list.

Sensing the general feeling of the delegation, Mr. McLaren strode to the platform and announced "If Mr. Brown will let his name stand I will retire and support him to the last ditch in the election." Again tumultuous cheers rocked the armouries. Mr. Brown was induced to come to the platform and after a few minutes deliberation announced, "For the sake of the party, I accept the nomination." Thunderous applause greeted the announcement, and the withdrawal of Mr. George Jordan which followed this statement was scarcely heard in the din which prevailed.

Dr. Harold Reach, president of the East Hastings Liberal Association who presided at the convention, then officially proclaimed Mr. Brown to be the Liberal standard bearer in the forthcoming election.

Seven Names Submitted

Others whose names were placed before the convention and who received votes were Harold Pedlow, Deseronto; Robert Bristol, Madoc; Dr. Reach, Madoc, Ont., and Arthur Gough of Foxboro. All nominees, save to the convention for a period of five minutes

Mr. Boyce in his address stated that he was not seeking his range for "purely personal reasons, which I consider sufficient," but promised full support to the successful candidate.

Chimpanzee Becomes Ally To Wean Men from 'Dope'

'Chimps' Said to Have Same Reactions to Narcotics as Men

ARE ALSO CURABLE

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Minneapolis, Sept. 2 (AP)—Medical science today was offered in the chimpanzee, a new ally to fight the human narcotic habit. It is the first animal found to be capable of taking morphine like a human and having all of man's reactions.

The discovery, made by turning four "chimps" into narcotic addicts, was reported to the American Psychological Association by S. D. Shirley Spragg, of the Yale Laboratories on Primate Biology at Winter Park, Florida.

With the "dope" the chimps became even more human-like than usual, in some ways. Their actions led Dr. Spragg to conclude there is no justification for the belief that a person addicted to opiates is necessarily a "psychic" or predisposed by any other queer traits of nature.

He said the remarkable scientific reports indicated that while there may have been previous attempts to try the effects of narcotic habits on various animals, there has always been doubt whether the animals had the "active desire" of humans. Monkeys were completely devoid of any signs of this craving.

The chimps would whimper and cry, as addicts of any strength may made to return them to their cages without a "shot" of morphine injection at the time they expected it.

When hungry they were given the choice of food and the syringe. They unusually chose the "dope" in place of food.

The chimps were taken off the morphine habit by methods of "withdrawal" similar to human beings. They appeared to be curable about the same as humans.

PLAGUE CLEARING IN SOUTH AREAS, FEARS FOR NORTH

Nasal Spray of Zinc Sulphate Used in Some Places

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

Munich, Germany, Has Virulent Outbreak of Paralysis

While infantile paralysis seemed to be clearing slightly in southern sections of Ontario daily, public health officials were fearful the epidemic which has attacked more than 700 persons was spreading northward. The outbreak is now in its third month.

At Sudbury and in Northern Ontario precautions were taken by having the children's beaches, where infants treated with zinc sulphate nasal spray. Doctors said tourists going into "northern regions might carry poliomyelitis germs.

Precautionary Sprayings.

The Kawartha Lakes district Penetang Lake Simcoe and Muskoka resorts are getting busy.

They aren't worrying much over Nature's most keen. Members of a relief camp, 18 miles east of here got plenty of bread, thinking the muskrats would use the material to build houses. But the animals waited until the water levels had risen, plastered mud over the bread and moved in.

Lighted Butt of Cigarette Cause

Believed to have been the result of a lighted cigarette butt, fire was discovered in a chesterfield in the home of William Chard, 383 Pinnacle Street, shortly before midnight last night. The fire was observed by neighbours, as the chesterfield broke out into flames, but the prompt arrival of the fire department saved what might have proved to have been a serious fire. With the aid of chemicals the blaze was extinguished without much damage to other articles of household goods. It was necessary for the fire department to open all windows of the house in order to permit the smoke to escape, so dense was the smoke column.

BOYS' BAND OF OTTAWA HEARD BY FAIR VISITORS

Fine Organization Spends Short Time in This City

One of the largest crowds in Belleville for many years was present at the Belleville Fair on Wednesday. It was a half holiday in the city and the citizens responded in large numbers to support an organization, that has done much to foster the improvement of production both in the home and field. The Fair Board provided an excellent program for their visitors with the visit of the Ottawa Boys' Band being the feature, while the junior members of the Fair were interested in the judging competitions arranged by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, the closing exercises being a banquet at the dining hall in front of the grandstand when a number of acts were given, while a two race of the harness meet was run off, which thrilled the large audience. The day was unfortunately hot, which mitigated against the attendance of the farmer who was busy on his land.

Boys' Band Excellent

On arrival by motor the Boys' Band was met by a delegation from the Fair Board and taken to a local cafe where they were served dinner. Later the Municipal Band visited the fair grounds, the band being escorted to the grounds. On arrival they set up their stands on the platform facing the grandstand and gave a delightful concert. The quality of tone, perfect rhythm were in order. The band played Poet and Peasant" overture, "Bill Boyd" Wilson, 13 year old bandsman gave a trombone solo, "Rose Road to Mandalay" and "Duke" McGuirell, Boy Bugler rendered "Taps" from the band in a stirring march. The band then went to the bandstand, where assembled large number were present.

HALF-ACRE BERRIES YIELD 7,200 BOXES

Roy Oliver of Campbellford is believed to hold a Dominion record for a Dominion championship, in the matter of quantity production on production basis.

Mr. Oliver planted two plants a half acre of Latham plants in 1934. No additional plants have since been added.

In an affidavit given by William A. Hoyle and Thomas Jamieson of Campbellford this year, the production was claimed to be 6-tal 7,200 pint boxes of the berries.

Advised of the extraordinary yield, G. C. Chamberlain, Dominion Horticulturist of the Dominion Laboratory of Plant Pathology at St. Catharines, declared it to be a phenomenal record. He said he recall any production to come near this figure," he wrote in his letter.

ROADS COMMITTEE MEETS HERE FRIDAY

With many important problems to discuss and the usual routine business to be disposed of, the Roads and Bridges Committee of the County of Hastings will hold its regular meeting in the office of County Clerk Eric Denyes tomorrow morning. The meeting will be under the chairmanship of James Moore, Herse of Elzevir.

500 PERISH IN CHINESE COLONY FROM A TYPHOON

Twenty Vessels Sunk By The Fury—of The Wind

CITY A SHAMBLES

Storm Adds Horror to City Battle Against Cholera

Hong Kong, Sept. 2 (AP)—Five, caused by a disastrous typhoon, raged through Hong Kong today after a 125-mile-an-hour wind had taken hundreds of lives ashore and at sea.

The death toll, steadily rising, was believed to have passed 500. Official estimates placed the total count into thousands.

The wide area of this British crown colony was devastated and waist deep in water.

Twenty small ships were piled up on the sea wall and strewn in the submerged waterfront streets.

Shipping Suffers.

Distress calls from foundering ships, poured in from all sides.

Shipping suffered particularly heavily in the gale, one of the worst in Hong Kong's history. Ships in the harbor is thronged with refugee-laden ships from the Shanghai war zone and steamships that have taken haven from the Japanese coastal blockade.

One of the foundered steamships was the liner Hunan, carrying 1,000 Chinese refugees from the Shanghai sector.

The 4,653-ton Dutch liner van Heutsz was a total loss. Two of the largest ships in the harbor, the 18,765-ton Lloyd Triestino liner Conte Verde and the 19,679-ton Japanese liner Asama Maru, were swept ashore.

Many British ships, the Mauseng and Koong Cour, and the Chinese ferry steamer Haitung.

The British steamships Lycemoon, Kutgan and Kwangchow, the Norwegian freighter Fredrik and the Chinese Shemgiee were pounded ashore.

Can Refloat Ships.

A survey showed eighteen ships were driven ashore both inside and outside Hong Kong in addition to those sunk. The largest was the 10,000-ton British liner Conte Verde. Most of the ships, it was thought, could be refloated.

It could not be learned, however, the Dutch liner van Heutsz, ashore on Green Island, in the outer entrance to the harbor, was a total loss. There was anxiety for the 200 passengers and crewmembers of the small they were all taken off safely.

Many waterfront godowns, tossed by the waves, collided with the British cruiser Cornwall and the destroyers Duchess and Diamond during the crashing on the Praya Roadway.

Reports of damage and deaths were reported aground, along with four British vessels and one each of Japanese, Norwegian, Danish and Italian registry.

The British liner India sent a call for assistance but her position was not established.

The government tug Kanning, reported earlier to have been swamped by the swirling waters, was found to have weathered the storm but its Chinese crew had been taken off, leaving the captain and two officers aboard.

Typhoon Adds to Horrors.

The storm added horror to the city's battle against a cholera epidemic in which 219 persons died last week. Hospitals and relief camps communications with Shanghai were cut off.

TRACKS ARE CLEARED FOLLOWING ACCIDENT

Traffic on the south main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway disrupted since eight-thirty yesterday morning following an accident near Shannonville when the grain and semi-trel-Otlage freight crashed into a handcar, ripping the locomotive and nineteen freight cars, and scattered the morning at two o'clock. While all debris and wreckage is rapidly being cleared away, the line is not through operating under a "slow order".

CONDITION OF F. BLACK IS STILL CRITICAL

F. Black, brakeman of the train who was severely injured with two other members of the crew in the wreck, is in a critical condition at the Belleville General Hospital. Dr. J. J. Robertson, attending physician stated this morning. O. H. Francis, engineer; Carpenter, fireman, and Timothy Healey, trainsheak are reported to be in a satisfactory condition.

CONSTABLE PALMATEER SENT TO BANCROFT

Constable S. W. Palmateer, who recently joined the Ontario Provincial Police and has been stationed in the District No. 2 headquarters at Belleville, was today transferred to Bancroft, where he will be stationed, while in new territory, Constable D. M. Carruthers, who swore in and took the oath of allegiance, Constable Carruthers is the third new member of the O.P.P. to be stationed in Belleville since this force has been augmented by new officers.

DUCK SEASON EARLIER NORTH HIGHWAY NO. 7

Local duck hunters will get an earlier start in the fall season, according to a statement just released by the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries.

Highway No. 7 this year will be the dividing line between the two duck hunting areas in the Central Ontario district. In territory north of Highway No. 7 the season will open October 1st and continue to November 15. In the area south of Highway No. 7 the season will extend from October 1st to November 30th.

PARTRIDGES REPORTED AS MORE PLENTIFUL

Partridge are more numerous in the northern section of the county this year according to Edward Vernon, Bancroft district trustee, who during the past few weeks on the various trips he has made over his area has seen them along the railroads and in the heavywood bush. The favorable conditions that this year are said by the Bancroft man as being responsible for the increase in the birds.

Wild ducks, also, are stated by Local fishermen to be plentiful in the Bay of Quinte marshes where already the birds have started to congregate in flocks.

FEW ARE SWIMMING IN BAY AND RIVER

Swimmers of the city accepted the "no swimming" edict of the local Board of Health with little comment. For the most part no explanation for the order was asked, was shown, and during the day Victoria Park, Zwick's Island, the city bathing beach and the docks were are singularly deserted. But a few errant bathers were noted in the city. Yesterday afternoon the placing of the signs warning swimmers against bathing was being made by the Board of Health at the various locations.

AUGUST BUILDING PERMITS TOTAL $7,925

Though new building permits were issued from the office of the city engineer during the month of August, estimated costs of new construction reached a sizeable total. During the month of August permits were given for an alteration to a cottage on Fenton Place, at $125; for a one storey kitchen off Charles Street at $600; for a concrete warehouse on Station Street at $1,000 and to the Consolidated Optical Company for the laying of a new main floor at a cost of $6,000. Total estimate of $7,725.

FRONT OF THEATRE NEARLY COMPLETED

Considerable progress in the construction of the new and as yet unnamed McCarthy theatre on Front Street has been made during the past week or so, all the present time nearly all the face of the building has been built up of reinforced concrete, the side walls being constructed of brick and the interior of the new construction. It is hoped to have the building completed by December.

CONSERVATIVES HOLD MEETING IN SIDNEY

Of purely informal nature, an organization meeting of Conservatives of the Wallbridge district was held in Wallbridge last evening with a large attendance of workers of the party. With Geo. McCullough acting as chairman, the chief speaker of the evening was Mayor R. D. Arnott of this city, candidate for the conservative riding of West Hastings at the coming provincial election.

Brief addresses were also given by W. A. Reid, of Town of Sidney Township; Edgar Morrow Deputy Reeve of Sidney; Geo. McKechnie, president of the Sidney Young Canada Club; C. M. Ketcheson, Arthur Rankin, and Stanley Reeve of Sidney and Frank Finkle.

LINDSAY BRAKEMAN IS SHOT IN THE ARM

Standing on top of a box car, and clearly outlined against the sky, early last evening B. E. Morrison, Lindsay brakeman on the Belleville-Lindsay freight run, was mysteriously shot through the arm, according to a statement made in the Nicholl's Hospital, Peterboro. Crouching on the car until it had reached a stop, the injured man finally made his plight known. The bullet was from a .22 rifle.

PHONE INSTALLED IN CON. CLUB ROOMS

For the convenience of those interested in golf, a telephone was installed in the Conservative Club rooms, Front St., today. The number is Belleville 2-W. Original orders read as 2600. Any desired election information for the coming provincial campaign will be available from this point, officials added.

FEW PUNTS OUT

But three sailing punts entered the regular Wednesday series of races in the bay yesterday afternoon, and little interest was displayed in the trials. Only two boats finished, Schnarr's craft pulling out at the finish second and Callaghan's third. Callaghan in the first race won over Schnarr with a total time of 2 hours for the course with the finish coming after 2 hours and one minute. Geo. Shemark acted as timer for the course.

Peaches and Melons Feature Market

Golden skins of hundreds of baskets of peaches added a touch of color to one of the largest fruit displays seen at the city market in some time, when a large number of growers provided the attractive exhibits of farm and dairy produce to a fairly large gathering of Thursday morning shoppers.

Peaches in all sizes and selling at all prices started the fruit parade on the fruit display. Selects were offered at forty cents. Extra thirty-five and forty cents, 2's at thirty cents and 3's at twenty-five cents. Twenty cents baskets with keen eyes for preserving fruits were offered a brisky morning trade. One vendor reported that he sold over forty baskets of this fruit before an hour.

Bradshaw plums caught the popular fancy selling at twenty-five cents per six quart basket. Blue Damsons also proved popular and were quoted at thirty cents for the same quantity. Green gages were plentiful and were offered by the public at forty cents per basket lot.

Second in quantity to peaches was a variable display of cantaloupe and watermelons. In all sizes and prices cantaloupe found a ready sale with early morning shoppers selling at from five cents upward. Watermelon, some measuring nearly twenty inches in length and varying in size sold from fifteen cents up.

Blue grapes made their 1937 debut on the market today selling at fifty cents per six quart basket. Pears were fairly plentiful and were quoted at thirty-five and forty cents per basket. Duchess apples in hamper and basket lots were quoted at eighty-five and twenty cents respectively.

Dairy produce proved a decline in price today selling at ten cents per dozen. Tomatoes were offered at fifty cents per bushel and potatoes at seventy-five and eighty cents per bushel-lot.

Eggs were offered at thirty cents for "A" selects and twenty-three cents for the pullet variety. Butter remained firm at two pounds for sixty cents.

UNITED CHURCH LAYMEN MEET HERE SEPT. 11, 12

Conference Will Be Held at Albert College

Laymen of the United Church of Canada, together with ministers and missionaries of the United Church, will meet at Albert College, Belleville, September 11th and 12th for the fifth series of Conferences of laymen of the United Church of Canada to discuss the work of the United Church for the coming months.

Work of the United Church Board of Christian Education, Board of Evangelism and Social Service and Pension Fund will be described to the laymen by Rev. Dr. Frank Langford, Toronto; Rev. Dr. James Semple of Belleville, and Mr. W. T. Rogers of Brockville.

The conference will open at noon, Saturday, when dinner will be held at Albert College. H. W. Anderman, Chairman of the Bay of Quinte Conference Missionary and Maintenance Committee, will be Chairman of the afternoon session when the devotional address will be given by Rev. John Maxwell Allan, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference. An address will be given by Rev. Denzil G. Ridout, Secretary of the Board of Missionary and Maintenance Committee.

Rev. Dr. George Dorey, Associate Secretary of the Board of Home Missions, who has just arrived back in Toronto from a 15,000-mile motor trip through the dried-out areas of Saskatchewan, will be the chief speaker at the Saturday evening session. The Chairman will be M. D. Metherall, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference Lay Association. Also speaking at the Fall plans of the Missionary and Maintenance Committee will be made by Rev. T. G. Ridout.

An hour and a half on Sunday morning will be given over to the discussions of Urban Churches, Town Churches, and Rural Churches. Mayor R. D. Arnott will preach in Belleville Churches Sunday morning.

Two United Church Missionaries will be speakers at a Missionary Rally on Sunday evening, when public is invited. The speakers are Mr. R. W. Scott, of Korea and Rev. Wm. Scott, of Korea. The Chairman will be Rev. Dr. A. E. Armstrong, Secretary of Board of Foreign Missions.

POLICE BLOTTER

Sneak thieves were active in the vicinity of the Belleville Fair, although not as prevalent as on former years. Last evening a spare tire, rims and rim removed from a car parked car, the property of Jack Aitchhorn, 232 Station St. A jack on motor rug was also taken from the vehicle, that had been parted on the Marshall Farm where Mr. Aitchhorn was attending the fair.

A trunk containing articles the Fair Grounds on Tuesday night, was found abandoned on Dundas St. by police yesterday and returned to its owner.

Three tires were two found in the vicinity of the Fair, were taken into custody yesterday. They were released this morning to return and face L.C.O. charges in lo-cal police court.

A truck driven by Clayton Mills, Stirling, collided with a parked car on Front St. yesterday damaging the headlight of the unoccupied vehicle. Mr. Milner had his truck in reverse gear at the time of the collision and was backing up in order to get out from the curb. He informed O. P. Constable Hall, investigated. The owner of the motor car can now go to the City Constable in charge leaving the address of the truck driver available for the purpose of collecting damages.

Alleged to be absent without leave at a mess dinner held in the George Frederick Terry, home address believed to be in Picton, is being sought by military officials, police revealed today. Terry was described as being in his years of age, 5 foot 11 inches tall and of dark complexion. He was a member of the Royal Canadian Signals, stationed at Camp Borden, but, according to late, visited his native Picton recently.

A local billiard room operator, ator, at 221 Front St. was found conducting his business after midnight last night. Constables Evans and Arnott reported.

Patrons Claim Best Nails Used in Game

Following complaints from Fair goers that one of the alleged games of skill was being operated in a way advertised, Sergeant Arthur Booth and Plainclothes Constable Fred Hand investigated yesterday with the result the game was ordered to be closed. The commission in question called upon the player to drive three nails into a solid block of wood using a hammer to drive the nails with three strokes of the hammer. Patrons at the Fair claimed the feat could not be accomplished as the operators used bent nails. Police investigations substantiated this statement and the game was ordered closed by the police. Some small wire nails were being used in the game, many of which were bent, police stated as they confiscated two for possible evidence.

Obituary

RUSSELL C. SEELEY (Sidney).

In the list of surviving members of the family given in the obituary of Russell C. Seeley, the name of his widow, who was his second wife, was omitted. Some time after the death of her first wife, the deceased married Miss Marion Howard of Melrose, Ont., and she survives.

Mr. J. B. Findlay Tells Of Sinking of Freighter In Mid - Ocean Collision

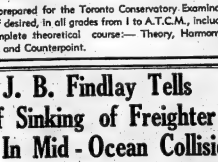
Twelve Foot Hole Torn In Hull of Ship by Passenger Liner

ALL OF CREW SAVED

"Just how to explain our feelings is rather difficult. You see we knew our boat had collided with something, although the impact was not heavy. There was no panic. At one stage of fact all in the dining room continued with their meal, after being assured there was no danger stated Mr. J. B. Findlay while telling his experiences of August 11th last when the Duchess of York collided with a Danish freighter and 25 miles off the coast of Boston, ripped a 12 foot hole in the side of the freighter, which later sank, after all hands had been removed.

In Heavy Fog

"We were about 21 hours out of Montreal, bound on our return trip from Bermuda, Mrs. Findlay and myself. We had been in a heavy fog for well over fourteen hours, with our fog horn sounding continuously every two minutes. We were about evening dinner when the crash took place. The officers informed us afterwards that the Danish freighter, loaded with 6,000 tons of coal, homeward bound from Portland, came out of the fog, directly in front of us and struck us a heavy starboard side. The Duchess ran ahead for about 30 feet from the bow, ripping a hole 12 feet deep near the waterline. Our crew immediately tossed over rope ladders, and made the front of the freighter fast to the Duchess while the Danish crew was taken off, later the freighter was cut loose and allowed to sink.



"It was a sight that leaves one spell-bound to see that large hulk of a freighter straighten out, with the stern pointing to the heavens and then dive straight toward the bottom of the ocean," added Mr. Findlay.

On Return Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Findlay were on the return voyages of the record trip from Montreal to Bermuda when the sea disaster happened. After we rammed the freighter we could quite vividly feel the engines of our boat reversed at top speed in reverse gear. Just before the collision the officers of the Duchess saw the freighter come out of the fog bank and had just enough time to reverse the engines and have it's double sea disaster, which would probably have happened had we struck the loaded freighter at full speed ahead. As it was our boat ran into the side of the freighter than the Duchess engines were in reverse and backing away from the accident."

Passed Not Heavy

At any rate the thrill was something we'll never forget. After the impact we could feel something rubbing against the side of the Duchess and we knew there had been a collision, but there was no panic. The upper part of the whole affair is the fact that no disaster was in the offing.

were so much as knocked from the table during the entire accident," concluded Mr. Findlay, who assured the Ontario-Intelligencer that both he and Mrs. Findlay had enjoyed every moment of their sea excursion to Bermuda, even if considerable of the time was spent trying to penetrate fogs. Mr. Findlay was fortunate enough to procure several fine photos of the Danish freighter as it was taking its last dive towards the bottom of the sea.

27 Fine Babies Competed In Baby Show at the Fair

Judge Dr. Demorest Has Difficult Time Picking Winners

8 PRIZES GIVEN

twenty-seven babies competed in the Baby Show held yesterday, afternoon at Belleville Fair, and eight prize winners were selected after much careful consideration by the judge, Dr. Demorest of Stirling. Judging took place in the bandstand and attracted a large number of spectators.

Healthy specimens of baby hood made the work of the judge very difficult. Miss Rawhinson, school nurse, assisted Dr. Demorest in his duties. The following were announced as prize-winners.

Boys, over six months and under twelve months — First, Donald Hurpke; second, Russell Carter, 1 West Moira Street.

Girls, over six months and under twelve months — First, Sheila Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Fisher, 122 West Bridge Street; second, Margaret Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Wilson, West Bridge Street.

Boys, under six months— First, Ronald Bowers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eleanor Clarke; second, Deanna Rose Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hailey, 22 Bowell St. Street.

Although a handsome prize was offered for the best twins in the show there were no entries.

LATTA TEAM IS BANQUETTED

Two Hundred Attend Function in Honor of Champions

Plainfield—Great credit is due the members of the Plainfield Women's Institute, who under the leadership of Mrs. Donald Hall, President, feted the members of Latta baseball team by a banquet given in the Orange Hall on Tuesday evening in their honor and in appreciation of their success in winning the silver cup donated several years ago by Mr. Ernie Tummon of Tweed. This is the second time in five years the cup has been brought home by the Latta nine who anticipate now to continue their good work for the next two years and have permanent possession of the trophy.

Almost two hundred players, fans and invited guests with their families sat down to five tables heavily laden with the delicious meals the Plainfield ladies know so well how to prepare. The color scheme was red, white and blue, with sprays of maple leaves and silver baskets with cut flowers.

Mr. Earl S. Denyes made a very capable toastmaster, while Mrs. Harry Harrison presided at the piano, led the community singing and contributed a reading. The toast to "Our King and Country," was proposed by Mr. Geo. F. J. Dresson and the reply given by the Rev. F. G. Beamish. The toast to Mr. Tummon, who was obliged to attend to pressing business and who sent his regrets, the toast to the South Hastings Baseball League was ably given by the Rev. Masster and the response by Mr. Kenneth Kalbaugh. Mr. Harry Harrison proposed the toast to the Latta Baseball team, the reply being given by Mr. Arthur F. Hall. The toast to the Latta Junior Baseball team was proposed by Mr. Hilston Hall and the reply by Mr. Carl Platt. The support given by the fans and the guests was acknowledged in the toast proposed by Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., while Dr. R. O. Pearce replied. Those present from outside Plainfield were Dr. Harold and Mrs. Welsh of Madoc, Mr. and Mrs. Reaser also of Roslin and Dr. and Mrs. O. Hall of Tweed. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cameron of Belleville sent his regrets at being unable to be present.

On Saturday afternoon the members of Mrs. Harry Harrison's Sunday School class met at her home to do honor to one of their members, Mrs. Ralph Wilder (nee Elsie Adella Hamilton) who had been recently married and who had returned from her wedding trip in Havelock, Peterboro and other points. After spending some time in games, contests and singing an address was read by Mrs. Jack Green and Miss Phyrla Hall presented Mrs. Wilder with a beautiful silver tea service. Mrs. Wilder made a very suitable reply thanking the girls and teacher for their lovely gift, something she would always treasure and admire, and Mrs. McCrea on behalf of her home for the occasion. Mrs. Wilson at present her china is very warm welcome to her home. A delicious bunch of sandwiches, cake, salads, fresh melon, lemonade and ice cream was served. Others present were Mrs. Earl S. Denyes, assistant teacher, Mrs. James W. Hamilton and Miss Annie Hamilton.

Following is the address:

Dear Elsie—We, the members of the Sunday School class take this opportunity of conveying to you our sincere wishes on this the most happy time in your career. "Blest be the tie that binds" and may the mean more and more to you as you and your husband come on your way together.

We assure you that your untiring effort in connection with our class will not be forgotten. You have given freely of your time and talent in the work.

Please accept this token of the affection and good wishes of our class and we trust that as your life partner you are christian activities will develop into full maturity.

Yours sincerely, Christmas Day

When a new household finds its way

Among the myriad homes of earth

And rolls on its harmonious way

Into the boundless realms of space

Like a new star just sprung to birth.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School class

Phyrla Hall
Goldie Gow

Members of the class — Edith King, Helen Hall, Phyrla Hodgins, Goldie Gow, Nora Martin, Phyrla Hall, Helen Carlton, Margaret Carleton, Helen Hall, Olive Hall, Ruth unning, Teacher, Mrs. Harry McCreary, assistant teacher, Mrs. Eric S. Denyes.

On Saturday evening the many neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Hamilton and of their daughter Mrs. Ralph Wilder (nee Elsie Hamilton) gathered at their home to welcome Mr. Wilder to the community and to express the esteem in which Mrs. Wilder is held by those who have known her from childhood. A short program was given, the Rev. F. J. Pearson acting as chairman. Mr. and Mrs. Wilder were asked to take seats at the front and were presented with many valuable and useful gifts, and the following address which was read by Mrs. Charles Beatty:

"Dear Elsie and Ralph—

We your friends and neighbors have gathered here to-night as we could not let the event of your marriage pass without sharing a portion of your happiness with you. We wish to congratulate you Ralph on your choice of a life companion. We have known you as long as we have Elsie but we welcome you as a friend into our community. Your pleasant smile and cheerful face in Sunday School and church and all activities would be hard to fill.

We pray God help you both to realize the importance of the life you have begun and give you the power to travel together through the journey of life so that in the close you may find the highest reward for work well done.

Last memories of us should fade while you are building up your home and fortune, we ask you to keep these gifts, and remember chiefly the hopes and wishes that lie behind them.

Signed on Behalf of the people of the community

WHAT A WRECK CONSTIPATION MAKES
Constipation can dull your whole life. Headaches, poor complexions, tired, listless days are often the results. Also, many serious diseases.
Get rid of common constipation now with a ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.
ALL-BRAN brings you the two things your system needs to act naturally: "bulk" and vitamin B to help build the intestines.
Within the body, ALL-BRAN absorbs more than twice its weight in water—forms a soft mass, and gently clears the intestines of waste matter, naturally.
Pills and drugs seldom cure constipation. You just keep on increasing the dose and switching from one laxative to another.
Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day, three times daily if needed. Delicious as a cereal with milk or cream, or use in recipes. Sold by all grocers—made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

W. H. MORTON, PUBLISHER

"BEHIND THE EIGHT BALL"

It isn't the tyro who causes the majority of deaths and traffic accidents. It's the experienced driver who knows what to do with his hands, but doesn't use his head.

Last year in Ontario, 97.5 per cent of drivers in fatal accidents had operating experience of one year or more, and in non-fatal accidents the percentage was 97.2.

Recklessness puts many drivers "behind the eight ball," but reasonable caution and the firm determination that highway deaths must stop will keep every driver (and every pedestrian, too) in the safety zone.

Are you afraid of the dark, Mr. Driver? Figures indicate you should be! Deaths from automobile at night in Ontario increased 22.4 per cent from 1931 through 1936. Deaths from daylight crashes decreased 18.6 per cent during the same period.

In nearly all reports of night-time accidents, there is evidence that someone was driving faster than his eyes could see, or into darkness that wasn't dispelled by headlights or highway illumination. Human eyes are not like owl eyes. Light rays from headlights do not bend around curves or over hills.

The facts urge every driver to slow down when the sun goes down; to have two self-imposed speed limits—one for clear days, a slower one for nights and bad weather. Fear the dark as you do a fog, a snow storm, or a heavy rain—and make up your mind that highway deaths must stop.

It's easy for a driver to blame some defect in his car for an accident. Don't be misled by these flimsy excuses. Figures of the Accident Recording Division of Department of Highways show that in 1936, 9,951 out of 10,438 cars involved in accidents were in apparently good condition, and 577 of 626 cars involved in fatalities seemed to be "o.k." These statistics show clearly that the defect is usually curable by the appliaction of a little driving "horse sense."

TRUE SUCCESS

Success cannot be measured in terms of money, fame or pre-eminence, the Rev. James Gordon Gilkey of Springfield, Massachusetts, pointed out in his sermon at Riverside Church, New York. Persons who insist on measuring achievement thus wrongly doom themselves, he asserted, to an almost unendurable bitterness and a fatal sense of personal failure. Under existing conditions there is no possible way by which all of us, or even most of us, can win spectacular success in life. Whether we relish the prospect or not, we must brace ourselves to undertake commonplace careers, to live in small communities, to win meagre satisfactions and to receive disappointingly small financial returns."

Dr. Gilkey said a man's achievement in life might be measured by four things. The first is the extent of his loyalty to the fine traditions and noble institutions which have come to him from the past. In some cases those traditions and institutions are his family's heritage. The second measure is the extent to which he develops his own latent abilities. The third is effectiveness in the task assigned by the community. "The living group," he said, "entrusts the various jobs to certain men and whereever you find in our complex modern world you find a man who is handling effectively the piece of work assigned him there you find a man who can lay claim to real achievement. The fourth is the contribution to the unformed life of the future. Sometimes this is done by bringing into existence a child of unusual promise and then giving that child the best preparation for life which they know how to give."

Personal pride and an intricate economic life prevent the full measure of gratitude due God from man; said Bishop Coadjutor Stephen E. Keeler of Minneapolis at St. Thomas' Church, New York. He deplored the rarity of a thankful heart "which is not too characteristic of the human race and all too frequently is not found in the Christian life. The emphasis today is on humanity and on philosophic and humanitarian ideas which give us too high an opinion of ourselves."

"Miracles are not workings of the imagination," said Rev. Joseph A. Tyhridge, at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. "They are not pretty pictures presented so that we might be entertained for a short time. They are facts, and we as Catholics have no reason to be ashamed of them, even though we often hear them ridiculed. God chose miracles to prove He was God. . . Christ proved Himself God throughout His earthly life by His miracles. A miracle must be concerned with the senses because our contact with the world is achieved through the senses. Miracles are not contrary to nature or to reason. They are above nature, and beyond it and are reasonable manifestations of God's power. We Catholics should be able to explain them as such. We must be able to give a reasonable answer for the faith we have in Christ."

ONLY HEAVEN IS GIVEN AWAY

By Rose Darrough in Good Housekeeping

I bought a gay-roofed little house upon a sunny hill,
Where heaven is very close to earth and all the world is still.
It took my savings, every cent, although the cost was small,
But, oh, the lovely things I bought, and paid for not at all!
The sleepy valleys that below in fawny
sunshine lie,
The oaks that sprawl across their slopes and climb to meet the sky.
Stray winds that sing of other things than those our eyes may see,
Blue wisps of mist, and raveled clouds that,
fleeing, beckon me.
White suns of mad, glad April, October's wine to quaff,
On crystal winter mornings my hearth
fire's crackling laugh,
The silent stars that march at night so close above my head.
The sound of raindrops on the roof when
I am snug in bed.
For joint and beam and shingles gay I spent my savings small,
But on the lovely things God gave He put no price at all.

GREETINGS FROM THE HIGHLANDS, greetings from the lowlands, and great news of good crops and a bountiful harvest in store. Farmer folk in the Western United States are prone to boast of their superior products, biggest ever and finest ever, and all that—hence the New York Times columnist takes a sly poke at the boasters as follows:

"Banner harvests this year have simultaneously produced the usual crop of tall tales in which the rural imagination delights. Before Congress adjourned Indiana sent her delegation a tasseled corn stalk 16 feet 6 inches high which was proudly paraded through the Capitol. But Lee and Ralph Carr, farmers of Charleston, Mo., have not only grown a similar exhibit but solemnly affirm their land is so fertile they have to plant their corn and then run to get out of the way. Iowa comes forward with a 19-footer to be displayed at the State fair in the midst of complaints that motor traffic in the corn lands is halted because drivers can't see around the curves. Down in Texas they swear the popcorn is growing so rapidly in the intense heat that it pops before they can get the ears off."

FAKE MEDICAL SCHOOLS, WHERE DIPLOMAS CAN BE OBTAINED while you wait, almost, flourish, it is said in the United States, and release an army of dangerous quacks upon the country—and the United States is not the only country in the world where the laws are loose enough as to permit this sort of thing. Recently a Chicago newspaper determined to uncover the fake medical colony in that city and make a good job of it as described in The Digest.

"It's a miracle that Virginia Gardner is alive," Naprapaths and physiotherapaths diagnosed her complaint as arthritis, inflamed spleen, infected lungs, weak kidneys, heart trouble, low pulse, poor hemoglobin, secondary anemia, shrunken ligaments, nerves knotted together, rheumatism a misplaced vertebra, one leg shorter than the other, emotionality, and toxic poisons. The cures prescribed were red and green "chromaraya," herbacious pills, distilled water, an electric pad (without electricity) pepper, hot sauces, sleeping tablets, astral power, and love. These treatments did not help her ailments in the least for she had bone. She is a very healthy Chicago Tribune reporter who spent several weeks investigating quack doctors. Meanwhile the Illinois department of registration and education, in its fifth drive in two years, arrested twenty-four Chicago 'doctors" for unlicensed medical practice and last week warned six more."

U. S. CAMERAMAN BEINGS WOUNDED TO PEIPING

An ordinary baggage strap held this wounded Chinese civilian to the running board of the automobile as Sonny Boswell, U.S. serviceman, drove from Nanyuan to Peiping. The car is shown outside the historic Yung Ting men gate at Peiping.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Sept. 2nd, 1917.

Mr. Clem H. Ketcheson of Sidney Township, carried off the first prize in the field crop competition for wheat of two acres or more grown for sheaf or barley at the Toronto Exhibition. This was in Division No. 2 and was registered through the Frankford Agricultural Fair Association. Mr. R. H. Gay of Sidney secured second prize for exhibits in the same classes.

Under the auspices of the Royal Templars Knitting Circle a garden party was held last evening upon the lawn of the residence of Mr. Robert Anderson, 43 Hillside Street. The 15th Battalion Band was present and furnished excellent music.

The Belleville Fair is now in full swing. The management made no mistake when they said that the fair of 1917 would be one of the best if not the best ever held here. The attendance is very large.

Mr. and Mrs. George May of Hillier, recently visited their son, Mr. Stanley May, in this city.

30 YEARS AGO

MANUFACTURERS DISPLAY WARES IN FINE STYLE

Exhibit of Cars And Trucks Draws Large Crowd at Fair

INSECT SHOWING

Entomological Bureau Gives Farmers Sound Advice

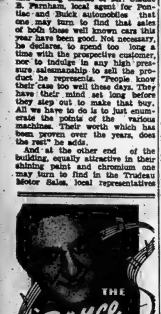
Women prefer fine upholstering, better fittings and look when the question of buying a new family car comes up.

But the man of the house who will probably foot the bill wants ruggedness, a good strong silent motor, a detailed plan of the inner workings of the machine. Fine finish comes second.

People, when they visit the interior decorator's want to be assured that they want before they enter. Nowadays the brand name of the company is the thing. Good products sell best.

In spite of present day varieties of canned, goods and sealed products for the family table, home-cooked meals from nature's own bin are the best.

The hardware dealer must stock the right lines, the up-to-date necessities for home comfort, the paint dealer just the well known brands.



This do we learn from a visit to the Manufacturer's Building on the Bellerville Fair Grounds, during the week while the city's annual and largest event is in session. Here handsome daily and nightly parade the aisles walled by the booths of Bellerville's and district's manufacturing companies of the country.

Not garish nor flamboyant or dazzling are the tastefully disposed booths of the outside midway, may be, nor as colored as the Fair's prettiest display of agricultural section, but simple, artistically colored booths with the finest products of daily living are on display. It is to the building the housekeepers gravitate for the lessons they may learn.

Buick Exhibit

There is for example, the sleek and shining exhibit of Mr. Claude R. Farnham, local agent for Pontiac and Buick automobiles that one may turn to find that sales of both these well known cars this year have been good. Not necessarily declares, to spend too long a time with the prospective customer, nor to indulge in any high pressure salesmanship to sell the product he represents. "People know their cars too well these days. They have their mind set and before they step out to make that buy. All we have to do is just demonstrate the points of the various machines. Their worth when has been proven over the years, does the rest" he added.

And at the other end of the building, equally attractive in their shining paint and chromium one may turn to find in the Trudeau Motor Sales, local representatives of one of the world's best known products, Fords and Fordsons, that business is equally good. "No need for us to explain too much about our cars either," point the salesmen busy in this exhibit booth with the numerous customers who wish to enter the machines on display, sit behind the wheel of the standing cars, examine the upholstery and thoroughly inspect the inner workings. "We are standing well and pleased with business. We believe it is a good thing to have an exhibit because no matter how well known the product, it must be kept before the buyer's eye." shown above are cars and trucks by Holgate Motors.

Walker's Hardware

To the Walker Hardware booth, artistically decorated by Herb. Fox, the visitor turns to find a shining and colorful array of Aladdin lamps, famed gasoline lamps that turn night into day. Stoved in steel, rugged in design and construction, the lamps provide the white illumination for a second display of well known Regina paint with which old objects can be renewed and the home, inside and out, changed entirely in structure and

Gold Medal Products

The Gold Medal Products booth, operated by the National Grocers, gleaming in soft undertones of jam and jelly and preserves in stacked glass containers through which hidden lights gleam in sunset red. But there are other stacked and countered products sturdy, every-day table needs of dependable brand and high quality. All that the grocer has on his shelves may here be seen, examined and tasted. Not only the canned and preserved but the ingredients for the busy house who wants to make a cake, or pie or homemade bread.

John Lewis Co.

John Lewis Company of Front Street, agent for Coleman Company, one of Canada's biggest producers of Coleman lamps, heaters, stoves, even tiny but effective trailer heaters," a new accessory born with the ever increasing trailer. In this booth hang the lamps whose soft radiant light the other numerous uses to which gasoline may be put. Water heaters which will supply enough hot water for the home, gasoline ironers. The compact, trailer or camp heater, and any other sturdy articles of life time wear.

Weese And Onderdonk

And at the colorful Weese and Onderdonk booth, local agents for the Canadian Tire Corporation one can fill your order for a half dozen collier pins or a motor boat. Specializing entirely in tires for to-day table needs of dependable brand and high quality. All that the grocer has on his shelves may here be seen, examined and tasted. Not only the canned and preserved but the ingredients for the busy house who wants to make a cake, or pie or homemade bread.

E. D. Mott

Few are the houses in Belleville these days that do not boast of modern hard wood flooring. The floor of a lifetime, and the daily saver of needless hours of sweeping, scrubbing and dusting. And at this booth any requirement can be filled by E. D. Mott, local dealer in wood of any description. and building supplies of any nature. But not only may this be had unfinished, Mr. Mott is able to equip the kitchen of any home with the most modern of all cabinet work, superior in most cases to the quantity manufactured orders. It may be built to specification, and advice on any building matter, interior or exterior, will be gladly given by Mr. Mott and salesmen, who sprightly display some of the finest examples of the modern cabinet maker's art.

C. N. I. For Blind

In starting contrast to the display of the large manufacturers of the country, the keen and alert workmen who turn these products out, is the booth of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, whose Dominion organization has brought back hope and resurrected faith in the possibilities of many a blind one of the country to whom only the darkness and ugliness of the grave had existed. It has made men of thousands, and of women, it has brought them the use to hands that once sat quietly folded in their laps. For at this booth one may purchase any of the scores of colorful and useful articles made by the craftsmen and craftswomen of the darkness. On the counter, heaped in orderliness, are the perfectly finished house dresses, aprons, table cloths, useful little embroidered and stitched cloth articles, all made by sightless needlewerkers from the Toronto Institute. "And men, we don't just know how many we have, they are so many." From the work benches of the blind men have come the useful wicker-ware vases, baskets, flower holders, window boxes and dozens of other hand fashioned homecrafters. And true to its great heart, Belleville is buying wisely and well.

Thousands Visit Insect Display

A praying mantis, queer creature of nature whose grotesqueness and utter ferocity in the insect world has given him bad repute among those who do not know him, will not bite you. Thousands of Bellevilla and district people have found this out in the Manufacturers Building, where probably for the first time official recognition has been taken of the large green and brown insect in an unofficial way. For at the booth of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, arranged by Mr. A. B. Baird and assistants at the local Dominion Entomological Laboratory, perhaps for the first time in the country, a full display of the praying mantis has been made, just to show people what he is like and how he lives.

In the glass case, where he is provided with his food of crickets and grasshoppers a dozen or more of the mantis are kept. Fair officials may have overlooked a bet when arranging for paid attractions with whin, to please those who attend. For mantis has become one of the biggest drawing cards within the bars of the exhibition park. Thousands have found what he looks like, what he feeds on. Have found that he is a beneficial creature, and that he should not be destroyed as an ugly pest. He has never been known to bite, except the harmful grasshopper and cricket which he hunts with determined savagery, three to each, holding them in his stout fore legs and nibbling daintily. When at rest he assumes a peculiar praying position from which he gets his name.

But the praying mantis is not the only exhibit shown. There are dozens of other insects and insect pests with full information concerning them, printed and given verbally in detail by those in charge. Official information supplied by expert entomologists of the department which has been set up by the government just for the purpose of keeping under control those pests that would wipe out Canada in but a few years if left unchecked. The local Laboratory, largest and finest in the world—another fact among the majority—is but one unit of the Entomology Branch of this department. And it is a booty appreciated not only by the serious minded agriculturists who is finding out just what the grasshopper is doing to his crops and what to do about it, but the city folks, too, are interested in what is going on about them. Not only are the pests of the field and orchard clearly explained, but the pests of the home, too. There is, for example, the dainty little moth of the well dressed dowager who confidentially sought out the chief and as confidentially asked: "We rented out home to a tenant some time ago. Recently he left. Afterward we found a number of small, red spots on the floor. I had one put in a bottle. Here it is. Could you tell us what it is?"

"It's a bed bug, Madam," informed the chief after a brief survey. "Any good insect poison will kill him."

Farmer Looked After in Other Ways

But even further does the assistance of the Federal Government extend. On an opposite booth is a display of bees, bees, bees, farms and sheds, all as information for the modern agriculturist. Here, too, are pamphlets on every phase of bee keeping and how to get the highest returns from honey, how to build stands, further models of dairy cows and information as to her qualities and keep and worth when properly fed and housed. All information regarding agricultural problems will be gladly sent anyone who has questions seeking information of any nature free of charge. It is information that has been collected and compiled by experts. Simply address your query, the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, visitors are told.

Perhaps the last stop of the night in the tour of this excellent building would be at the booth of the Rainbow Ice Cream Company, local makers of one of the season's most delicious luxuries, where assistants in the attractively furnished and decorated booth will be busy handing out refreshment to tis many patrons.

FUNCTIONAL (NOT ORGANIC) HEART DISEASE

When a patient consults a physician complaining of shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, and pain over heart or breastbone, naturally patient and physician may both suspect heart disease. If, also, there is early fatigue, general weakness, dizziness and profuse sweating, real or organic heart disease must surely be present.

That many of the above symptoms may be present without true heart disease was definitely shown during and after the war, and even more recently during the three or four years when jobs were difficult. All these symptoms may be due to what is known as "Functional" heart disease. Functional means that while the heart (or other organ) is perfectly sound in its structure nevertheless something is interfering with the way it does its work. In true or organic disease there is something wrong with the structure of the organ—valve not closing properly, fibrous tissue taking place of elastic tissue, or other condition.

The cause of functional heart disease is not definitely known. It is sometimes called "irritable heart" and "soldier's heart". The factors that predispose or bring on the condition more easily are heredity or of constitutional weakness, poor food or wrong kind of food, overwork, recovering from various infectious fevers, focal infections (teeth, tonsils, sinuses), and early menstruation.

"It may be caused by financial anxiety, family troubles, emotional conflicts, physical and mental strain."

Dr. W. E. Nesbit, San Antonio, in the Texas Journal of Medicine, tells us that the prognosis (chances) as to life are good, but many of these cases do not seem to improve despite treatment.

"Treatment consists in assuring the patient that he has no organic disease" has been found. The cause and the effect of the ailment produces symptoms should be treated, by supplying a healthful daily program regarding food, rest and should be worked out. A mild sedative (quieting medicine) may be prescribed, but drugs to slow down or stimulate the heart should not be used.

"In my opinion, it sound advice because it is not the heart, but the mind, or the individual's worried anxious, upset that is causing the heart symptoms.

WALLBRIDGE W.I.

The August meeting of Wallbridge Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. H. Jeffery with a large attendance. The president, Mrs. Jas. Sine took charge of the programme which opened with community singing. The Roll Call was answered with "My excitent item of History." After the business was dealt with Mrs. W. Holmes, convener of Group 4, continued the programme. Mrs. C. Lloyd gave the Current Events; Mrs. H. Jeffery gave a fine reading and Mrs. Frank Tucker also dealt with the topic, "Value of Business for Women." After singing the National Anthem lunch was served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Father Objects to His Daughter's Dancing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

While the advice given in your columns is sensible, and you never "rob", there is one thing to which I take exception. You continually urge young people to go to dancing schools and become expert dancers. You suggest this in the interests of popularity. Why should young people be popular? There's enough trouble in the world as it is.

My wife and I had an ideal married life, and neither of us danced. I am now a widower, with three daughters and I am opposed to their dancing. When I discovered that they were in the habit of sneaking out, one at a time, and going to dances, with the two remaining home lying to protect the one who was sneaking, I said the next time it occurred, I'd lock the door, and the dancing girl could spend the night on the lawn—bisnaked.

The trouble in the world at the present time is due to the fact that people have abandoned church for dancing and movies. Bible reading is set aside in favor of light literature. I hope that a woman in your position will try to make her readers more serious-minded instead of urging them to dance.

Indignant Father.

Would that any word of mine would give you a more liberal attitude toward dancing, which, by the way of thinking is a beautiful exercise, well calculated to keep youngsters out of mischief! Dancing goes back to the earliest history of the race and was frequently part of religious expression. Wasn't it Miriam the sister of Moses, who danced before the army, to hearten them?

When young people are dancing, they cannot indulge in either parking, necking or drinking, which, you'll agree, are a bit more risky. And as for locking the door on the daughter who "sneaked" to a dance, it's my contention she should not have had to sneak. Rather she should put on her best dress and go out open and above-board.

No parents ever settled anything by locking the door on a child.

Youthful Husband Has No Sense of Responsibility

Dear Miss Fairfax:

If it were not for the baby, I would go back to work—and self-respect—thankfully. But what is to be done when there is a beautiful year-old boy to be considered? I want the best for him, and when I try to talk to my mother and father they say: "You were warned. We told you that boy you insisted on marrying was no good."

As if that helps me now, when I know their warning was only too true! At 20, my husband is 12. He stays out every night till 2.00 and 3.00 o'clock, comes home quarrelsome and under the influence of liquor. He has had four jobs since we've been married, and is at present unemployed. If mother would only take the baby, I have been promised my old job back. My little sister, aged 16, says she will take care of the baby, if mother refuses.

Distracted

Not much is to be expected, I am afraid, of the type and mind of 22 who has had four jobs and is at present unemployed. Your best bet is to persuade your parents to look after the baby while you go back to your old job. I congratulate you on having no foolish pride about this, as so many girls have.

You and the baby deserve some consideration, even if you did marry in the face of family opposition. Make sure of the job, and then the baby over to the 16-year old sister. She will take him to your old home, apparently for a visit, and I miss my guess if your parents continue in their "mad".

Arthur Treacher starred in "Step Lively, Jeeves" with Patricia Ellis and Robert Kent now playing the Capitol.

Slot-Machine Racket Exposed In Film Story—"Jeeves," the Perfect Butler

A thrilling and courageous story of the billion-dollar slot machine racket in a big city, brought Claire Trevor, Lloyd Nolan and Akim Tamiroff to the screen of the Capitol Theatre last night in "King of Gamblers", as smash hit No. 1 on another grand double bill.

With Tamiroff in the title role, the story daringly shows the link between the racket and officials in high places who receive a "cut" in the steady stream of profits from the "one armed bandits," as the slot machines are known to the underworld, and the connection between this racket with other gangland activities.

Miss Trevor portrays a night club entertainer with whom the underworld king is in love. She does love him, however, but falls in love with Nolan, a newspaper reporter, when she dances at the club.

When a friend is murdered by Tamiroff because she knows too much about his activities, Miss Trevor and Nolan go to help her find the killer, not realizing that it is Tamiroff. Nolan begins to piece the clues and discovers that Tamiroff is the guilty man. The climax arrives when Tamiroff, trapped, and his racket smashed, attempts to avenge himself on Nolan and Miss Trevor.

"King of Gamblers" is the first picture in which Nolan ears the leading role. He has heretofore played mobsters, villains and such, but the popularity has become so great despite the fact that the studio has decided to give him a more sympathetic role.

The supporting cast includes Porter Hall, Helen Burgess, Harvey Stevens, Frank Jaquet and a fine list of other supporting players.

F. G. Wodehouse's "Step Lively, Jeeves"

Crime does pay, or at least the movie version of it does, is the startling discovery of Alan Dinehart, player-producer and former crook roles, currently featuring as a hard-working confidence man and swindler in "Step Lively, Jeeves" a second film at the stirring Capitol, now playing. Dinehart is the butler which is currently at the Capitol Theatre as his 9th role, Arthur Treacher again in the title role.

With a long and interesting background of suave portrayals of unscrupulous characters, Dinehart is one movie actor whom Hollywood producers cannot "type". He knows all the approaches and all the "angles" of the film-flam salesmen occasionally do tackle him, Dinehart offers suggestions for the improvement of technique.

George Givot is Dinehart's coworker in "Step Lively, Jeeves", and the pair attempt to palm off the unsuspecting valet as a real earl and long-missing heir on Gloria Dickson, wife of Dinehart's sister. Jeeves' only two friends in America, Patricia Ellis and Robert Kent, featured in the romantic leads, help the valet foil the plot, but not until many hilarious events have befallen.

"Slim" and "Hollywood Screen Test"

Pat O'Brien and Stuart Erwin tell the story of electric linemen.

"Slim", a Warner Bros. melodrama dealing with a class of young men whom the movies have overlooked up to now—the lads who string high tension power lines across the country—will open as the feature attraction at the Belle today (Thursday) for two days, matinee daily.

Co-stars in the picture, and pals in the story, are Pat O'Brien and Henry Fonda, the latter carrying the title role and the former acting the part of "Red" who teaches "Slim" the business.

The girl whom they both love is the attractive and capable Margaret Lindsay, who plays a hospital nurse, as she did in the recent "Green Light" and in many another picture.

Nine-tenths of the action of "Slim" is outdoors, and there are many thrills in the many scenes depicting these perils and thrills of the wire-strinngers, who scan 100 foot towers, clamber up and down them, and put into position the strands that carry energy, sometimes braving blizzards to do so.

J. Farrell MacDonald is the boss of the crew to which O'Brien and Fonda are attached. One of the gals of the boys is Stuart Erwin. Other players in the noteworthy cast include Joseph Sawyer, John Litel, Craig Reynolds, Dick Purcell and James Nolan.

"Slim" was made from the best-selling novel of that name, by Willard MacGregor. We believe you will enjoy seeing "Slim".

"Hollywood Screen Test"

The millions of movie fans who have been and a fine list of other supporting players. Jeeves" actors" of the screen, was second on the Belle screen tonight and Friday, matinee and evening featuring the new movie find, Catherine Hughes.

In the picture Catherine goes to Hollywood for her screen test. The opening action shows the film arrival from the air. The camera follows her through the studios, then the scene of interesting, mysterious inside details that fascinate the film fans.

Catherine enters the make-up department, where beauty secrets of the make-up specialist are revealed. Then comes her voice test, to permit the public, as well as Catherine, to see how songs are suited to the camera. Next the sequence features Catherine singing "I Feel That Foolish Feeling". Interest is added by singing a later synchronized with the action, which is filmed separately.

Various production details are unfolded to Catherine as she goes through her test.

Then the newly discovered Hollywood sidelights of a preview, a farewell party, plus several scenes in Hollywood with a real-life "Jeeves" complete a splendid varied program of screen entertainment.

SASKATCHEWAN PREMIER AND BRIDE ARRIVE HOME

W. J. Patterson, Premier of Saskatchewan and former "bachelor" is shown arriving at Regina with his bride, following a honeymoon in the United States. Premier Patterson married his bride in New York and to the surprise of many people. Mrs. Patterson, the former Florence Donnelly, had been employed some years ago by the Saskatchewan government, but more recently had been a stenographer in Toronto. The newly weds' arrival at Regina was witnessed only by a few close friends and reporters.

BEAUTROUS PREVIEWER

May Francis, beautiful screen star, is shown as she attended the premiere of "The Prisoner of Zenda" at Hollywood recently. For the premiere, of the motion picture in New York, publicity men have made arrangements to transport the entire population of Zenda, Ont., to New York to advertise the picture. The entire population, however, is only a few hundred, most of whom are related to the mayor. Vernon Prevzer, being either brothers, sisters, aunts or cousins. The citizens will be flown to New York where, according to press agents, they will be quartered at a "sumptuous" hotel. Reason for the publicity stunt is that Zenda, the town was named from Anthony Hope's novel, "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Numerous houses collapsed under the fierce wind, burying their occupants. Observatory instruments ceased to function after registering a 135-mile-an-hour velocity for the typhoon. The storm spread havoc in the harbor and boiling sea swept the entrance of a block into the city, carrying with them the 2,000-ton coastal steamer Anlee.

The ship was picked up like a piece of driftwood and deposited 300 feet on Prague Roadway, with the prow submerged. The British three-funnel ship Tilawa and the Japanese liner Asama Maru were driven aground.

FRACTURES LEG IN COLLISION

C. Drymann, 61-year-old Pittsburg motorist, sustained a fractured left leg and was taken to the Belleville General Hospital as the result of injuries received, when the automobile, which he was driving, allegedly crashed into a truck on Highway No. 2, two miles east of Shannonville early today.

Shortly before 7.00 a.m. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervins investigated an accident east of Shannonville, where he found, that a motor car had collided with a truck. Investigations revealed that Mr. C. Drymann, Pittsburg, who was proceeding east had attempted to pass another motor car, travelling in the same, failing to observe an approaching truck, driven by C. L. Turcott, Collins Bay.

Mr. Drymann's car collided head-on with the heavier truck, with the force of the impact hurling him against the steering wheel, but it was as he slumped below the wheel, that his injured man is believed to have sustained the fractured leg.

Constable Ervine assisted in removing the injured man to Dr. Eckett's office in Shannonville, where first aid was administered while Mr. Drymann's car was badly damaged during the impact.

Belleville, Ont.,

When Was the City Hall Erected?

Dear Sir—

Much uncertainty exists as to the date when the City Hall in Belleville was erected. By-law No. 1064, January 19th, 1864, By-law No. 132 was passed, and it authorized the issuing for £202 for enlarging the market. By-law No. 1064 provided for the purchase of land to enlarge the market and for the issuing of $30,000.00. By-law No. 202, passed on June 1st, 1874, was to debenture the remainder of the Municipal Loan Fund of $7,846.80 in terms of the Municipal Act. These were not printed in the old consolidation made 40 years ago as they were considered obsolete. Nevertheless these dates might throw some light on the date of the erection of the City Hall.

Perhaps some of your readers may recollect the date of the erection of the City Hall or may have some information which would disclose this date. The building itself does not appear to contain any date of erection in the manner in which such dates are some times inserted. I am interested in interesting to hear from your readers in this matter. If the date can be ascertained it might be well to have a tablet or one in the building containing the date.

Sinking From Depths.

Members of the Havock's crew at Chirrallar said the destroyer, sighting the approaching torpedo, had slid astern and dropped five depth bombs.

Then the Havock signalled to other ships in the squadron and a watch was kept over a 15-mile radius. Soon oil appeared on the surface, indicating, the seaMen believed, that the submarine had been sunk.

STARTED CAREER 50 YEARS AGO

School Inspector H. J. Clarke Entered Medical School in Toronto, Jan. 1, 1887

When wooden-framed slates, with their dangling little pieces of sponge, played an important part in the learning of old-fashioned readin', 'ritin' and 'rithmetic, and scribblers used almost exclusively by few and far between, Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., of the Public School Inspector for South Hastings, just fifty years ago, yesterday, entered the teaching profession. A vocation he still carries on, included in his post, of inspector.

Fifty years ago he entered the teaching profession by going to Madoc to attend the County Model School in that village. During this year, Mr. Clarke, one of the best known Inspectors of the Province, has carried on adjusting himself to the times as teaching methods progressed from wooden benches and straight-backed desks, to the modern, air-cooled classrooms, with their shining accessories. He has watched the advent, and participated in the teaching of a new curriculum, in which subjects undreamed of in the older days now play a leading part.

"It is a long and varied experience I have had in teaching since that day," says Mr. Clarke, reflecting, "but I have enjoyed it, every bit of it." Keen as ever about his work and zestful in the knowledge that he has helped many a struggling youngster along the path to higher walks or positions of national scope, Mr. Clarke shows by the very fact that have, to him, been full and replete.

The late Mr. W. Mott, former principal of Queen Alexandra School was a member of the same class as Mr. Clarke.

Inspector Clarke as a young man in his twenties served many years on the staff of the Belleville High School, being one of the most popular teachers.

Today British destroyers still were on the trail of this or other submarine aggressors, with permission to sink them if they found them.

Authoritative sources said the decision to send more destroyers into the Mediterranean carried full French approval. France has warned she will not tolerate molestation of shipping in waters vital to her trade and colonial communications.

Disposition of Navy.

One British flotilla, consisting of nine destroyers, is engaged in the non-intervention patrol of the western Mediterranean. Two others, totalling 17 ships, normally based at Malta, are on an autumn cruise off the Greek and Italian coasts.

Apparently the reinforcements for the Spanish patrol will be drawn from the cruising flotillas.

Under present plans an additional destroyer flotilla is expected to be stationed permanently at Gibraltar within a few months.

TRACK RECORD BROKEN TWICE BY TOM GRATTON

London Pacer Wins 2.14 Class And Paces Two Miles in 2.07 Flat

EXCELLENT RACING

Scottie Gratton Easily Wins Second Feature 2.28 Class

If the exhibition of speed, shown in the first day's races at the Belleville Fair is any criterion of that which is to follow, then racing patrons of this district are in for a wonderful week. Tom Gratton, gelded son of Lee Harvester, owned by the Pine Ridge Stables of London and perfectly teamed by Louis James, broke the track record of 2.07¼ on two occasions on Wednesday, when he easily won the 2.14 Class, featured race of the afternoon card. He paced two miles in 2.07 flat and scored that little distressed in his effort. The last heat was 2.09, which makes three heats better than 2.10, splendid racing in any man's path.

Chief opposition was supplied by Simcoe Harvester, sensational bay stallion owned by J. T. Ryerse of Pentand, who has won all his horses here on many occasions. Getting none of the best of the getaway in the first heat after having drawn the pole, Simcoe Harvester laid off the pace the first half with Tom Gratton trailing him in front. The mile was covered in 1.04. Coming out of the back turn both Midnight Gratton and Simcoe Harvester took out and it was a merry chase up the back stretch but the black horse was not letting go. Turning home, the three pacers came as a team in 15 seconds with the winner having daylight between him and the second horse. In the second heat Tom Gratton went to the front but Champion with Simcoe Harvier went along with him and the clip was fast to the quarter. The pace slackened but in the stretch all came out and another mile in 2.07 was the result. The third heat was two seconds slower but withal a good race.

In the 2.28 Class, Scottie Gratton teamed by Clifford Champion was easily the class of all through the race. Walter Ray, a three-year-old colt, who starts in the futurity in Toronto next week, the chief opposition although Lou Bennett managed to sneak home a second place in the first heat with the young pacer. Miss Senator Patch, Chapman had top much speed for the rest of the field and although the time was only 2.14 for each heat, the racing was excellent. The track record was formerly held by Lou Canot, made in 1927 with "Babe" Kimhirst driving. Tomorrow and before the week is over the marks of 2.07 will likely be broken. The results;

Tom Gratton, Pine Ridge Stables, London, (James) 1 1 1

Simcoe Harvester, J. T. Ryerse Pentang (Champion) 2 2 2

Worthy Widow, B. D. W. Hodgins, Lindsay (Easton) 4 4 4

Time: 2.07, 2.07, 2.09. (First two heats track records).

2.28 Class

Scottie Gratton, C. B. Lawrence, Durham (Champion) 1 1 1

Walter Ray, W. J. Booth, Simcoe (Litt) 2 2 3

Miss Senator Patch, L. G. Bennett, Port Hope (Bennett) 3 3 4

Dr. Mark, G. R. Litt, Toronto (Champion) 5 5 2

Madeline Carrol, B. McKane Kingston (McKane) 4 6 5

LIONEL CONACHER ENTERS POLITICS

Noted Hockey Player Liberal Candidate In Toronto Riding

Toronto, Sept. 2.—(CP)—Lionel Conacher, recognized as Canada's greatest all-round athlete, was named Liberal candidate in Toronto Broadcade riding in the Oct. 6 Ontario election last night by a convention unanimous vote. Another name was brought before the meeting.

Conacher, once a University of Pittsburgh Football star but more noted for his hockey activities, enjoyed one of the best seasons of his long ice career with Montreal Maroons of the National League last winter. He was outstanding at baseball, lacrosse and wrestling and once boxed Jack Dempsey in an exhibition.

Conacher told last night's convention he was interested in youth and had received assurance from Premier Hepburn a program for youth in the province would receive such a sizeable amount of the $5,000 to play hockey with Montreal Canadiens.

Never on a championship lacrosse team, Conacher was among the best players in the Dominion. On the diamond, he was largely instrumental in bringing to the teams he played with Toronto City and Ontario titles. He won the lightweight Canadian Boxing title in 1920 and each following year was considered good enough to meet Jack Dempsey in an exhibition bout.

He golfs in the 80's once could run 100 yards in close to ten seconds, hunts and fishes. He once stepped on the tennis courts to play a spell, raced in rubber-soled shoes and won it. Of his one season in the Toronto Senior baseball league he said "I was always getting the baseballs mixed up with tigeballs."

Gives Up Sport

Conacher said today he had given up sports for politics. The "Big Train", said he would take part in no more sports as a competitor, but was "willing to lend a hand in some ways if called on". He has been successful in business enterprises outside professional sports.

Born in Toronto 36 years ago, Conacher entered sports as a senior football player and when he graduated from the ranks of Junior in the early 1920's he was recognized as the greatest the country ever produced. In later years his gridiron career has been shoved to background by a brilliant succession of seasons in professional hockey.

But before he turned pro he attained fame at baseball, lacrosse, boxing and wrestling.

He starred with Toronto Argonauts in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union as a rule-driving backfielder, a marathon kicker and a terrific tackler. Later he attended University of Pittsburgh, playing football there and lining up with Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets of the United States Amateur Hockey League.

In 1926 Conacher turned professional and thereafter he confined his career to the ice, except for brief ventures into professional wrestling and professional Canadian Football.

Unanimous Vote

Conacher, chosen by an overwhelming vote of Canadian Sports writers in 1927 as the greatest Canadian Football player of all time, took up rugby in 1911. He was ten years old then and weighed 95 pounds and on the sandlots of Toronto starred as a middle wing with the Middle Capitols.

The greatest all-round athlete ever produced in Canada, the "Big Train" joined the Argonauts in 1921 and while with that team was the chief factor in bringing it two interprovincial Union and one Dominion championships. Conacher also played on one Ontario Rebel and one Provincial Junior Championship team.

In 1923 Conacher left to study at Bellefonte Academy where he took Intio United States football and played amateur hockey with Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets. His prowess on the gridiron obtained for him a coaching position on the staff of Rutgers University at New Brunswick, N.J., in 1926.

Great Lacrosse Player

That was three years after he had turned professional with the Toronto Jackets, as a team, entered the National Hockey League. A year earlier, he turned down what then was almost a phenomenal offer of $5,000 to play hockey with Montreal Canadiens.

Never on a championship lacrosse team, Conacher was among the best players in the Dominion. On the diamond, he was largely instrumental in bringing to the teams he played with Toronto City and Ontario titles. He won the lightweight Canadian Boxing title in 1920 and each following year was considered good enough to meet Jack Dempsey in an exhibition bout.

He golfs in the 80's once could run 100 yards in close to ten seconds, hunts and fishes. He once stepped on the tennis courts to play a spell, raced in rubber-soled shoes and won it. Of his one season in the Toronto senior baseball league he said "I was always getting the baseballs mixed up with tigeballs."

CANNIFTON LOSES TO NAPANEE BEES IN SECOND GAME

Score is 10-5 With Losers Outhitting Winners in Contest

2 HURLERS SHELLED

Napanee Bees evened their intermediate "C" series playdowns in the O.B.A.A. with the Cannifton nine here by virtue of a 10 to 5 victory on the home lost yesterday. Behind the clubs, each team won one game, the third and deciding tilt to be played at Napanee on Saturday.

Errors and wild pitches paved the way for the Napanee lot down as they touched the deliveries of Harold Switzer for a total of 11 hits, while the homsters made the most of eight safeties to drive them into ten runs. Bob Simpson started on the mound for the visitors in the first game but in the fifth he took the count again, but failed to score again, while the Napanees batting pushed a brace of counters across the plate in the sixth and seventh in the eighth, Simpson made a decided stand in their half of the ninth as Sinfield got Wagar off his succession, the former being at third however, L. Jarrell also hit in the frame, but the Cannifton boys could not score, as the Bees tightened up in the field, Simpson and Meens hit timely in the fifth as Cannifton gained twice.

Inability to Hit in Pinches Hurts Team's Chances

KELLEHER STARS

Strikes Out 15 With Blaker Hitting 2 Triples And Ronsky Homer

Toronto, Sept. 2—(CP)—Belleville's representatives in the Ontario Baseball Agalaeur Association junior playdowns were defeated 6-5 here yesterday in the first game of the series by Toronto St. Cyprians after 11 innings.

It was hard luck that beat them. In the dying innings of the game two occasions Belleville had men on base but could not make a hit to make the runners count. They made fewer errors than their opponents, had more hits and had the better of play everywhere but in the pinches. Joe Kelleher pitched first class ball, allowing only eight hits throughout. He had 15 strikeouts against's team. Blaker, who pounded some pitchers practically at will, and he well deserved a win.

Kelleher Stars

Belleville opened the scoring with a run in the first half on the first errors by Brisen and Mills of the Saints and an infield out for Ronsky. Toronto tied on Collins' score. St. Cyprians came back in the second with two runs on a hit into the lead. One run in the third and two in the first of the fifth again saw Belleville one run to the good. The score was again tied in the second half of the fourth inning. A free-for-all the Toronto team managed to scrape together the winning run. At the start of the inning Pulsford came to bat for Toronto. He hit a single. Then the commotion started. Someone said Umpire Curzon had called time, and in the ensuing argument manager Cook of the Belleville team was ejected from the park.

Ronsky Second Time

Eventually Rolsky went back to the plate. He singled again. McKivie ascended him to second. Mingo filed out and Jackie Dane hit a long roller along the third base line which Johnny Ronsky just failed to get and Polosky crossed the plate with the winning run.

Feature of the game was the pitching of Joe Kelleher. He also batted in one of his team's runs. Blaker with four times at bat got a single in six times at bat was responsible for three more runs, while Johnny Ronsky completed the scoring with a homer. The fielding and batting of Mingo, who also got one home run, and the batting of Polosky, Cousal and Dane were the highlights of the Toronto teams attack. The second game will be played in Belleville Labor Day morning.

CHARLES SULMAN WINS "JITNEY" TOURNAMENT

In keeping with the Belleville fair the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club held a special "Fair Jitney" tournament on Wednesday. A large number of local lawn bowlers availed themselves of the games, while a large gallery of patrons enjoyed the ends from the Fair Grounds side of the fence. The tournament was triples and saw a veteran bowler as skip, a lady and a novice or first year bowler on each team. First, with three wins high was the team of Skip Charles Sulman, Mrs. Geo. Watkin and George Pauley. Second with three wins was Harry Williams, skip; Mrs. Norm Edwards and Mrs. Houston. One win high was won by Mr. Zeran, skip, Mrs. L. Davis and Homer Townsend.

Archie Duffield, former resident of Barrie, who was connected with the old-Sarnia Imperials of their infant days, yesterday accepted the position of coach of the Belleville Football team. Mr. Duffield is brother-in-law of Howard Hunn-Mingo, Ronsky, Sacrifices—McKivie. Double plays—Mingo to Cousaul. Left on bases—Belleville 12, Toronto 8. Bases on ball—off Kelleher 1, Mills 1, Nolet 2. Strikeouts—Kelleher 15, Mills 1, Nolet 3. Hits off—Mills 9 in 6 innings, Nolet 5 in 4⅓ innings, Kelleher 8 in 11 innings. Hit by pitcher, by Noble, McDonald. Winning pitcher—Noble. Losing pitcher—Kelleher. Umpires —Wortley, Curzon.

ter, Frank Polwell, two well known rugby players of this city and is employed in the motive power division of the Canadian National Railways. Coach Duffield took charge of the local squad last night and early attendance indicated he would stand for no fooling during practice periods. "It's only three weeks until we open the season and we've much work to do, and every boy in Belleville who is desirous of playing football to attend every practice at the Cricket field and be prepared to work," stressed Coach Duffield last night. Incidentally the flood lights have been turned on and nocturnal workouts are the order of the night with new and more powerful lights.

We were—talking with Johnnie "one man gang" Lalonde, of the Football Hall of Fame yesterday, and going to have the finest equipped football squad in this part of the country. Our sports club is providing the very latest in football togs and the players. The club ordered these new fangled silk, tight-fitting jerseys, set out for the boys from the United States, while the helmets and shoes will be the very last of the latest models. Yes sir, we're going to have the best looking football team in the district. Johnnie "Tex" Rickard predicted Johnnie's "What's fine old topper, but what are we going to do with all of these splendid uniforms" we asked Johnnie skeptically. "Aw we won the hockey championship, didn't we, and the football championships will be just as easy," predicted Johnnie. Well the Fair Board will look to their laurels next winter, we know of at least three high school pockets on the Fair Board and residence in Peterboro since last year's ice carnival.

On Sunday the annual "King" Rogers Cup punt sailing races will take place, promoted by the Belleville Yacht Club. This is an annual event and may be introduced as a Sunday race here in order to arouse to interest the lighter craft. Secretary Ernie Bakbree intimated.

Jack Bush's Canniton Athletics ran into an abrupt stop at Trenance yesterday, when the hopes-fuses reverse their interpretation O.B.A.A. round with the Cannifton team by winning 10 to 5. Errors and wildness on the part of Simpson and Juby, the Cannifton boundsmen gave Napanee a majority of their runs, while Switzer buried steady ball for the winning Bees. The third and deciding game will be played at Napanee on Sunday afternoon.

Our predictions as to the caliber of harness races that would be seen at the Belleville Fair were more than vindicated yesterday, when Tom Gratton, owned by the Pine Ridge Stables of London and driven by Louis James, broke the track record, when the sly black gelding paced the first and second heats of the 2.14 class in 2.07¼. A capacity grandstand applauded the effort. Incidentally the thoroughbred track record of 2.07 3-4 was established by Lou Canot in 1927 with "Babe" Kimhirst driving. Some keen competition and another new track record is expected when Hon. Earle Rowley Peterboro-Lindsay sports Tom Gratton and Gratton Axworthy in the 2.19 or free-for-all class at the Fair on Friday.

If any heavyweight of modern times was ever given the run-around—its Max Schmeling, still the heavy "wait" top notcher. It was definitely announced yesterday that Joe Louis would not defend his title against Schmeling this year, he having reported to have severely injured his hands in the Farr battle. What makes things all the tougher for the Black Uhlan is today's press dispatch from Pretoria, where Promoter Brigadier-General A. C. Critchley, Canadian-born fight promoter, who had Farr signed to a contract to meet Schmeling in London on the 30th instant, Critchley released Farr from that contract yesterday and with Braddock's running out on Schmeling last June is merely means the end-to-end movement is apparently too strong and the uncrowned champion is being left behind the well known eight ball. Harry Robinson is home from seeing the Farr-Louis bout and we intend to publish his impressions of the bout in the near future.

Plans for mammoth seaside regatta are under way with the Belleville Yacht Club executives preparing for two motor and sailing races here on Labor Day.

Stanley "Doc" Woodley, Belleville Kiwanis juniors lead the highly-heralded Toronto St. Cyprians 6-3 for the first innings, locals completed a man's-sized job in the first frame, with the Belleville kids and had two errors, but were unable to score on the scoring of a game, that saw the leadership changed on four different occasions and served was the struggle. The return game, to be played in Belleville on Labor Day morning will undoubtedly bring together two good southpaw pitchers, Woodrooke's heralded fork-flinger and Lefty Weeks, Belleville's star portsider who pitched the first contest. Monday's game is the first O.B.A.A. semi-final game to be played in this city in over two years and with each succeeding game Ohio as the Kiwanis and St. Cyprians—the R.H.O. shingle should be distinct.

We sure got a swell taste of Toronto umpiring in the tenth inning. Umpire Curzon calling two of the prettiest strikes imaginable on one play. After the game I had at least 50 Toronto fans come to me to definitely state it was a steal, but I guess that's what one can expect from Toronto officials, but we'll be in there against them on Labor Day. Incidentally Joe Louis had to say regarding yesterday's decision during which gentleman's name was seen and some of the local fans from the park after protesting the decisions of Umpire Curzon. Incidentally Joe Kelleher hurled eight hit ball game and deserved a far better fate than defeat.

The Point Anne softballers received notification today they would meet the Lake Shore group winner starting Saturday at Point Anne.

HEPBURN GOV'T.

nee stated that "there was ripe for a change in East Hastings. County affairs here are in a deplorable state. Men are working for a mere pittance these days. However there are men more capable than I and I will withdraw my name."

In a ringing defence of the Hepburn Administration, the Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, defined the many benefits brought to the residents of the province and particularly of Hastings County since the entry of the Liberal party into power three and one half years ago. "Mr. Rowe says he will challenge the government on its record. The government has its record, and I prefer to go before the people of Ontario as it stands."

Asserting that when the Liberals went into power in 1934, Ontario was bankrupt and the public debt had increased over three million dollars, Mr. McQuesten stated, that the present government had lowered the cost to the people to five cents per hundred dollars of assessment. "Don't that the kind of government you want," he asked.

Defending the repudiation of Hydro contracts by the Liberal administration, the speaker stated that when coming to power, the Hydro was bankrupt. Previous to 1934 the rates were raised to the highest rate in the province, three millions of dollars were paid to the power companies, which, he asserted the raise from power published in Quebec. In addition he used up four million of reserve and still we were going behind at the rate of a million dollars a year." Mr. McQuesten added.

"As long as the Hydro System is operated at cost. What then were we to do. We could not raise the rates and we refused to add further taxation on the people. We had no way of raising money and so of course was to cancel the contracts."

Do It Again

"I would do the same thing again" asserted the speaker amid applause. "For I believe we have done in the best interests of the people of Ontario." Mr. McQuesten said that their very face every sign, that they were not being negotiated in the interests of the province".

"Innumerable benefits have been derived from the policies of the Hepburn government since coming into power," declared the speaker. "Most are unique in the history of provincial governments. The examining on 50 per cent of the cost of all highways of the counties has resulted in a saving to them of $281,000.00. Previous to this counties were forced to issue debentures sometimes to a point of burden. This has been removed.

"We have also assumed in Hastings County alone, highways on which we have spent $6,000. We have increased the township road grants to $4,800. Old Age Pensions have also been taken over by the government, which in this county alone amounts to $22,000.00. We have not only assumed this important thing but have made it more secure. The old people of the province are now guaranteed their money because the government has taken it over."

"In addition to this," continued Mr. McQuesten "the government has subsidized the counties one mill, which here amounts to $18,000."

"Every one of these policies is aimed to benefit the people of the province. These amounts you have received from the present government." Did any other government give do that? No, they increased taxation until a long-suffering people arose up and kicked them out."

"Then too" declared the speaker, "we have refunded twenty per cent. of the liquor receipts to the cities and municipalities. In this county it amounts to $5,400. "True, if you want this amenity you can have it or vice versa. If you have it in your communities, then the government will divide the profits."

Turning to the rural Hydro question, the speaker asserted that substantial line-building program has been entered in the rural districts, which is now going on. "Right after we cancelled the contracts, Hydro affairs began to pick up. We cut off the service charge to rural users. We did away with the old contracts the former government had with you, and we reduced prices to the farmers. In 1934, there was less than 234 miles of rural lines built, because the farmer could not afford it. This year, in fact in the last nine months we have built over two thousand miles of power-lines and more are being constructed. When Rowe babbles about restoring contracts he means that he will increase the taxes and make the great Hydro power which is the life of Ontario unavailable for the farmer simply because he won't be able to pay for it."

"There are many more benefits which have been derived from the Hepburn administration", continued the speaker. "for instance in my own department, we have reduced the license fee of trucks amounting to some $12,000. Collections are coming in every day and I must add that in the past two years we have not lost one dollar in collections of gasoline and truck licenses, You will benefit by that."

Nuisance Tax Abolished

"We did away with that "Ridiculous Tax", the amusement tax, saying you some $14,000. We stimulated the school children's examination tax a saving of $5,776. We increased the grants to hospitals to $2,000, all these benefits amount to $490,477.00 in three and one half years, a fine saving for your county. And these savings have been made in the things affecting the small farmers and humble citizens of the county. That is the policy of the government."

Concluding his address with an urgent appeal to support the "Liberal candidate in Hastings", Mr. McQuesten stated that he had not the slightest doubt that the Hepburn Government would be returned to power in the coming election.

Charging that the Conservative Party were still the "same old gang going about trying to get their fingers back in the Ontario money chest", Colin Campbell, M.P., candidate for Frontenac county sharply criticized the Conservative leaders policies. "Earl Rowe is still a friend of R. B. Bennett and they both have records of increased taxation, decrease in trade and a lowering standard of living.

"There are many people who will vote for Hepburn because he has given good government, and there are many people who will not vote for Earl Rowe, not because he is a Conservative but because he is still a member of the same old gang. By opposing all social legislation policies until Bennett decide you should have some. Rowe is still the same old Tory he was when he voted against the Old Age Pension."

Claims Increase in Revenue

"We have had a decided increase in revenue," Mr. Campbell declared in his defence of the present government's policies. "and this is not due to increased taxation, but to better conditions which are prevailing in Toronto under Hepburn and in Ottawa under Mr. Mackenzie King. In fact we have collected taxes which otherwise would have been let run and have returned the monies to you."

Turning to the pulp and paper question, the speaker stated that under the Henry regime it was impossible to sell pulp. "True," he said, "the price is not as high as it was but it is also true that you have a market. The treaty with the U.S. has resulted in a 50% increase in sales over those of 1926, and this market has been found. He did not want you to get a market for your cheese or pulp, all he thought about was the furniture and textile manufacturers who charged you higher prices. As a result of the treaty the U.S. has decreased the duties on pulp and timber and the industry now is alive and healthy."

"Large timber limits, which were non- operative were held by friends of the former government," charged the speaker. "People were losing employment and the government was losing its rightful dues. The Hepburn Government passed a bill remedying this and the result is more employment than ever before will be available in the timber sections.

"That Rowe did not want the farmers of Ontario to reap the benefits of the sale of cheese and pulp to American purchasers. He wanted the unemployed, and the primary producers to be left with no market."

Fulfilled Promises Claim

Claiming that the Liberal party had fulfilled their promises made in 1934, the speaker produced figures showing the differences in prices agricultural produce in 1934 and the present year. "Now," he asked, "do you want a man who will tell you what he will do, or one who does it? Do you want a man like Mitchell Hepburn who will give you better markets and better people, or do you want a man like Earl Rowe who will give you the benefits of government to the worker and social legislation. On all occasions Mr. Hepburn has stood for social legislation. He looked for reduction in tariff and taxes, and has shown that your business can be handled on a less cost and more safety."

Mr. Campbell urged the convention to use all its power, and get out and work for their candidate so that this riding will be put on top in the coming election.

Amid thunderous applause, Mr. Fred R. Brown, the newly appointed candidate, propioced that "I and the rest of the people of East Hastings. But remember," he added, "play a good clean game. If I won't thank anybody for dirt. Fight a clean campaign or we will win. I hope I will get all your support and co-operation until the night of October 6th."

Following the conclusion of the addresses, Mr. Ed Rowlin was re-elected president of the East Hastings Liberal Association. Messrs. Edward Boyle, J. Smith and R. Bristol were returned as vice-presidents and Mr. Fraser A. Aylesworth as secretary for the coming year.

Figures and Facts

This is Tuesday, the fourth day of the world's greatest Fair, and everything and everybody is becoming tuned up to the realization of mighty expectations.

Beyond a doubt you can more fully grasp the significance of what has been written and of what is to follow by a few facts and figures.

It is the 9th consecutive year in this Exhibition's history, during which time it has grown steadily in magnitude, importance and interest. The value of the lands, buildings and equipment is twenty-one million dollars, the cost of annual operation is one and a quarter million, the area of the grounds is three hundred and fifty acres, the length of the grounds touching the lake is one and a half miles, the seating capacity of the Coliseum is twelve thousand and of the grandstand twenty-five thousand, and the record for any one day's attendance is a quarter of a million. The total attendance this year is expected to be well over two million persons. These statistics are given to enable you to better understand what I write especially with reference to the Coliseum and the grandstand. As you go, often very wearily, about this great "Ex", you feel that you are in a city such as might appear in a dream but surely never in reality. This explains why children enjoy everything so much; they are in fairyland, and see and hear so much that is never present in every day life.

ELECTRICAL DEVICES

In one booth may be seen a little man, about two feet high, dressed in black evening suit and top hat. His eyebrows and lips move, his head turns from side to side, and he points with his cane to some objects before him. This electrically controlled dummy is very real and attracts much attention.

In another booth sits a fat, baldheaded man in garnet dressing gown. He is about quarter natural size, and holds in his hand a fine cigarette case, a recent present. To show that he is "TICKLED TO DEATH" his mouth opens with an expansive smile, and his body shakes as if he were laughing heartily. This is an electrically controlled dummy too, and, as laughing like yawning is contagious, there is always much mirth in his vicinity.

PRESS BUILDING

This very comfortable building is reserved exclusively for the Press, and its duly accredited representatives. The various rooms downstairs are occupied by Toronto's daily papers, while a large room upstairs is conveniently furnished for the convenience of outside papers. I am writing these lines in that room, sitting in a fine upholstered armchair and gazing from time to time at the throngs hurrying to and fro. It is an inspiring sight, and these writing periods give much needed rest, because sightseeing both wearies and delights.

THE CHAMPION SWIMMER

As already reported Miss Margaret Stone, Toronto, won the Canadian amateur championship for the one mile swim last Saturday afternoon. Her time was twenty-six minutes and fifty-five seconds, while the best record time so far established in the past is twenty-two seconds. Miss Stone is being highly complimented on her splendid performance, and, as already pointed out, the uniformity and strength of her stroke give promise of greater achievements.

TORONTO - 240 JARVIS STREET

CHILDREN'S DAY

Monday was children's day at the "Ex", and I followed their movements with much interest on the street cars to the grounds, and to their favorite places of amusement.

My study of Evolution has been strangely stimulated, because I never saw monkeys more alert, more agile and more successful in escaping danger even by the breadth of a hair. They went everywhere and tried everything as long as their money lasted. They were constantly eating, seeing, and enjoying the Merry-go-rounds and scores of other similar devices. One could not avoid coming to the conclusion that much castor oil would be administered by mothers at their bedtime.

THE CHILDREN'S FAVORITE

It was not long before I discovered where the children were having the most fun, convulsed with laughter. It was at one of the many small booths on the side of one of the busiest streets where a young man played a piano while another young man in slouch hat imitated various musical instruments with perfection. He used a hollow disk of aluminum about the size and shape of a small piece of soup thickening gradually from the edge to a depth of about half an inch at the centre. He spoke, sang or imitated by breathing into an opening on the circumference of about one inch. This opening was entirely enclosed in the mouth, and he went through musical motions on the most dilapidated violin, trombone, and other derelicts imaginable. He made it clear however that the aluminum disk accompanied by the piano supplied all the music, and in doing so he was funnier than Charlie Chaplin. The variety he conducted dialogue on his magic disk similar to those of Punch and Judy. I wish to say that this performance was the most perfect, refined entertainer for children that I ever knew, and that he seemed to enjoy his part to the utmost. He sells these disks ordinarily at a quarter, but on children's day they were fifteen cents each, and he reaped a fine harvest.

GAME AND FISH BUILDING

This very interesting exhibit is supplied by the Ontario Government and consists of live fish, birds and animals. You can view perfectly such fish as bass, trout, pickerel and others, two or three varieties of each. The birds include pheasants and several varieties of wild ducks and geese. The animals perhaps were most interesting to the children, baby bears coaxing for ice-cream cones, baby wolves, foxes, deer, and full grown bears, moose, etc. This natural history exhibit has a great educational value.

FLOWER BUILDING

Those who love flowers will be impressed with three distinct features although there are others. I refer particularly to the displays of cut flowers, the dahlias, the gladioli and the roses. For profusion, beauty and amazing variety, these are truly wonderful. The dahlias are unusually large, and beautifully formed and colored, many colors in fact. I never knew before that there were so many different, single blooms in existence. Judging by the comments of those passing, it might be said that the roses won all hearts with unbounded admiration, and the writer was one of them.

UNITED STATES NAVY BAND

On Monday afternoon for an hour and a half the great Navy Band entertained the children and their friends to delightful music specially chosen for the children who enjoyed every bit of it to a perfectly orderly manner. Most of the popular selections for children were played but great enthusiasm was aroused by the following:

1. The Rag Doll with xylophone solo.
2. The Wooden Soldier.
3. An imitative selection portraying by music a crying baby and soothing mother but the outbursts continued until the selection concluded with a good loud spanking for troublesome baby. The children understood and appreciated it thoroughly.
4. Another imitative selection representing the story of Golden Locks leaving her home, wandering through the woods, finding the home of Papa bear, Mama bear and Baby bear, eating their dinner left for a few moments to cool, going to sleep comfortably in Baby bear's bed, the return of the bears, their astonishment and lamenta, the awakening of Golden Locks, her flight, the unsuccessful pursuit, the return of the bears, and the erection by them of a sign, "The Home of Three Hungry Bears, Beware!"

Needless to say that this delightful program was enjoyed as much by the parents as by the children, and at the same time it revealed the talented versatility of the band and of its great leader.

THE SHRINERS ARE HOSTS

Monday afternoon at six I saw a beautiful and most unusual sight. Several hundred children were sitting on the grass in a secluded spot eating and drinking for all they were worth. They were being served by corpulent Shriners wearing white suits, and the well known red Fez hats with a long black tassel.

"Where do these children come from," I enquired of a matronly lady standing near by.

"They are the underprivileged children of downtown Toronto, and are brought together in groups by various downtown churches," she replied with great interest on what was going on.

"How do they get here," I persisted.

"The Shriners pick them up at the various centres and bring them here in their cars and take them home again. Not only that but they are given all the fresh milk, sandwiches and ice-cream they want at noon and now in the evening, and they have seen the grandstand performance this afternoon."

"All this is sponsored by the Shriners "

"Yes, and they make the most perfect hosts in the world. They do all the work and entertaining entirely by themselves with the result that the children love them very much."

This was such a revelation to me that I could not get it out of my mind for a long time. These Shriners look as if they enjoy all the good things of life, and yet they are not selfish. Surely humanity is far better than most wives think they are since they obey the injunction, "He who is to be greatest amongst you must be the least." Many bands affirm that under these humble conditions they are very great.

THE EXHIBITION BY NIGHT

If you have never seen Gay Paris by night, I can assure you that you know very little about Paris. The day is just business routine for some, and a time to rest for others. But with darkness comes the finest display of electric lights that the world knows on the streets and entrances to buildings of all kinds. Then the heart of Paris throbs with life, emotion and passion. They seem to forget that they are mortals so great is the exaltation and ecstasy.

To a less extent but nevertheless to a similar extent the same words apply to the "Exhibition by Night". The grounds become a fairyland, and the people give unconfrolled expression to their joy and happiness. Night, too, is the time for love.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

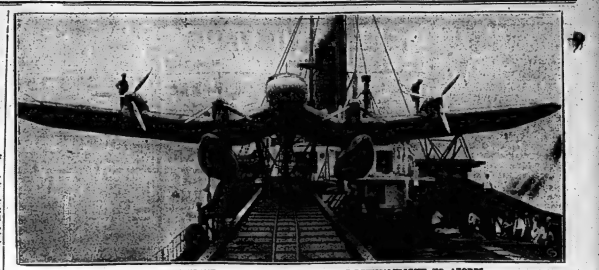
The display in this building is so fine that it would not be difficult to convince the visitor that these marvels of modern production and science far exceed anything grown in the Garden of Eden.

When in London, England, five years ago, I saw exhibits of apples from South Africa and Australia and found them to be small, void of coloring and in general unInspiring.

I saw to-day a very beautiful exhibit of early Ontario apples which would undoubtedly create a sensation in Old London. The Transparent, Duchess and Red Astrachan were splendid. I saw and tasted a new variety called the "Melba" which is a cross between the Duchess and the McIntosh, in appearance favoring the former but in flavor and texture the latter.

CHEESE EXHIBIT

In this same building is the cheese exhibit, a worthy display representing one of Ontario's most valuable agricultural productions.



EDUCATIONAL EXHIBIT

On the second floor of the Fruit and Vegetable Building is found the Educational Exhibit, representative of the work of Ontario's various grades of school. As a teacher I would give first prize to the display from the Kitchener Schools, Kitchener, Ont., despite the fact that Toronto schools and various county exhibits are very fine. Ontario has made immense advances in education during the past fifty years as this educational exhibit reveals.

A THRILL

Did you ever find anything? For several years I carried a fine honored leather purse for silver change, and it had come to my aid many times in various parts of the world. Just for fun I stuff it with tissue paper in which some coppers were concealed. Then at the right moment I dropped it in the path of school children on their way around the various school exhibits, and stood aside at some distance to watch developments. Group after group passed it by unnoticed so intent were they on viewing the drawing, writing and other exhibits. Finally a pretty girl daintily gowned and alone, stepped on it and seemed to know at once what it was. She glanced cautiously around, picked-up the purse quickly, hurried to a quiet corner, took a brief look and then hurried away. She seemed to have had that thrill we all have, when we find something.

Best wishes to all.

GERMAN TRANSATLANTIC AEROPLANE TUNES UP FOR RETURN FLIGHT TO AZORES

Mechanics carefully check over the giant engines of the German seaplane, Nordmeer, at New York, as the time neared for its take-off on a return flight across the Atlantic to the Azores. The Nordmeer and its sister-ship, Nordwind, are being used in a series of survey flights across the ocean in preparation for a German bid in establishing a transatlantic passenger and mail air service. The Nordmeer was catapulted from the mother ship Schwebeland shortly after this photograph was taken on its return flight.

Little Benny's Note Book

My cousin Artie came around Saturday afternoon and we stayed in the house by request after a argument on account of the bum weather, and we started to do my jigsaw puzzle and contentict each other about where the different pieces went, me telling Artie to shut up and him telling me to shut up and me telling him to double shut up and him telling me to triple shut up and "say" shut, and ma said, Now ... that's amply sufficient and quite enough, strong, I said, and Artie said, now you can either be polite to each other or you can go your separate ways in your separate houses.

Meaning Artie would have to go home and I wouldn't even have nobody to file with, and I said, All rite, ma, we'll be polite to each other, won't we Artie?

Sure, Artie said.

With we started to, me saying, Would you mind being nice enough to be so kind as to mind handing me that funny looking piece rite next to your funny looking knee? and Artie saying, Why of course with pleasure my dear frend, only it dont belong in that corner and never did, because any dumbell can see it belongs in this corner and always will.

O well then excuse me, my lovely chap, if you say so it must be so, and ma said, Now ... that's enough, I said, and Artie said, Think nothing of it, you elegant fellow, anything I can do to please you will be a pane in the neck to me, I assure you.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Tony drove on faster and faster, a long, lean shadow beside her. It served him right, he thought. You never could trust women to be decent or sporting. He was sick with disgust and loathing of Lorna. She had let a wildcat out of the bag this time. Why, hadn't she waited until he would get his affairs in order! And how oh earth had she ever found out he wasn't married unless this girl beside him had talked to young Cotter? Suspicions thickened in his mind. He'd ask to bother now. His lips went thin. Only serious business if there were questions, investigations, after all the publicity surrounding his supposed elopement. Even his money and influence might not put this deal over.

"Why not just let me clear-pear?" Dixie said in a small, smothered voice.

"Not a chance. We've got to go through with it now. Meet Mr. Malcolm in Paris." His hand tightened on the wheel, sending the powerful car flashing ahead several feet. He was uncomfortably conscious of the small head, flowering close to his shoulder, the pale features of cameo, the mass of black lashes over the wonderful blue of those eyes. He'd have to make a clean breast of it to Beatty. He's our best bet," he almost groaned. "Old friend of my father's. He can do it. But look here, we never thought—that means business. You can't be married as Alice in Wonderland. Lord, what a mess!"

Jane glanced at him. Why should she try to stop him from the one thing she wanted most in the world? To be Mrs. Anthony Kaye, the wife of the man whose heart-beats melted the very heart in her body. "Alice in Wonderland," she murmured. "Alice Landon. Why not?" she sat straight in the low, upholstered seat, her even young teeth clenching her lip. Was it so very wicked to fight for one's happiness? Fight Lorna, is Paula, Bertram Cotter. She held that one weapon over Lorna that she could use if she had to, in spite of, is Paula and the portrait she had virtually threatened her with as a price of her silence, and Bertram? Whatever he blurted out to Lorna, he hadn't given away the Food cheque behind.

In the darkness streaming by she saw frail vistas of creamy satin and lilies. Heard the pealing of bells. Ever since she could remember, she had imagined such a beautiful wedding. Now—this. An unwilling bridegroom, running away with social disgrace hanging heavy over Anthony Kaye's wilful head.

"You should have let me lost that unclaimed," she said suddenly with a little sob. Tony didn't contradict her. He was thinking that in that gay, reckless mood weeks ago, he had not come upon a crowd going at a helpless girl on-haired girl who had tempted his love, of, excitement and mystery.

Jane laughed with the catch of a sob in her throat. "It's the same car you were in that day. And this is the same dress I wore. I don't suppose you noticed that."

"No, I hadn't." Tony admitted into his dark, good-looking face grew less tense. He'd wished this trouble on himself. What a confounded kiss of teaching Lorna a lesson out of the black Kaye temper. And jealousy. "Why, here goes," he said, with a wry smile, and turned the car into a quiet little town street near Park Avenue. An old brownstone house loomed to receive its lips at them, folded and withdrawn at this late hour. Under her hand Jane saw a clock, look in his grey eye. Suddenly his face shrank back.

"It isn't too late—to let me go. You're too unhappy, Tony. I can't—"

"Come on, my dear, let's get through with it," he said coldly. "There's always a divorce, you know—"

That was to hit mind. Divorce, as the eventual way out. Jane followed him up the brownstone steps of this house that had survived change. It must be a dream she thought, from which she would waken back in the small garage of Fond du Lac. She waited, coldly, for someone to open the door. A grey servant came, and Tony spoke quick, low words, patted up the stairs to summon the Reverend Doctor Beattie and his wife from their beds.

Another wait in a mid-Victorian parlor cluttered with ornaments and photographs. Tony had vanished into the study, swaggering with the rubicund and tactful clergyman, who had been a friend of his father's. What had gone on in that interview, what explanations had been made, she never knew. She was gravely presented as Alice Landon. Promptly two women came in, plump, white-haired Mrs. Beattie and fit elderly housekeeper. They were kind, all women who feel it their Christian duty to be kind under all circumstances.

Jane was conscious only that Tony stood beside her. Voices. Doctor Beattie's, Tony's, her own, murmuring. The ring she had slipped back to Tony at his whispered request eternal moments ago in the hall once more was on her finger with the fleeting memory of that dawn in the city when he had given it to her as a symbol of adventure.

The room seemed to be whirling. Her eyes were very blue in her white young face as she looked up at her husband. His lips were cold touching her forehead under the clustered gold of curls. She was Mrs. Anthony Kaye. Her heart leaped an exultant message to her dazed mind. She heard herself saying polite things and shaking hands.

Then she and Tony were back in the car. He slouped behind the wheel. "We need a bite and a sip," he said in a matter-of-fact voice. "It's pretty late, but I know a quiet little place we can go—"

She nodded, feeling faint all of a sudden. The wild heat of her heart subsided. Yes, she actually was hungry.

The sense of unreality still hung over her as she sat opposite Tony in the small back room of a French restaurant where a few people lingered. Tony was being almost a celebration," she said wistfully, and there was a delicate charm to her smile.

Tony lit the lines graven between his long, slanting nose and sensitive mouth only deepened as he watched the color warm her cheeks. "Hardly that," he said.

His tone reaped her to daring. She lifted her glass, leaning over her plate of grilled lobster. "Why not make it a celebration," she said wistfully, and there was a delicate charm to her smile.

"Jane laughed with the catch of a sob in her throat. "It's the same car you were in that day. And this is the same dress I wore. I don't suppose you noticed that."

She was Mrs. Anthony Kaye. Her heart leaped an exultant message to her dazed mind. She heard herself saying polite things and shaking hands.

Then she and Tony were back

"Your married His begins well," he murmured. "Would you like me to be sentimental?"

And the moment that might have been so charming was spoiled because of the conflicting emotions it covered. Glancing at him, Jane felt utterly discouraged. He didn't want her; he didn't want her love. What, then was he going to do with her? Wisely, she didn't ask.

But he answered the immediate problem, as they walked out of the restaurant. It was about two in the morning. He avoided her eyes, lighting a cigarette. "I'm dropping you at the Gotham tonight, Malthews telephoned and made the arrangements. I'd rather you kept to your rooms there until tomorrow night. I'll fix it so that we can sail on the Normandy. Your trunks will be on board."

So he had thought of everything before they left Kayestone, dismissing her as if she had been a casual bit of luggage. Oddly enough, Jane felt relieved, for she felt so hopeless need to be alone and sleep. The stately quiet of the Gotham soothed her nerves. She had only a hazy memory of getting there, of Tony speaking to the room clerk and the swift moving service that landed her in the suite she had engaged through Malthews. Then, exhaustion submerged her. When hours later, she wakened, it was to a sensation of having floated far away from a world that seemed never to have existed.

That sensation like flitting whitely through a dream, continued when Tony telephoned brief instructions in the afternoon, and later came for her. Smoothly at his side, she boarded the ship, and in the elegance of a private salon and adjoining cabins, found her maid and Tony's valet unpacking among the baskets of fruit, flowers and books that filled the room. Another world that quickened Jane to intense excitement. Tears to cross—foreign lands to explore, old Tom Carey had so often longingly said back in the old garage. And here she was crossing them and with a man whose grey eyes watched her critically those first days out, as if she were a strange bit of art he had collected somewhere by accident.

He never came near her cabin. He never touched her. Tactily he required from her only what might be called the appearance of marriage in public. Exquisitely dressed, she sat with him in the smoking room for cocktails, and dined with him at the Commodore's table to which they had been bidden as the socially prominent Anthony Kayes. Her breath of scandal blurred the outline of their relationship. Suddenly Lorna's virulent attack in Tuxedo had had no consequences.

Gracious and charming, Tony played his part of attentive husband, whose lovely wife's preferred to remain aloof from the fellow passengers he fastidiously ignored. Jane's youth went out to—everything that happened on the ship, her she felt herself pressed and flattened into a pattern by Tony's will. He hated her, she thought with increasing misery, and daring to bring matters to an issue between them. For being his wife was such a frail bridge to his suspicious heart.

So she sat on deck gazing out at the hot blues of sary July, the long days, and nights, the smoking salt smells and sounds from the ship's funnel. She should be content. But she was restless, she wanted to live—live—live. To throb and be alive with delight. And there were moments when she caught on Tony's dark, watching face a fierceness that took' fire from her gold.

MORDEN AND SON WIN TOURNAMENT

The Horseshoe Tournament held in Agricultural Grounds yesterday, which attracted some of the best adherents of the sport throughout this central section, Arthur Morden and Son of Moorefield, were declared champions of the Double Tournament held during the afternoon Geo. Geer and Frank Verbries of this city, were second.

In the contest for the best twelve shoes pitched, one which was contested keenly Jack Bell of Belleville was given first place, Alfred Sherrett, second place and W. E. Hartley, third place. These were all Belleville winners.

DENSE FOG BLANKETS DISTRICT EARLY TODAY

With visibility limited to a distance of about fifty feet, highway traffic on roads throughout the district was halted early this morning by one of the heaviest fogs experienced in some time. Of particularly opaque nature, the clinging mist coated windshields and car glass with a greasy film through which visibility was reduced to zero. Accompanying the fog was a sticky heavy humidity which rose temperatures and tempers of residents during the fore part of the day. Relief was expected later in the afternoon, however, by a lazy southwest wind and a lessening of the discomfort.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The London market closed weak yesterday and this was reflected both in New York and locally. There was no special news to account for the sudden selling although developments in the Far East are of such a nature that the stock market may reverse its trend on short notice. It is only the very nimble trader who can scalp profits in the kind of markets we have been having.

General Steel Wares.

The ticker does not confirm the information that is important. Street quarters believe to be correct in respect to the progress that the liquidation of the arrears on the preferred stock of the General Steel Wares. This obligation now amounts to $45 a share; whereas the opinion is held that two shares of common will be given to payoff this obligation. With the common stock now selling at 15½ it is hardly likely that the senior shareholder, would accept $31 in paper for a debt of $45 something is out of step.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 3.—(CP)—Shading of prices during the late session marked operations today on the Toronto Exchange. A mild rally developed at mid-afternoon but failed to erase the early losses and in the last hour weakness was in evidence again and prices closed around the low for the day. Volume was the heaviest of the week around 426,000 shares with some of the leading industrials including Dominion Steel, Fanny Farmer and Dominion Steel B coming out in quantity.

New attacks on shipping in the Mediterranean appeared to be the new restraint on buying demand. Nearly 4,000 shares of Brazilian came out on a price decline of 1-2 to 22 1-2 and other interlisted leaders weakening a half point or more included Industrial Alcohol A, Canadian Car Common, Canada Wire A, Pressed Metals and Dofasco Steel. Steel of Canada Pfd was off six points, Massey-Harris Pfd 2 1-2 and Montreal Power 2 1-4.

Construction issues took a downward turn with Consol. dropping 3-4 and Gypsum about 5-8. Banks were irregularly lower and all Beverage issues recorded losses.

O'Brien Mines went down to 4.85, its low point for the year. Recovery to 5.10 failed to hold and the close at 4.92 was down 13 cents net. About 8,000 shares of the stock came out. Pickle Crow lost 30 cents in lighter action and other golds down 10 to 20 cents were Little Long 5, Macassa 1, Pioneer, McIntyre and Dome were off slightly and other golds off a few cents were Ora Pilata, Powell, Rouyn, Toburn, Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves.

In the Senior Base Metals losses were limited to about a point for Smelters and Hudson Bay and a fraction for Noranda. Nickel held a minor gain. Sudbury Basin, Chromium, Shpritt, and Coast Copper were lower. Silvers were irregular and quiet.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 3 (AP)—Enough buyers entered the stock market today to stem another sharp decline.

The list got off to a bad start, with leaders dropping fractions to 3 or more points in active dealings. Extreme setbacks were shaded or converted into small advances in some instances near the final hour. In the downswing many issues landed in new low territory for the year or longer.

Transfers were about 1,200,000 shares.

gated and there gave three numbers which pleased the Toronto visitors greatly.

The junior farmers and farmerettes were busy all day at their judging competitions with Department of Agriculture officials in charge. Joseph Wilson, representative of this district was in charge, while Miss Pollard from the Department at Toronto looked after the girls. At the banquet in the evening given by the Crescentics of this city, the girls and boys enjoyed a good time before proceeding to the grandstand to take the night's performance. Due to the lateness of the hour there was no speech making at the banquet, Edward Clarke and Mr. May Jose welcoming the guests and wished them a good time. Entertainment was provided by the Carr Brothers from the grandstand troupe and Rex Doyle the boy singer, he leading in the community sing. At the conclusion of the banquet the prize winners were announced and are as follows:

4 BRITISH DESTROYERS HUNT GUERILLA SUBS

Wide Area Is Patrolled In Mediterranean Sea; France Proposes Action

United Action May be Sought by Affected Powers

FRANCE CONCERNED

Soviet Freighter Sunk In North Aegean Sea

London, Sept. 3 (AP)—Four Italian destroyers and the Mussolini battleship Vittorio Veneto were reported to have joined the search for the submarine which sank a Soviet freighter in the Aegean Sea.

The Admiralty announced the Fury and Forester, sailing from Portsmouth, and the Portsmouth and Firedrake from Chatham, would join five other ships on Spanish coast duty.

These ships will patrol a wide area of the Mediterranean, near where only two days ago the British destroyer Havock and the British ketch Woodford were torpedo targets. The Havock escaped; the Woodford was sunk.

Eleventh Division.

The four destroyers comprise the 11th division of the sixth home fleet flotilla. The 12th division, remainder of the sixth flotilla, is already on duty off the Spanish coast—the flotilla leader Keith and the destroyers Hasty, Foxhound, Pane and Foresight.

Naval experts said the 11th division could reach its destination in three days at forced draft or five days at cruising speed. The admiralty's orders in this respect were not disclosed.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Leamington Ont., Sept. 3 (CP)—Harvesting of Essex County's tender tobacco is in full stride and shelter in the crop will not be as great as was feared. Much irreparable damage was done by early season moisture, but recent favorable weather has fully ripened the remainder of the leaf, and quality is said to equal that of last year.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 3 (CP)—Dr. Paul Poisson, member of the Ontario Provincial Conservative cabinet, who recently announced his withdrawal from the campaign for candidature in Essex North riding, has acceded to party wishes and will allow his name to stand at the riding convention.

London, Ont., Sept. 3 (CP)—A Huron County man yesterday asked the Employment Bureau here to find him a wife. He told Superintendent Harry Gray he wanted someone to look after his children. Mr. Gray decided the best thing he could do was to send a whole matter to the Ontario head office.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 3 (AP)—Bert Thompson, 56-year-old laborer, didn't feel well. He told emergency hospital attendants he couldn't sleep and couldn't eat. They said he should have an X-ray.

The trouble—he swallowed his teeth, the whole lower denture.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

High clouds! In daytime the highest cloudy fabric are the cirrus. These are the white transparent, veil-like, feathery clouds seen in beautiful sweeping shapes across a blue sky. They are sometimes described as looking like tufts of hair. They are very high and float about under the stratosphere, about 25,000 feet. Clouds of all types are higher in summer than in winter. There is one other type of cloud—like cirrus—but more "effluent clouds" because they are made of water vapor, and at night by the sun's rays falling upon them. These clouds float high up in the stratosphere, 60 miles above the earth's surface. They are probably composed of dust thrown up there by supersactive volcanoes.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 3.—(CP)—A moderate disturbance is moving rapidly northeastward across Northern Ontario with high pressure covering the northwest portion of the continent and the Northeast States. A severe storm is centred over Davis Straits. Local thunderstorms have occurred from Manitoba eastward to New Brunswick and light to moderate showers in the northern districts of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Unusually high temperatures have prevailed in Eastern Canada but it is now comparatively cool throughout the West.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh southwest to west winds; partly cloudy with local thundershowers; cooler tonight. Saturday—Moderate to fresh northwest winds; partly cloudy and comparatively cool.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan—Northerly winds; partly cloudy and comparatively cool tonight and Saturday.

Bloomfield Garage Destroyed By Fire

Thought to Have Been Started by Children—Sparks Ignite Nearby Hay

Matches alleged to be in the hands of a group of children resulted in the total destruction by fire yesterday afternoon of a garage on the property of the Rev. F. S. Salmon, Methodist Church minister residing at Bloomfield. A small amount of hay, straw and garden tools was also destroyed with the building.

Fanned by a strong breeze, the flames rapidly leaked about the timber-dry building, threatening residence situated approximately twenty yards from the blazing garage ignited and only the strenuous efforts of the local volunteer firemen saved the home from destruction. All household effects were removed from the house and neighbors while other men battled the flames. The residence was considerably damaged. Blazing sparks carried by the strong wind set fire to the roof of three nearby houses but prompt action averted any serious damage.

Observing the children in a huddle while eating her dinner, Mrs. Standish who was alone in the house when the alarm was given, believed had been made by flames that set fire of the building was impossible.

Firefighters battled to save a large building next door to the burning garage, a connecting link with the main business section of the village.

A small group of children were observed making their way from the burning building shortly after the alarm was sent in.

Seven Fliers Streak Across Continent For $28,000 Prize

Only Woman Entrant, Acting as Pace Setter, Start-et at 3.04 S. T.

ROSCOE TURNER OUT

Los Angeles, Sept. 3 (AP)—Seven fliers bid speed, courage and skill for a share in the $28,000 Bendix prize today as they streaked east across the continent with Jacqueline Cochran, only woman entrant, as pace setter.

One crash marked the staggered start. R. E. Perlick, Glendale, Calif., emerged unscathed from his ground-looping biplane in Union Air Terminal here.

Miss Cochran soared away on the 2,043 E.D.T. the first to leave. Earl Ortman, his 1,200-horsepower Keith-Rider special far faster than Miss Cochran's Beechcraft, was the last to take off at 9.01 a.m.

Col. Roscoe Turner gave up hope of repairing his Boeing 247 special in time to compete. The craft was damaged by an explosion of gasoline vapors in the fuel tank as it being welded last night.

The immediate goal of the skyray trial for the fliers was Cleveland. Stragglers were not disqualified, but another $3,000 could be won by continuing on to Bendix, N.J.

Kansas City, Sept. 3 — (AP) — Streaking along at 280 miles an hour, Frank Fuller of San Francisco landed his modified Seversky army pursuit plane here at 11:15 p.m. E.D.T. today in the Bendix air race from Los Angeles to Cleveland. His time of 6 hours and 58 minutes for the 1,400-mile hop was the fastest so far reported.

REDUCTION IN CAR LICENCES SAYS HEPBURN

Announcement to This Effect Will be Made Tonight

CHARGES DECEPTION

Says Statement Failed to Show Quoted Debt in 1934

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 3 (CP)—Premier Hepburn will announce "sweeping reductions in motor car licenses tonight. He told a Liberal gathering here last night such reductions in Ontario motorists fees were made possible through sound business administration. He is scheduled to speak tonight at Dundas, near Hamilton.

When Liberals took office in 1934 the provincial debt was increasing at such a rate it took 42 cents of every dollar to pay carrying charges, the premier said. The administration had set about to overhaul the financial policy of the province and set up new social standards.

Mr. Hepburn's advertisement of the Conservative party showed "wilful deception," Mr. Hepburn declared. It falsely the quoted provincial debt of $614,000,000 in 1934 included contractual expenditures of the preceding Conservative government during the first of the Liberal year, until the Liberals took office, a period of eight and a half months.

Did Not Contract Bills.

"The Liberal government did not contract these bills, but had to pay them," he said. "From the time the present government voted its own supply in March, 1935, until the present session has been entitled to the debt." He was not apologizing for increased revenues, said Mr. Hepburn, as all had been passed back to the people.

"When the government took office poverty and misery reigned in Northern Ontario," continued the premier, because, he charged, much timber had been cut from it and given or handed over to friends of the Conservative government.

"Since the years prior to 1934 there was a deficit in the department of lands. One of the principal items set up in the debacle was Dr. D. M. Dingwall, a Liberal Attorney-General who is now financing Mr. Rowe's campaign. (Conservative leader in East Huron.)

"The present government won back every foot of timberland possible despite bitter opposition from the Conservatives, and set about restoring it to the north country. Much of the land has been recovered for the benefit of new incoming rights on some 6,400,000 acres have been leased, all to Ontario companies."

KING TO VISIT SISTER

London, Sept. 3.—(CP-Havas)—The King and Queen will visit the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood in Yorkshire next month, it was officially announced today.

Their Majesties will be guests at Harewood House on the evening of the following two days will visit Halifax, Leeds, Knottingly, Wakefield, and Sheffield, returning to London the evening of Oct. 21.

The Princess Royal is the King's only sister, Lord Harewood is her husband.

Convention Held at Picton With Hon. Harry Nixon as Speaker

ONLY NAME PROPOSED

Record of Hepburn Regime Reviewed in Detail

(By Staff Reporter)

Picton, Ont., Sept. 3—Thomas G. Bowerman, M.P.P., Prince Edward-Lennox, was the unanimous choice of one hundred delegates to carry the Liberal banner in the coming general elections, at the riding convention held here yesterday afternoon in the Parish Hall of St. Mary Magdalene Church. Mr. Bowerman's name was the only one presented to the convention. Previous to his official nomination by Chairman Dr. S. H. Robbin, the renominated candidate stated that "he was not forcing himself to the front. If any man wants this nomination I will step aside and support him to the limit. I am in the race for Liberalism and not for any other reason."

Enthusiastic applause greeted Mr. Bowerman's statement and his nomination carried.

"While we recognize the right of labor to strike, we also recognize the right of labor to work without being subjected to broken heads," declared the Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, chief speaker at the evening meeting of the delegates and other Liberals, in a stirring address of the Hepburn Government stand on the C.I.O. question. "Our colors are nailed to the mast on this question and they won't be changed. Behind the silken glove there is the iron hand of law enforcement, and in this respect the Ontario Provincial Police is the best insurance the province ever had."

Attracting New Industries

Aboard S.S. Nanuyuk, Prince Regent Inlet, Sept. 3.—(CP by Wireless)—A new passage across the top of the world, linking eastern and western Canada, was chartered today when contact was made between the Hudson's Bay Company ship Nanuyuk and the Schooner Aklavik in Baffin Bay.

The dream of Arctic navigators for four hundred years became a reality when the Aklavik from Cambridge Bay in the Western Arctic drew alongside the Nanuyuk, from Montreal.

NINE-POUND SON BORN

Scrierville, Tenn., Sept. 3 (AP)—Thirteen-year-old Lola Bell Hurst, who said she married at the age of 11, was the mother today of a nine-pound son. The young mother said she quit the third grade in 1935 to marry Willard Hurst, 25.

NASAL SPRAYING IS TRIED OUT HERE

Nasal spraying with a solution of zinc-sulphate is being used in the city by local doctors as a possible preventative against infantile paralysis, Dr. C. J. Cronk, City Medical Officer stated today.

"This was advised by the Department of Health, Toronto," Dr. Cronk added. "Experiments with a group of children in the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, are now being carried on. There is no danger in the use of the spray, which has been proven to be effective in experiments tried with animals."

BODIES WASHED UP AT HONG KONG

Hong Kong, Sept. 3.—(AP)—Typhoon-battered Hong Kong today was a city strewn with wreckage, with bodies washed up along the waterfront and great ships pitched crazily inland.

The doleful harvest, accentuated the misery in this city, packed with war refugees and fighting a cholera epidemic in which two-thirds of its cases have been fatal.

CONSTRUCT ROADS FOR REAL SERVICE SAYS EARLE ROWE

Conservative Leader Speaks at Arnprior on Issues of Day

J. H. FINDLAY NAMED

If Elected Would Conserve Resources of Forest And Stream

Arnprior, Ont., Sept. 3 (CP)—Earl Rowe, Provincial Conservative leader, after three automobile tire blowouts en route to Arnprior from Tweed, found campaign material last night in his misfortunes. The "Hepburn highway" which the head of the provincial premier made them out to be, he insisted at a Conservative rally. If he were returned to power Oct. 6 he would institute a policy of constructing roads for real service, he said, and not for political expediency.

The Conservative leader's car went down by the shoulder of the road in Smiths Falls, and he finished the rest of the trip here in a taxi.

The nomination of Colonel John H. Findlay, Carleton Place, Conservative candidate for Lanark, followed; and on his behalf Mr. Rowe delivered an address.

Neglect Farmers Claim.

Neglect of the farmers' interests was laid to Hepburn government by the Conservative chieftain. At a time when rural workers were needing assistance on the present, he said, had cut out farm relief and had abolished the provincial farm board. He had also abandoned the policy of bonusing better livestock.

Mr. Rowe declared that "immense areas" of timber had been rented in Northern Ontario to United States interests where it could be cut cheaply, he said. Canadian lumbermen and workers had been kept about 31 a cord in excess of the price paid by the U.S. operators.

He undertook to stimulate Ontario's $100,000,000 annual tourist industry by building better highways, and by conserving the natural resources of forest and stream that Rowe charged Premier Hepburn had split the province into religious and racial factions by his policies of appeasement policy, and asserted the governmental's financial surplus had been accumulated at the expense of necessary social services.

Mysterious Flares Are Now Explained

Aboard S. S. Nascopie, Prince Regent Inlet, Sept. 3 (AP)—(By Wireless)—Mysterious flares seen from this ship anchored in Bellot Strait were explained today in a radio dispatch with the arrival of the Hudson's Bay Company agent, L. D. Learmonth.

He said he had been inbound when travelling across Boothia Peninsula from the Lancaster Sound line and had set off flares Wednesday night to warn the ship of his approaching. He arrived here by sled.

When the flares were first seen, it was feared they were those conducting the Eastern Arctic Patrol Expedition, but the possibility that they might be signals from the six missing Russian Polar fliers.

HEAD CRUSHED BY ENGINE

Toronto, Sept. 3.—(CP)— Fireman H. B. Williams was killed here today when his head was crushed between the engine and a train he was entering the railway yards and a freight shed.

Thomas put his head out of the cab to look back along the train. There was less than a foot of clearance between the shed and the engine.

FOREIGN CRAFT IN LINE OF FIRE

"Shanghai, Sept. 3 (AP)—The Japanese navy threatened today to open a heavy punitive bombardment from positions directly in front of Nanking and other foreign warships, bringing them squarely in the line of fire.

A naval spokesman said the Japanese fleet, rather than continue to take the heavy pounding from Chinese land batteries, would shift into positions where it could reply adequately regardless of the danger to which it exposed foreign men-of-war.

Japanese Lay Charges.

The spokesman charged Chinese with using mortars and field artillery to bombard Japanese-occupied Hongkew without warning, killing many Japanese civilians and wounding two consular officials. This, he said, demanded definite Japanese action.

Chinese asserted their severe shelling of the Japanese was in retaliation for the destruction of the rich Pootung industrial area.

As evening fell, the effect of the Chinese fire was intensified and the thousands of Japanese marines, their warship up the Whangpoo from Woosung. They took up positions just off the Garden Bridge at the foot of the Bund. An anti-torpedo net was thrown around a 25,000 ton Japanese transport, principal Chinese target.

Drive In South.

Havas News Agency dispatches said Sino-Japanese fighting broke out today at Amoy, southern port of Fukien Province.

Japanese invasion of Fukien from the neighboring island of Formosa, which had long been anticipated, would mean the beginning of a Japanese drive in South China, the dispatches said.

A heavy artillery shell crashed into the Japanese battleship Idzumo at the junction of Peking Road and Shanghai's famous Bund today.

Marines Wounded By Shell.

A police check showed eleven persons were wounded by the shell, which struck the foreign business district just a block south of the Garden Bridge on Peking Road Creek. Two of the wounded were dying. Slumped into a pool of blood area including that adjacent to the British consulate and near the United States cruiser Augusta.

SIX SETTLEMENTS NEAR RED LAKE RUINED BY FIRE

15 Square Miles Burned Off Before Rain Stops Conflagration

MANY HOMELESS

Scattered Fires Still Burn But Well Under Control

Winnipeg, Sept. 3 (CP)—Reports of damage mounting into thousands of dollars reached Winnipeg today from the Red Lake mining area of Northwestern Ontario, 175 miles northwest of here, where forest fires left six settlements in ashes before being checked by rain.

Full extent of damage by the fires that raged five days over fifteen square miles until rain checked them Monday has not been determined. Reports said no lives were lost although many persons were burned. About thirty log-type buildings were reported burned. Communication with the area is difficult.

Points affected were the Cole Gold Mines, the village of Cole, Ont., the Hay-Spiers Mine, the Middle Bay Mine and two other smaller settlements. Scattered fires are still burning.

The May-Spiers Gold Mine, closed down for the fall, the Middle Bay Gold Mine and camp buildings of the Cole Gold Mines were burned. Said Alexa Bardwell of Red Lake in a message here.

"The main fire started late last week and clashed from the Cole Gold Mine and within 24 hours it swept over five guards into the village," he said.

Raged Through Muskeg.

The fire raged through muskeg and timberlands over 300-foot Cole Mountain and burned to the home of Y. Cole, manager of the mine bearing his name, and the May after its construction had been completed.

The fire spread to the May-Spiers property, burning homes and the May-Spiers mine. On the northerly side of Pipestone Bay, a sudden change of wind prevented destruction of the post office and general store owned by Gordon Shearan, Dr. Smith, C. H. Nevell's home and Wings, Ltd., radio station.

Mr. Sandell said residents quit the fire zone and moved what belongings they could onto scows. It could not be learned if any of them homeless went to Red Lake, 25 miles east of Cole or whether they found shelter on the Pipestone.

The village of Cole was established in 1926 by Y. Cole whose father was one of the first mining prospectors to go into the Rossland, B.C., area, many years ago.

STIRRING STORY IN 25 HR. SWIM

Search Started For Fifteen Missing Members of Crew

Panama City, Fla., Sept. 3—(AP)—Story of a heroic 25-hour swim through choppy seas with the word of a torpedoing of their vessel was unfolded today while coast guardsmen searched, with deadening hope, a search for fifteen members of the crew of the freighter Tarpon. All the missing were negroes.

The hunt unleashed by the exploit of Addley Baker, 23-year-old Mobile, Ala., oiler, came in the rescue of nine survivors of the crew of twenty-nine. The negroes drifted ashore on floating wreckage. Two bodies, including a woman's, were recovered two days after the Tarpon, with Captain W. G. Barrow, veteran skipper who had been with the Tarpon since its launching, went down.

Baker, who left a hospital bed in recounting how he covered part of the 25 hours on his own account of help, "then I'd float for a while and swim some more".

Avoid Long Words, Sentences Newspaper Men Are Told

English Language Called Most Complicated of Languages

FEW SYLLABLES

AVOID LON G.. . . . . HisoM! Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP) — Young writers should avoid the use of long words and sentences, P. D. Ross, president of the Ottawa Journal, told a group of newspaper men at the Canadian National Exhibition offices. The greatest end in writing is to make the meaning clear," he said.

"The English language has two arenas, Mr. Ross said. "In the arena of literature, sweepingly kindred subjects Latin is the basis of the language. The language of science is difficult and complicated due to the long words. Mr. Ross believed.

"Expression of the spirit are derived from the Anglo-Saxon and Celtic words are overwhelmingly dominant.

"English Language of Spirit.

"In the English language the highest expression of the spirit is in the short words—words of one syllable. The English language is the most compact language of the civilization.

FARMER'S BODY FOUND IN FIELD

George R. Young of East Lake Suddenly Stricken

Lying twenty hours in a pasture field a bit the north of his farm, where he had succumbed to a sudden heart attack, the body of George R. Young, seventy-one-year-old Athol, Prince Edward County, farmer was discovered shortly after eight o'clock yesterday morning by a hired man.

The deceased, who lived alone with his helplessly crippled wife, left shortly after four o'clock Wednesday afternoon to get the cows. He did not return that night. Mrs. Young, who is confined to a wheel chair was unable to call for assistance. There was no telephone available. Yesterday morning, a labourer hired by the day, found the body of the elderly man when he reported for work. Mr. Young was a brother of Major Sherman Young, prominent East Lake farmer and an outstanding figure in Prince Edward County military circles.

SHORTAGE OF HELP IN TOMATO FIELDS

With the tomato crop rapidly approaching the peak of production, farmers of the district are experiencing a shortage of help in harvesting the crop. The warm weather of the past few days has rushed ripening of the vegetable and many fields are yielding heavy returns. A number of applications for pickers have been placed with the local Employment Office, but odd jobs and other employment have reduced the number of men who are usually available. Four and five cents per bushel are the rates paid by farmers. It was stated this morning.

Housewives of the city, returned from holidays and summer residences, have applied for female help for autumn housecleaning. Canning factories, however, have depleted the usual supply of labor and many housewives have been forced to postpone their cleaning activities.

HIS SHIP BOMBED

Captain George Yardley, (ASwe) master of the S.S. President Hoover, which was bombed and machine gunned when Chinese war aeroplanes "mistook" the ship for a Japanese transport. The Chinese government has expressed regret over the bombing and has offered to make adequate reparations for the damage incurred. Seven members of the crew of the giant liner were injured and were brought to Shanghai aboard the British flagship Cumberland, while the Hoover continued to Kobe, Japan.

PROGRESS

There may be some persons who look gloomily upon every aspect of this age, but there are facts which prove that people in this world do think of others. The epidemic of infantile paralysis which has stricken over seven hundred persons in Ontario, calls for giving of blood by victims, who have recovered from the disease, for the making of serum. In Ontario, blood has been donated and in Montreal recovered victims are giving their blood to help out in the Ontario battle against the crippling disease. Doctors in Toronto and Montreal point out the need of blood of this origin for the purpose of serum. Here doctors, nurses, and recovered victims doing their utmost under the moral law which requires them to be their brother's keeper.

In this distracted age, there are more signs no doubt than ever of man's interest in his fellowmen. Those who believe in progress look upon these as guide posts of the upward trend of civilization.

Such blessings as modern hospitals, modern medical science and the self-sacrifice of those engaged in the noble callings of medicine and nursing do cheer those who still believe that there is progress. These institutions are proof because they do what they do because there are the human heart, and hand behind all these Christian institutions.

GREAT NOVEL OF YEAR

In the last twelve months there has been no book of fiction appearing in the United States towering so impressively above the others as "Gone with the wind" by Margaret Mitchell, published in 1936. Prof. William Lyon Phelps so says in his "Books of the Year". He notes that "Gone with the Wind" sold more than half a million copies in less than six months. "So far as I know, no other new book has ever attained that figure during so brief a time," he states.

Books of high merit this year in fiction include these as the best in Dr. Phelps' opinion: "Emga" by Louis Paul, a fine novel of contemporary American life; "A Mighty Fortress," by Le Grand Cannon, Jr.; "Northwest Passage" by Kenneth Roberts; "Shining Scabbard" by R. C. Hutchinson; "The Devil and Daniel Webster" by S. V. Benet; "The Crime Wave at Blendings" by P. G. Wodehouse; "Light Woman" by Zona Gale and "The Missing Minister" by Erich Kaestner.

In general Prof. Phelps says the following authors, never let you down: Rex Stout, Carroll J. Daly; Agatha Christie; J. J. Farjeon; Patricia Wentworth; Ellery Queen; Rufus King; S. S. Van Dine; E. S. Gardner and H. M. McNeile (alas! that he is dead.)

MUSIC AND THE SCHOOL

The increasing importance of music in the schools of Ontario was stressed yesterday by Dr. Duncan McArthur, deputy minister of Ontario. Music classes have increased a hundred per cent in five years, he told the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition. The creation of great artists was not the chief aim though that was a great possibility but the raising of the average appreciation so as to add to the enjoyment of life, that is the principle aim.

Study of the fine arts leads to a true perspective of life, and the deputy minister thought that the scholar was entitled to learn of the arts. "We cannot afford to neglect beauty in any of its forms," he said. He saw music as a means of maintaining balance. "The more pupils who leave school with a song in their hearts, the less we will have in our mental hospitals in ten years' time."

More and more people will agree with the advice of the deputy minister. In schools where there is training in music, children of five and six years of age come to know minute details of the "spot" a composition of Brahms, of Beethoven or of Schubert, surely an indication of the great value of such training. Adults who lived before the days when music was given such a chance with the young do not know them but the youngest now do. It is nothing unusual to hear a boy who has been taught music in school whistling or humming one of the supreme works of musical literature. Where such wholesome musical thoughts are, there cannot but be something of beauty of character. Just as the tempo of one's stride is a part of one's self because it indicates individuality, so are music and the arts.

The development of great artists is not of course the primary aim but it may be a result of intensification of interest in music. Creation of original works of this kind is something of which a people might be rightly proud. But the chief aim of music study in the schools is to raise the standard of musical appreciation in as many as possible, Dr. Duncan truly says.

It is pleasing to note that in an age where it might be possible that the utilitarian might impress itself most strongly upon the young, the Department of Education as seen in its deputy stresses the element of beauty as taught in the fine arts as a very necessary part of education.

SNOWBOUND

All beautiful in this imprisonment.
These fragile flakes—each airy as a feather—
In concert conspiracy have planned together
To prove to mortal man how impotent
His vaunted power; how impertinent
His boastfulness. No iron chain could tether
More securely than this whim of weather
Hath bound me with its frailest component.

How changed and beauteous these hills have grown!
How bent these trees beneath their mantle white!
Methinks some half-god laughingly has strewn
These starry crystals from his happy height;
Then scurried to his cavern, pondering when
He'd send the sun to se me free again.

DO YOU REMEMBER THAT OLD "COW'S BREAKFAST" you used to wear when a barefoot boy, that is if you lived on a farm or in a small community. That wide-sweeping high domed straw hat which retailed for about a dime, but oh boy! wasn't it cool and comfy. Rugged too, for we could throw it down anywhere or use it for distance casts to see which could throw the farthest. Brings back pleasant memories, eh, what? So, when editor of Peterboro Review gets the summer fever and begins reminiscence of "That Old Straw Hat," that's news with a big N, and just shows he's yearning for an old-time vacation on the farm, with the fun of gathering eggs in the barn, swims in the ole swimmin' ole, and all that kind of thing. Here's what he says about THAT OLD STRAW HAT:

We noticed in a catalogue some new contraption for gathering eggs. There were small pieces which swung at the side like pages in a book and these could be turned in as required. The Tenth Concession there were two rather primitive articles used for picking up such things the apron and grandfather's straw hat. When it came time for applesauce we are certain most of the early apples came in via the apron and often enough a dozen ears of corn would come the same way.

But grandfather's old sun hat was a remarkable thing. The story was he had it from the days when the pioneer hauled his crops to gather the straw and make hats for the men. Of course that is not done any more probably because a straw hat is cheap and also there are few who would know how to do it. But grandfather's old hat was sufficient to provide shade for the head and it took in a great section of the shoulders as well. When the hens took to laying in the side of the straw stack or in the mow at times or even in the manger when the stock was out, grandfather's hat was the travelling companion of the one who went in search of eggs. It was also good as a nest for kittens, and served well for tomatoes or cucumbers, and in early fall we recall seeing it used for mushrooms; a little later on it held beechnuts or hickory nuts. When it was not in active service it was handy about the house for putting things in. Anything which did not belong any place else went in that soft old straw hat of other years. Whether there are any of its variety living today we do not know, but our guess is that the species is extinct.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Sept. 3rd, 1917.

The horse races at the Belleville Fair yesterday were interesting. In the 2.50 class, Mile heats, Danger Boy, owned by Dr. Alyea, Colborne, finished first three times out of four heats. Penalty Boy, owned by A. Randall, Kingston, came second; Baby K., owned by E. Hollingsworth, Athens, came third; Little Jerry owned by R. Furley, Frankford, came fourth; Little Keith, owned by Mr. Hawley, Napanee, came fifth. Time: 2.34 1-4; 2.33 1-4; 2.31 1-2; 2.32 3-4. In the 2.18 class, mile heats, Dick Bryson, owned by Geo. Powell, Belleville, won in three straight heats; Bobbie Palch, owned by W. Orr, Belleville, came second; Maggie Brady, owned by D. Vickerson, Napanee, came third, and Mrs. Napanee, came third, and Mrs. Reino V. owned by J. Vasseau, Trenton, came last. Time: 2.18; 2.18 1-2; 2.18 1-4. In the "Hurry Up Call" race for prizes donated by Mr. Charles J. Symons and Mr. J. V. Doyle, Mr. W. C. Ketcheson was the winner. The other entries were Lorne Hiscott and John Latta. Each drove a horse attached to a buggy and was compelled to drive down the track, pick up one passenger on the return race around the track once. Mr. Brock and Mr. Latta took the lead, but Mr. Ketchesson, with the fastest horse and soon overhauled his competitors and won. Mr. Hiscott came second.

30 YEARS AGO

Mr. T. Blackburn is spending a few days at Trenton, Belleville and Cleveland.

Mrs. Charles Wilmot's pony, Black Jack, took first prize at the Toronto Exhibition yesterday.

The new offices of the United Empire Bank opened this morning on the east side of Front street, nearly opposite the new American Hotel. Mr. J. F. O. Phillips, a resident of Belleville for many years, is the manager.

On the invitation of ex-Mayor Wainwright, a jolly party of about 30 persons took the steamer Salaberry, yesterday, and went to Bay View where they had a successful day's fishing. The catch was an immense one, consisting mostly of bass, bunge and pike, the latter predominated. The members of the party were out in eleven small boats. Three bunge were caught, two of them were caught by Mayor Charles N. Salman. In fact His Worship was right in luck and had the best catch of the day. No bait was used, all the fish were caught while trolling.

At four o'clock yesterday morning a barn belonging to Mr. Wilbert Maybee, situated in Ameliasburgh township, Prince Edward County, was struck by lightning and totally destroyed.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gordon, Church Street, are visiting Mr. Gordon's old home in Hungerford Township for a few days.

Dr. Farley is attending a meeting of the Canadian Medical Association at Montreal.

Mr. H. Corby entertained a party of ladies and gentlemen to a trip to Glenora on the steamer Aurelia Lake yesterday afternoon.

The steamer Alexandria will run an excursion to Charlotte (Port of Rochester) leaving Belleville at 2 p.m. on the evening of Sept. 11th. Fare for round trip $1.25. (Advt.)

It is proposed to remove the carters' stand from Victoria Avenue to the vacant lot on the west bank of the river south of the footbridge. A lot to be used for this purpose has been placed at the disposal of the city council by Mr. James Cummins.

The duck hunting parties down the bay were not very successful. Messrs. Anson-Cartwright, Geo. Leavens, R. Foy, Harry Day and Police Officer Stoneberg got ten ducks in the marsh near Demorestville. Several parties returned without any ducks. There were ducks in the marshes but the incessant firing of the novices scared them out. Better shooting is expected next week.

Sept. 3rd, 1887

Mr. Thomas Wren, who has been employed in Mr. S. C. Retallack's store here for the past seven years, left last night for Montreal where he has accepted a position.

Mr. W. H. Donley, the new organist at Bridge Street Methodist Church has arrived to assume his duties.

Ald. N. B. Falkner is ready to receive tenders for lighting the coal oil street lamps in the city. Heretofore one person has lighted all the lamps. Under the new arrangement the four wards are to be divided and the work given to two men, each of whom will benefit by the arrangement.

Mr. J. McG. Young, who for a time was in the legal offices of Messrs. Clute & Williams in this city, has been called to the bar and he is now a full-fledged solicitor and barrister.

Mr. William Cook of this city has been appointed judge of butter, and cheese at the Toronto Fair.

Barley sold here today at 60 cents per bushel and oats at 36 cents per bushel.

Mr. Walter Fanning will ship eight horses to New York on Monday. The shipment will be made up of two trotters, a coach team and four single drivers.

TAKE LEAD IN ORGANIZING BELLEVILLE FAIR

To the booming of cannon, the annual Belleville fair officially opened its gates Tuesday. Dr. A. E. Barton, deputy minister of agriculture, officiated. Known throughout Ontario as attracting the best livestock exhibits, keen competition is expected today as stock judging, which began yesterday, goes into the final stage. Forty trotting horses, including one from Hon. Mr. Hepburn's stables, will also be part of the attraction. The executive committee is shown here with Dr. Barton. Left to right, Mayor R. D. Arnott, Dr. Barton, James Barber, president of the fair board; D. A. Thrasher, vice president and W. Reid second vice-president.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN INSECT DISPLAY

One indication of the interest being displayed by residents of the city and district in the insect display arranged at the Fair by the local Dominion Entomological Bureau in which the various helpful and harmful insects are on view, with capable entomologists also present at the booth to answer the various questions, in the space of twenty minutes last evening it is estimated by Mr. A. B. Baird, chief of the laboratory that 188 people had visited the booth. The highest average number of visitors has been estimated at 200 for the same period of twenty minutes.

Farmers have during the past year or so taken a decidedly keener interest in insect pests and their control, it was declared by Mr. Baird. They have come to realize the necessity of control through lessons well learned by successive crop failures. "We can't explain too much to them. They want to know every step and every angle of our work," stated the laboratory chief.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was trying to make his cigar lighter work and ma said, for certain, somebody named Thurston Willows this afternoon, Willyum.

It must of taken quite a bit of doing, I understand, she's the social Napoleon of these parts, pop said, and ma said, That's just the point, I mean that's the point.

She appointed me to act on the prize committy for her next charity bridge, wich is not an honor to be laughingly sneezed at, I assure you, and this afternoon she was suppose to call me up to receive my instructions, ma said.

When does the plot start? pop said, and ma said, Rite now, I mean rite then. When Mrs. Thurston Willows calls anyone up on the telefone, the first voice you here is her secretary saying, Just a moment, please, Mrs. Thurston Willows wishes to speak to you. And there you are left dangling on the other end of the wire like a galley slave until the voice of Mrs. Thurston Willows puts in an appearance. And that's more you're perfectly helpless. I mean you are unless you have an inspiration the way I did, ma said.

Make way for the plot, pop said, and ma said, The telefone rang and I answered it and admitted I was Mrs. Potts, and Mrs. Thurston Willows secretary said Just a moment and so 4th, as usual, and finally Mrs. Thurston Willows voice came on in person, saying, Mrs. Potts? and I stayed as silent as the grave, and I heard her say, Well how singular. And she hung up and then I called her up and of course got her secretary again, and I said, Does Mrs. Thurston Willows wish to speak to Mrs. Potts, we must of been cut off, and after some more silent dangling Mrs. Thurston Willows voice reappeared and we had our conversation. Wasn't that clever of me, Willyum? ma said.

Pop not saying on account of being behind the sporting page by that time.

WIDE AREA

This action was but one point of the governments plans to curb the maritime outrages. The other avenues was through negotiation toward unified action by the affected powers.

France was expected to propose a method of collective action at a conference of Mediterranean powers next week at Geneva.

French Ships On Patrol.

France, deeply concerned over the threat to Mediterranean shipping and her own colonial communications, sloughed ships on patrol duty. The sloops D'Iberville and Iphicenie and the destroyer Verdun arrived today at Algiers.

The situation was aggravated anew by reports last night the Soviet freighter Blagoev had been sunk in the northern Aegean Sea and its wireless operator killed.

Captain Denis Kazmaikes of the Blagoev, said the attacking submarine flew the Spanish Insurgent flag. He had 26 members of the crew and three women were picked up from their drifting lifeboats by a Greek fishing boat.

Attack on Russian Ship.

Kazmaikes said the saw the undersea craft halt and search an unidentified tanker before permitting it to continue.

The attack on the Blagoev was much the same as on the others—except that the attacker displayed a flag. They opened fire without warning the waves, one as a warning shot and the other into the side of the ship. The crew scarcely had time to escape.

The crew said they were taking the ship to France with a cargo of asphalt.

Another incident—this one stirringly related directly to the Spanish Insurgents—was reported from Algeria. A band of Insurgents said to have come from Algiers seized the Spanish Government freighter Marmagen while it lay at anchor and escaped with the vessel.

Better Containers Needed For Garbage

"Residents are getting careless about their garbage lately," commented Alderman Thos. Cushing, Chairman of Market and City Property at the April ball this morning.

"Not their garbage, exactly, but the containers they have been using to put it in. Some are not much better than tin cans in that respect, but lately the custom of using any kind of box or crate, or tin has become more prevalent. In many instances the containers are hardly holding themselves together, let alone the contents.

"This condition has led to a number of complaints on the part of the more tidy house holder against those who use sloppy methods in packing their garbage in poor containers on the street. Before the truck has had a chance to collect, many times the refuse is strewn for a half block by dogs, principally."

Slower collections have also resulted from the custom of using make-shift containers, and overloading the cans, it is pointed out by Alderman Cushing in his appeal for more cooperation in this respect. It may eventually lead to much greater cost in the matter of collections, it is also pointed out.

NO PARALYSIS CASES IN CITY

Department of Health to Have "Iron Lungs" Ready For Emergency

In the event of emergency an "iron lung" will be available for the treatment of any patient suffering from infantile paralysis who has reached the paralytic stage in this city, Belleville residents have been assured by the Ontario Department of Health. No cases have developed here and there are no suspicious cases of sickness.

The provincial department has entered into an arrangement with the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, for the immediate construction of a number of metal "lungs", perfected from an original wooden one completed last week by a Toronto laboratory worker for the use of Toronto sufferers. Work on the "lungs" will be carried out in twenty-four shifts until the present demand is filled. The entire cost will be borne by the Ontario Department of Health.

Other cities where such "lungs" will be available, as announced by the Department are, Ottawa, Brockville, London, Barrie and St. Catharines.

In the event of a clinic being held in this city for younger residents of the city for nasal-treatment by zinc sulphate as at present being carried on in Toronto, a supply of this medicine is now available at the Belleville General Hospital.

Sanitary Inspector Hope McGinnis has completed most of the work of posting swimming ban notices about the bathing places, at the beaches, the dock and harbor and the river within the city limits. The posting of notices of the ban against swimming has yet to be completed at Zwick's Island.

It is reported that some nasal spraying of small children with zinc sulphate has been done by some family doctors in Belleville against the possibility of the disease.

FIREMEN'S EXHIBIT AT LOCAL FAIR

Belleville Firemen attracted attention in more ways than one at the Belleville Fair. They were seen on the grounds where they have had equipment for the protection of the grounds against any possibility of fire. But in the merchants' building they had an exhibit of prizes donated by the manufacturers and dealers and citizens for the annual charity ball, for Christmas giftings. Through such generosity the Firemen are enabled to carry on and they hope to expand their philanthropic work.

The exhibit was an opportunity for the public to witness the work they are carrying on.

In charge of the booth with the numerous prizes for the ball are three young ladies, Phyllis Armstrong, Helen McQuaid and Jean Ramsay.

KILLED IN CAR CRASH

Aurora, Ont. Sept. 3 (CP)—Alfred Wakelin, 31, was killed and five other persons injured when an automobile left a highway and crashed into a fifth near here last night. Cause of the accident was undetermined.

DEATH STARTS WAR

Lieut. Isao Oyama, commander of a Japanese navy unit, whose death is said to have started the present undeclared war between China and Japan. Oyama and his seaman chauffeur, Yozo Saito, were shot to death as they rode in their automobile past a group of Chinese soldiers at Shanghai. Subsequent inquiry by both China and Japan led to the present war now raging in north and east China and which has claimed many lives. The shooting of the Japanese lieutenant took place August 9.

ONTARIO CASES AT TOTAL 1083

Fifty New Cases Are Reported in Province in 24 Hours

Ontario's infantile paralysis epidemic has run approximately one-third of its natural course, according to official estimates. Starting in early June, the disease is expected in all to inflict 2,805 persons before it dies out in late October. To date almost 1,000 persons have been stricken. Most cheering feature of the outbreak, known scientifically as poliomyelitis, is that one-quarter of its victims show no signs of paralysis. For them the disease is in a milder form, distressful but not dangerous. Official pronouncements further state a majority of those afflicted by the disease in its paralytic form will recover complete use of their limbs.

Keeping Away From Crowds.

In accordance with warning children should be kept from crowds, municipality after municipality has acted. Chatham district announced nine school fairs scheduled in the next two weeks. Petrolia followed the lead of many other places and closed its schools until Sept. 13. So did Wingham, also banning theatres and dance hall attendance.

London, having postponed school opening until Sept. 13, took another hoist to Sept. 13. Fifty-five persons are under treatment there and four have died. Windsor's eight cases are mild ones. Guelph had its first suspected case. Oil and serum was rushed there Thursday night by motor from Hamilton. The school the child attended was closed.

Brampton, north of Toronto, is an infected spot with 28 cases in surrounding Peel County where two have died. Brampton schools are closed "until danger is past".

Toronto with 330 cases and 11 deaths since June 10 remained the epidemic centre.

1937 Cases

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—The Ontario Department of Health reported today the number of infantile paralysis cases in the province stood at 1,083, an increase of 50 in 24 hours. A death in the Muskoka district brought the number of fatalities in the epidemic which began in June to 39.

Dr. B. T. McGhie, Deputy Minister of Health, said that despite the seriousness of the epidemic the number of known cases of extensive paralysis or permanent disability was not excessive. Of the 56 new cases, 13 are in Western Ontario, 26 in Central Ontario, including 18 in Toronto, eight in Eastern Ontario and one in the Sudbury district of Northern Ontario.

Toronto Has 18 New Cases

Toronto, Sept. 2 (CP)—Fourteen new cases of infantile paralysis were reported by the Department of Health here today, raising the number since the epidemic broke out early in June to 327. A special meeting of the Board of Education will be held next Thursday, it was announced, to decide whether further postponement of reopening of the schools was necessary. The schools are scheduled to reopen Sept. 13.

PLEADS GUILTY REMANDED WEEK

Vincent Deshane, Kingston, Admits Robbing His Grandmother

Napanee, Sept. 3.—(CP)—Admitting in police court here Thursday he plotted and assisted in a robbery from his 79-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Emily Leary of Napanee, Vincent Deshane, Kingston, pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery with violence and was remanded one week for sentence by Magistrate E. J. Butler.

Thomas Murray, Kingston, who entered the woman's home in company with Deshane and who had entered a plea of guilty at a previous hearing, will also be sentenced at the same time.

Robert J. Harpell and Russell Northmore, who also are accused on the night of the robbery, have not pleaded not guilty to the same charge and judgment in their case was also laid over for one week.

Mrs. Emily Jane Leary testified the robbery took place shortly after she had gone to bed. She had locked the door as usual and it was forced open and two men came in. They entered her room and shouted "we want your money, do you want us to shoot you? We will," she said. She handed over her pocketbook which she said contained about $2 and they demanded her watch. She said her jaws and her face were still sore from the beating she suffered.

Medical testimony was that the woman was bleeding profusely when aid arrived, one eye was severely shut and there was a deep gash on the throat.

Evidence disclosed the quartet had gone in Harpell's car to Mrs. Leary's directed by Deshane. There Murray and Deshane got out of the car while Harpell and Northmore went up the road to turn around and stop a short distance west of the woman's cottage. Harpell driving the car, denied any knowledge of what had taken place but Deshane, recalled, said Harpell had warned him a few days later to keep quiet about the matter.

When all four reached a hotel in Napanee after the robbery there was blood on Murray's shoulders and tortoiseshe gave him his wrist breaker to wash. Deshane showed in evidence, Deshane described Murray throwing the purse to Harpell, the latter removing the contents and tearing the purse up. This action was denied by both Harpell and Murray.

Provincial and local police made the arrests about five days after the assault.

CHONA BUYIN GAIRCRAFT

Washington, Sept. 3 (AP)—China bought more United States aircraft than any other foreign country during the first six months of 1937, the Commerce Department reported today.

Sales abroad up to July 1 reached $16,290,580, an increase of 90 per cent. Chinese bought $3,615,222 in planes, engines and accessory during the first half of this year.

GRACE MOORE OPERATED ON

Hollywood, Sept. 3—(AP)—Grace Moore, singing star of many films, underwent an operation today. Her physician, Dr. Samuel Hirschfield, said it was a minor one.

UPHELD BY DEPUTIES

The French government, under the premiership of Camille Chautemps, (ABOVE), has taken over control of all railway lines in France as part of the plan to nationalize certain branches of industry. Premier Chautemps was made premier following the resignation of Leon Blum when the parliament refused to grant him powers of a virtual dictator. Blum is now vice-premier in the present cabinet. The government will hold 51 per cent of the new capitalization of the railroads including a $1,046,500,000 assessment for the private lines, six of which were put under state control.

AVOID LONG WORD

"In translating the Gospel of St. Mark into European languages, it was found 29,000 English syllables resulted 33,000 syllables in French and 36,000 in German, said Mr. Ross.

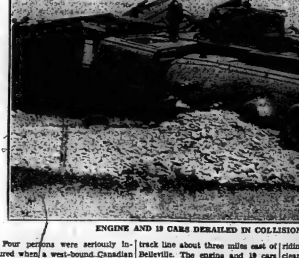
"In the whole range of English poetry there is not more than four or five per cent of words of more than two syllables. Twelve to fifteen per cent are words of two syllables and 80 per cent of the words of English poetry are of one syllable," Shakespearian Sound.

"Shakespeare's sonnets conceived to touch the high-water mark of pure poetry number 154. There are 22,000 words of which less than four per cent are of more than two syllables," he continued.

In spite of the "enormous mystic-ism", of Milton's Paradise Lost, the longest poem in the language, not more than 15 per cent of the words are long," Mr. Ross said. He quoted the following from Shakespeare's Cymbeline which contains only one word of more than two syllables.

Memorization of Poetry.

Any study of great poetry would bear out his theory Mr. Ross believed. He had learned to memorize great pieces of poetry partly because he loved it and partly because he hoped it would improve his writing.



"Any young man who hopes to be a writer need not think he will do so by picking out long, resounding words. If anything will hasn the meaning of a passage it is to dribble a sentence through 12 or 15 lines.

"The French shoot out paragraphs like machine gun bullets, fast and to the point," he concluded. "Avoid long paragraphs."

BUS CRASH KILLS FIVE, INJURES TWENTY-FOUR PERSONS

Five persons were killed and 24 injured when a heavy passenger car ran through a stop intersection five miles north of Goshen, Ind., andrest on its top. The other car, wrecked and its driver killed, came to rest 300 feet away. Photo shows the wrecked bus, and baggage of the passengers thrown on the highway.

ENGINE AND 13 CARS DERAILED IN COLLISION WITH HAND CAR AT B ELLEVILLE

Four persons were seriously injured when a west-bound Canadian Pacific freight train collided head-on with a hand-car on a single track line about three miles east of Belleville. The engine and 19 cars were derailed, telescoping and piling up crosswise on the track. Two men riding on the hand-car jumped clear and escaped injury as the collision occurred. The engineer and fireman also jumped, but the engineer, G. H. Francis and Fireman J. Carpenter, both of Smith's Falls, suffered severe hurts from their jump. L. Black, brakeman, was critically injured.

Style Show Held by Liberal Ladies of Murney Ward

Fashions to delight the heart of feminine Belleville were presented at a tea and style show arranged in the Liberal Clubrooms yesterday by ladies of Murney Ward. The Club presented a very fine appearance with decorations in red, white, and blue, with a floral scheme of yellow and white. The stage was decorated with yellow streamers and ferns, while the tea table with its handsome lace and poinsettia was centred with a silver basket of white blossoms, and tall yellow tapers in silver holders. The small tables were decorated in white and yellow.

Five young ladies introduced the fashions. They were Misses Vera Dermott, Margaret Drummond, Phyllis Lewis, Mrs. Ralph Plumpton and Mrs. M. J. Brooks.

Supplied by a large department store, the fashions included Fall and Winter trends in afternoon, sports and dinner dresses, suits and coats in afternoon dresses, simplicity in the ensemble, with attention paid to neck and sleeve treatment. Black is very much to the fore with green, burgundy and brown greatly favoured. The trim little suits for fall wear were very smart indeed. The dinner gowns were strikingly beautiful in velvet, chiffon, and one particularly interesting model was of satin, in a rich old gold shade. Smart little hats worn by the mannequins depicted the very new set ideas in millinery. In velvet and felt they were charming creations, matching exactly the costumes with which they were shown, and exaggeratingly worn by the mannequins.

Completing a fine show, fur scarves were displayed by Delaneys and were received with great enthusiasm by the ladies in the audience. In gray squirrel, muskrat, Hudson seal, broadtail, gray lamb, natural coats were shown in examples of models, fitted styles, full and shorter lengths, and were beautiful examples of the furrier's arts. Silver fox scarves and capes added to the interest of the show.

During the afternoon, tea was served. The tea table was presided over by Mrs. J. A. Faulkner, Mrs. R. Cameron and Mrs. Mackenzie Robertson. Those who assisted in the serving were Mrs. E. Beal, Mrs. H. Horne, Mrs. Drummond, Mrs. Naylor, Mrs. L. Donaldson and Miss Bessie Bone. Miss Margaret McAvoy was treasurer of the tea.

The unavoidable absence of The Honorable Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health was much regretted, and a telegram from him was read by Mrs. Faulkner, who explained that Dr. Faulkner's presence in Toronto was of the utmost importance, as the Department had before it a great issue brought about by the prevalence or that dread disease, infantile paralysis. She asked the ladies to renew their efforts in the campaign, to make up for the absence of their candidate. Mrs. Plumpton was introduced by Mrs. Plumpton who was convener of the Style Show.

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 3 (CP) —Political wiseacres are getting considerable amusement these days by recalling that the Liberal and Conservative candidates in the current provincial election campaign once campaigned together for a Progressive Conservative candidate. It's not so many years since Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn and his present opponent, Norman Martin, Conservative, successfully "stumped" East Elgin riding for Sid McDermand, Progressive.

Weddings

STRATTON—CARSON

The marriage of Miss Eunice Carson, daughter of the late Rev. A. B. Carson of Australia, to Andrew Carson Stratton, son of Mr. Andrew Stratton of Shamrockville, Ontario, was solemnized in St. Andrew's United Church Parsonage at Niagara Falls, Ontario, with Rev. William Plumpton officiating.

The bride wore a lovely gown of pink lace over pink taffeta with halo hatch to match and carried white gladioli. Her sister, Miss Esther Carson of Toronto, was bridesmaid and wore baby-blue net over blue taffeta with matching tandeau and carried pink gladioli. The best man was Mr. L. F. Morrison of Troyes, Ontario.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Park Restaurant. Mr. and Mrs. Stratton are spending their honeymoon in New York City and upon their return will reside in Belleville, Ontario.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Don't Waste Your Happiness in Cancelled Nuptials!

Mr. A. doesn't go home to dinner any more, sometimes, you find him dining alone in a restaurant, and all at a solitary table in the club—anywhere but at the expensive home he built for his family.

The poor man doubtless remembers Solomon's admonition: "Better a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." It's a very nice house that Mr. A. sneaks into, late at night, with the fond hope that his wife may be sound asleep in her pink bedroom, and not tell him about all the grief she has endured since he went to his office at nine.

Mr. A. is a highly successful lawyer. No, he doesn't specialize in divorce, though, after his experience at home, he is surprised to learn that he is not the leading divorce specialist in the United States. When he married, less than twenty years ago, he was wildly in love with his wife. She was handsome, an answer to any maiden's prayer.

Today he is bald, homely, and has an uneasy way of looking over his shoulder, as if he might be dodging something. He is. He is dodging his wife's constant complaining. She is a thirty-third degree nagger, and knows all the tricks in addition to the lovely home they have an excellent car and a chauffeur, though Mr. A. patronizes street cars and cabs because his wife and daughter might like to use the car.

In addition to the chauffeur, two servants, are kept, and the installes of these three (chauffeur, cook and housemaid) form the burden of Mrs. A.'s dirges. She waits up for her husband in the pink bedroom to tell him of all the derelictions he may have been guilty of during the day. They do things to spite her; she charges servants, but it is always the same.

Her daughter's unpopularity becomes next; and then she winds up with the rich enjoyment of her own poor health. The daughter is unpopular because she has been brought up by a whiney, nagging mother. Whining and nagging are the only mediums of expression the poor girl knows. Naturally, she's unpopular.

The atmosphere of that lovely house, which should be gay and joyous, a gathering place for their friends, is about as cheerful as the waiting room at an undertaker's.

Mr. A.'s terrific patience has lasted for years. It will continue until he seems but a parody of his former self. No one knows why he put up with these things, but put up with them, he does.

If Mr. A. were to die, and it was revealed that his estate was absolutely bankrupt, and Mrs. A. had to turn to and earn her living, the experience might make her husband, had she belonged, constitutionally and by preference, to that great army of people who are happiness wasters.

They live in the past, which, if the truth were only known, they were just as wretched about, or in an impossible future, which never will dawn for them because they lack the ability to make the most of the wonderful hour.

Meantime, Mr. A. and all the other husbands of "Calamity Janes" dine anywhere to escape the wail. Don't be a happiness waster!

"Thank-You" Cards Taboo

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I—I am going to be married in the fall, and I would appreciate it very much if you will help me write to send to my wedding invitations.

My mother has just re-married. Shall my invitations read like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Henri Jerome request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter at the marriage of Mrs. Brown's daughter

Ann

Although I have a great deal of respect for my stepfather, I just don't determine which is the better form to use.

Also, I would like to know if a written note is better than a thank-you card for any wedding or shower presents that I may receive. I prefer the written note, but I've been told that a thank-you card is to be used now.

G.

1.—As far as best form goes, the first form of invitation . . . at the marriage of their daughter . . . is the one that I hope you will use. Since apparently you respect and like your stepfather, this form would, I am sure, please both your mother and him. The second form

. . . at the marriage of Mrs. Brown's daughter . . . always seems so "pointed," as if one were unwilling to make the complete gesture of recognition of fruitful relationship.

2.—Please, please, write notes of thank-you for wedding presents and shower presents, or for any other kind of present. A thank-you card is "being used" only by ill-bred people, people who are unwilling to take the time and trouble to write a gracious note, people who are lamely satisfied to use those empty phrases "made up" by someone who has not the remotest relationship to either the sender or the receiver of the gift.

There really cannot be any argument about this: If we receive a ready-made card in thanks for a gift, we know at once that the sender of that bleak card hasn't the remotest conception of even decent manners.

Postcards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to send a vacation postal card to one's employer? He is in his late thirties and is married. I am twenty-three and know his wife slightly. Should it be addressed to both of them, and should it be sent to his home address?

P.

I'd rather that you wouldn't send a vacation post-card to your employer . . . it is a pointless gesture, especially since apparently you don't know Mrs. employer well enough even! if you insist on sending it, address it to both your employer and his wife, and to their home address.

Bridal Procession

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married soon and I am planning to have a church wedding.

1—Please tell me where in the bridal procession the flower girl and the ring bearer walk when there are to be a matron of honor and bridesmaids? When do they walk together?

2.—How should the ring be carried?

Nancy

1.—First, in the processional, come the ushers, walking together two by two. Then the bridesmaids, walking together, two by two. Then the maid of honor, walking alone. Then the flower girl. Then the ring bearer. Then the bride and her father.

2.—We usually don't see a ring-bearer in a wedding processional nowadays. But if the bride insists on having one, he usually carries a small satin pillow, on which reposes a dummy ring, for he is quite likely to drop it. And if the ring is securely fastened to the pillow, it means difficulty when the bride pulls the pillow at the right time.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Heroes

By LUCY TREVGOLOW

McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

Carmela Torelli was ashamed of her father. And the tragedy was the greater because she also adored him.

By sheer mental brilliance, Carmela had risen from poverty to the competence of fifty-a-week, but when she stepped into the office each morning she was haunted by fear lest the mire of the squalid street in the section where she still lived might be clinging to the hem of her skirt.

To her enthusiasts that they move to some pretty suburb, Pasquale Torelli stubbornly turned a deaf ear. He had saved a neat little sum in all these years, but he had known the days when he had been obliged to draw in his belt, and he refused to give up his work or move to more expensive quarters. So, of a morning, as Carmela left their tiny rooms in the old, overcrowded tenement house and stepped warily over the rough cobblestones, striving to keep her daintily footwear clean, old Pasquale often plodded close behind her, trundling his pushcart filled with fruits or vegetables.

Carmela hated that pushcart, even while she admitted to herself that it had earned their daily bread and butter, her in fine clothes while the other children in her neighborhood had worn coarse cottons.

Carmela was in love. Yes, with "the boss," Luigi Mangano, head of the big firm of Mangano & Cypriani, for whom she was a secretary, and her desk facing his in the private office.

He was handsome and distinguished-looking, was Luigi . . . she was sure he must be of noble ancestry. Who was she, Carmela Torelli, daughter of a fruit-peddling pushcart, to long for the love of this man? Nevertheless, sometimes, the words rose up and find his eyes fixing on her, with an expression that made her tremble, even while she wondered at its sadness.

Then one day, in the office to the washstand, she tripped over a small rug, and there fell Mangano, only that, for Luigi jumped up and caught her in his arms. And he kissed her.

The next second he was free, and he was being miserably, "Carmela, I didn't mean to do it. Please forgive me and forget about it. I love you, but I never meant you to know it. Our position is all wrong. I'm the boss."

"Do you suppose I don't realize that?" she cried. All the more bitterly because her pride was trampling on the wildly beating joy of his kiss. "You have everything and you live in a big house, while I live in the dingiest street in the city, and my father wheels a pushcart. Don't worry, I'll forget it!"

"What, indeed!" he answered, with even greater bitterness. "Do you think that would hold me from loving you? I grew up in a dingy street, but you always had a roof over your head. Many a night I've crouched in a doorway or huddled in a doorway to keep from freezing, because I had to. Hunger I was tempted to steal. I educated myself, in the public school on rags. And do you know what my father was? A crook! A petty thief! Don't look at my pushcart, but he's honest. Honest, Carmela! Honest! It's the only thing I have had a father like him. Do you think I'd ask any woman to marry the son of a crook?"

Suddenly Carmela's mental vision flashed a picture of old Pasquale; saw him as he had always toiled through the years, pushing his cart, facing cold and sleet and rain, or willing under a blazing July sun; saw him always smiling, shouting his wares in a cheerful voice, even while he shook with an ague.

She remembered the years when, at the end of a hard day, he had entered the tenement kitchen where she was preparing into her mother's apron. And she realized that he had been trying to tell her how she had been ashamed, was one of love, may not know want.

At the same moment she knew that, before Luigi, he who had been so hungry that he had been driven to steal," but who nevertheless had conquered temptation and probably crushed an inherited tendency to vice, was a sn&ddotstrieglocrosa Unlis tro of another sort. Now what greater foe can man have to battle than a hungry heart?

Her arms crept up about his neck, and of her own accord she kissed him, forgetting a little hysterically, "If you won't ask me to marry you, Luigi, then I'll have to do the proposing myself. You're a darned sight more worthy of any woman than if you had been born in a cabin with a gold spoon in your mouth. Luigi, I love you!"

"Carmela!"

And when, somewhat later, they wended their way through the streets where she lived, Carmela glowed with pride over the satisfied pat of self-possessing her arm met to her father—real men, both: each capable of appreciating the other's qualities.

That Body of Yours

REAL VALUE... SAFEGUARDS HEALTH

EMOTIONAL DISTURBANCES, CAUSE RHEUMATISM AND OTHER AILMENTS

You may be really enjoying your dinner when the telephone rings and the information that comes over it so upsets you that you can not finish your dinner; in fact you may be sorry that you ate anything. In addition to the loss of appetite as the worry or anxiety continues, you may have crying spells, attacks of coughing much like asthma, your heart may beat rapidly, and your hands and feet may feel cold.

This arises as circumstances which affect your mind not only affect the workings of the body, some physicians point out that the effects of these emotional disturbances is to cause rheumatism in many cases.

Dr. James Halliday in the British Medical Journal, in connection with the relation of rheumatism to mental upsetments, points out that in 1,000 consecutive rheumatic cases about 40 per cent. suffered from an emotional disturbance. The results of a second inquiry showed that in 62 consecutive persons suffering from rheumatism 37 per cent. were disabled because of emotional or mental disturbances.

That the upset or disturbed mind affects the beating of the heart, the flow of digestive juices, disturbances of the bladder and large bowel, in fact affects all parts of the body, is now definitely known.

"This may be illustrated by considering the emotion of fear which is the response to the loss of a person or object that has been dear. The acute phase of the brief may last for days or weeks. The symptoms may involve all the working parts of the body, and include fear, sobs, trembling, twitching of the lips and hands, a general sense of coldness, distaste for food (especially fresh foods and milk), with a feeling of the food forming in the gullet, and the heart 'turning,' to stone,' or 'breaking'. Also the sufferer feels afraid of being sick if he had been thrashed. As time passes all these symptoms may pass away. There are some cases where the choking and sobbing may merge into asthma, the pain of the broken heart into angina (gripping pain under breastbone), and the stiffness and soreness into rheumatism."

When we remember what grief does to the working parts of the body it is not surprising that these physical ailments—asthma, palpitation of the heart, loss of appetite, constipation—may follow emotional disturbances.

Trivial Defects in Dress Often Mars Girl's Charm

By Helen Follett

It is surprising how a trivial defect in grooming will take the wind out of the beauty sails. Rouge put on the buttonhole gloves that are soiled, a glimpse of the slip beneath the hem of the skirt do not add to a girl's charm.

These are the days of fastidiousness in dress. To attain perfection of appearance play safe with plain attire. Too many decorations are likely to make one overdressed. There is nothing more terrible than looking overdressed. If in doubt about that shoulder flower or the pearl pin, as Aunt Jane left you, take it off. Keep in mind the effect of the ensemble. Hats should be plain too. The plainer the better. And don't forget that a well-fitted hat is more important than the clothes she wears.

Just as we remember the one mean thing said by a friend who has always been most kind to us, so do we remember defects of dress. If a soiled shoulder strap in full view catches the attention, qualities of beauty pass unnoticed.

The small-sized woman has no reason to complain about stature. She can wear lovely clothes from the junior department and the misses' next. Her thing hands and feet appeal to the men.

When she gets along in years she must still wear youthful clothes. Unless she gains weight, she will always appear younger than her years.

Toe nails, like finger nails, have their troubles. The flesh hardens, grows up on the nail base and looks ugly.

After the bath, put a drop of mineral oil on each toe nail. Press it in well. If the cuticle sticks, lift it up gently with the orange wood stick. Unless something is done, it will creep far up on the nail and cause trouble.

Cut toe nails straight across. Don't meddle with corns. A wound with scissors or knife can become infected. Get larger shoes; calloused spots that twinge and hurt will d'appear.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Holmes of Rednersville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Irene, to Mr. Leonard Rushlow of Belleville, the wedding to take place in September.

Miss Helen May has returned from a visit to her grandparents at Aurora, Illinois.

Dr. Mathieson was the guest of Miss Mary Mathieson at luncheon in Kingston yesterday. Miss Mathieson left today for a short holiday in England.

Mr. Arthur May, who has been as Newcastle Mines for the summer, is spending a week or two at home before returning to Queen's University.

A most delightful wiener roast was held at the Bay of Quinte Beach last night by Mrs. J. Hinn and Miss Vera Read. Music was supplied by Mr. and Mrs. Gosling. A most enjoyable evening was had by all.

Miss Rugenda May has returned from a summer spent in Melamore, Michigan, with the Detroit Girl Scouts. She will return to school at Oberlin, Ohio, shortly.

Among the many visitors to the Hotel Quinte this week were Mr. and Mrs. D. Bulloch and Miss Ruth Bulloch of Inglewood, California. Mr. Bulloch was joined here by his brother, Mr. W. R. Bulloch, M.L.A., who represents one of the Montreal seats in the Quebec Legislature. There were also present at a dinner party Mrs. W. R. Bulloch and Miss Isabel Bulloch. The dinner had an international aspect as Mr. W. R. Bulloch's son-in-law, Dr. W. Fitzgerald and his young daughter, Cornerbrook, Newfoundland, also joined the gathering. Mr. Bulloch was very favorably impressed with the conditions in Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Neal 5 Ridley Street, quietly celebrated their 48th wedding anniversary. Present for the occasion were their two children, W. E. Neal, Verdun, Que., W. J. Neal, Belleville, R. H. Neal, Detroit, Mrs. Vivian Boston, Napanee and Mrs. J. O. Collyer, Weston, Ontario.

GALA DANCE TO CLOSE THE FAIR

Floor Show Will Also Be Staged in Connection With Dance

Climaxing for gala days and forty more entertaining nights a special finale has been added to the Belleville Fair in the staging of a dance and floor show in the Agricultural Building tonight.

"It has been one of the most successful fairs we have enjoyed in years and the board of directors deemed it advisable to close the four day activities with a special attraction in the featuring of a floor show and dance tonight," announced President James Barber today.

The music for the dance will be provided by Bill Garden's Commanders dance band of the Canadian Vaudeville Exchange while the artists for the floor show will also be provided by that company. There is ample space in the Agricultural building to provide a place for dancing and also for those interested in witnessing the floor show. The dance will commence as soon as the performance in front of the grandstand has been concluded.

Jitney dancing to the tuneful melodies of one of the best dance bands in this province is a fitting climax for the 1937 Belleville Fair. Dancing for both old and young featured by the latest swing music will be presented to please in the Agricultural Building tonight.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP)—The Toronto share market made a better showing today from a price standpoint but business was too slow to impact any significant character to movements. The turnover was the smallest of the year with the session at fewer than a quarter-million shares. Gold shares registered mild advances while base metals and miscellaneous mines were off slightly at the close.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Market Comment

The news yesterday that the British steamship "Woodford" had been torpedoed off the Spanish Coast aroused a flurry of excitement in ready existing with regard to the Spanish-German situation. This combined with margin calls that went out Wednesday night, brought a sharp setback in the opening of yesterday's market.

A continuation of the prevailing market conditions appears likely with good number of securities reaching the most attractive levels in the last twelve months. Those investors who purchased stocks early this spring when the bulk of their gains are being presented with an opportunity of acquiring their favorites at a level that enables them to obtain a satisfactory average. Some issues are getting down to the price where the yield is quite high, and it would not be surprising if large-scale institution buying made its appearance.

The opinion expressed in many quarters in the Street is that when stabilization comes to the market, the newspaper stocks will be one of the leaders in the next advance, although it may require patience before appreciable profits accrue.

In the present unsettlement, the better grade investment stocks are holding up fairly well in this category Bell Telephone and British American Oil are outstanding.

Bell Telephone

Revenue from long distance calls of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada is not in any way a reliable estimate so far this year. Lack of stock market activity is partly responsible for the drop in this section of the business.

Profits of International Nickel Company of Canada Are Now Exceeding $5,000,000 per Month

From an authoritative source it is learned by Financial Service that gross income of the International Nickel Company of Canada Limited has risen to a rate of approximately $10,000,000 every thirty days, made up of close to 300,000,000 lbs. of copper, 200,000,000 lbs. of nickel and $150,000,000 in precious metals. Profits are now exceeding $5,000,000 per month. This concrete evidence gives the reader some idea of how the dividend on the common stock can be now advanced.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Sept. 3—Five hundred cases of eggs from the west were reported in yesterday's local receipts, being marked for export overseas. United Kingdom demand remains picked up. Total receipts were 1,649 cases of eggs, 1,000 cases of cheese and 5,665 boxes of cheese, excluding truck arrivals.

Trading generally was dull on the produce markets, with prices very much unchanged.

The open butter market was generally 26 7-8c to 27c. Small lots to the retail trade reported as high as 28c here at 27 1-2c to 28c for solids and 28 1-2c to 29c for prints.

The cheese market was 14 1-4c for No. 1 Ontario white, 14 1-2c for No. 1 Ontario colored.

On the egg market graded shipments in from the west were 26c to 26c for A-large, 25 1-2c to 26c for A-medium, 23-23 1-2c for B and 20c for C.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP)—Hog prices on Ontario markets remaining steady were unchanged to 5c changed from yesterday with the exception at Brantford which reported a 15 cent advance on dressed-weight prices. Hull still held the lead in dressed-weight quoting at $13.10.

Liverpool: Brantford $9.65; Hull $9.35; Stratford $9.50; London $9.35; Chatham $9.25.

Dressed-weights: Barrie $12.85; Hull $13.10; Kitchener $13.70; Stratford $13.70; London $13.70; Chatham $12.95.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 3—(AP)—In an apathetic rally that barely kept the ticker tape moving, leading stock market issues today regained fractions to 3 or more points of their recent declines.

The list was exceptionally "thin" and several wide advances were liquidated on a single sale. Lack of buyers on the upturn encouraged little selling near the final hour and top marks were reduced in many cases.

Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

CAMBRIA FLIES OVER BELLEVILLE

The Cambria, Imperial Airways flying boat, flew over Belleville at 9.05 o'clock standard time this afternoon on its trip to Toronto. The boat flew quite low and was plainly visible.

Exhausted Couple Rescued from Lake

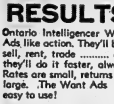
Burlington, Ont., Sept. 3—(CP)—After drifting in Lake Ontario for three miles clinging to their upturned canoe, Amy Hewitt, 18, Burlington, and Harold Willoughby, 20, Toronto, were rescued today by Raymond Montgomery.

Montgomery, out in his outboard motorboat to bring in what he thought was a log; then saw the couple and went to it. Both were near collapse. Willoughby had held up the girl with one arm while he hung to the canoe with the other.

Car Out of Control Kills Kingston Man

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 3—(CP)—James Sloan, driver for Anderson Brothers, grocers was killed here today when struck by a car driven by Thomas Skiwinad, Kingston. Skiwinad was taken in charge by the police and is being held pending further investigation.

Miss Ida Anderson, at the rear of a truck, preparing to take some goods into a grocery store at Victoria and Princess Streets, Skiwinad, was driving east when he apparently lost control of the car. The car swerved to the side and struck Sloan.



SPANISH SUBMARINE IN NEED OF REPAIRS

Bordeaux, Sept. 3 (AP)—The French dispatch boat Vauquois established a precautionary watch today over the British government Submarine C4, after the undersea craft had spilled to French authorities for "urgent repairs" because she was "struck by bombs."

The vessel arrived yesterday at the port of La Verdon. Her captain did not detail the bomb damage, but said no one was wounded.

TIRE AND TUBE STOLEN

A Corbyville motorist, after driving into the city to attend the Exhibition on last night, was unable to return to his car until late last night simply because some person had picked on the right front pair of his vehicle and stole the tube and tire right off the rim of the car. Mr. Gerald Wilson was the Corbyville motorist, who parked his car along the Bridge Road, while he attended the fair. Upon his return he was surprised to find the tire, tube and rim missing from the vehicle. Provincial Police of Thomas take the old spare tire I had on the car back, but helped themselves to the tube and tire. Mr. Wilson informed the police. This is the third such incident to have taken place since the fair opened.

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Social note: Lady Luck is that way about Bill Terry again.

The romance that waxed warm just about this time last season, and then cooled off for much of the early part of the current campaign, once more is in bloom and everything is breaking right for the Oakleaf from Memphis and his New York Giants.

Bill pitchers have started to click, Bill stacks up timely and has nearsied rivals for the National Baseball League pennant are falling apart.

The weakest weapon in his offence young Johnny McCarthy, is beginning to find the range, and his perennial foeitis, the flatfoot frolics from first base, are giving their level best to kick the Giants upstairs.

Full Game in Front

What with this and that, the Terry Terriers are in a full game lead front in the National League Pennant parade today. That's over the Cardinals yesterday, coupled with the Dodgers' 4-3 decision over the second place Cubs, left the championship chase in this form:

	W.	L.	Pct.	T.F.
Giants	71	47	.602
Cubs	73	49	.598	12

Only a few days ago, the experts were referring to Johnny McCarthy as the "Minor League" member of the Giants' cast. He was given a chance at first base earlier in the year, and was benched in favor of the ailing but hearthing Sambo Leslie, but had to be called several days ago, when Leslie returned to the hospital list. Johnny was the No. 1 walloper yesterday in the licensing win over the Cards. He whacked two homers and kept the Giants in the game with a double for Mel Ott's 30th round-tripper and a trio of assorted blows that set the stage for the Giants in the Cubs Beat Selves

At the same time, the Cubs continued beating themselves as they went down for the second straight day before the Dodgers.

Meantime, the Yankees and their ranking fan fatty continue to ride on the alleged Murderers' Row took a kicking around. Detroit, behind Tommy Bridges, a 15-game pitcher, fanned a dozen and allowed five hits as he hurled the Tribe to a 5-0 win over the Joe DiMaggio's 36th homer.

Hank Greenberg poked two home runs and the Tigers topped the Senators 9-8 in 10 innings to move the Yanks' lead to 10 games. The White Sox socked the Red Sox twice, 4-3 and 10-8, and the Athletics trimmed the Browns 5-3 on Bill Werber's double with the bases loaded. The Pirates' five-run rally in the ninth beat the Phillies 11-8. The Reds and Reds were idle.

Hectic Games Goes 15 Innings With Mardin The Batting Hero

(By The Associated Press)

With Newark, Montreal, Syracuse and Baltimore bunched for the fifth Governors Cup Series, which is the formidable title of the International League playoffs, action turns to the post-season series.

The series this year will open Tuesday, Sept. 14, with the first game team meeting the third place team and the fourth place team battling with the second place qualifiers, that end, when one club wins four games.

Winners in these series will then be in another of seven series with the players of the winning team drawing $4,000 each of the runner up team $2,000. The winning team will represent the league in the junior world series against an American Association team that has eliminated the rivals in the playoffs.

The circuit has held the Governor's Cup series for four years and one player, Martin Dukes, has been in all four series. Dukes' first was 1932, Buffalo, 1934, Toronto, 1935 Syracuse, and 1936, Buffalo. Newark with Dukes in the lineup has been in all four of the series but has never finished higher than third.

Newark is Beaten

The Bears, who stampeded the pennant race this season, encountered only one of their probable playoff rivals last night in the Baltimore Orioles and dropped one of the season's most hectic games, a 7-6 thriller that went 15 innings before 15,000 fans, one of the largest to see a regular league game in Baltimore in a decade.

John Riggling, Newark's third pitcher, weakened in the 15th to allow four hits and a walk. With the bases loaded and one out Nig-Clarke hit Pocatello forcing in Wimpy Wilburn with the tying run. Les Powers then singled to score Smokey Joe Martin with the winning tally.

A doubleheader was scheduled but the second game was called off because of a city ordinance forbidding play after 11.15 p.m. (E.D.T.)

Manager Smythe of Montreal and Bill Harris of Buffalo battled to the pitching in the League's other two games, Smythe's stick-Rochester Red Wings five hits as Al Novgel won 5-1 and Harris blanked Toronto with nine hits for a 2-0 Bison triumph.

Jersey City's game at Syracuse was postponed because of rain.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Calling

"This boy Tommy Farr only lacks one thing—if he ever develops a knock-out punch, he'll be one of the greatest heavyweights in the business. The lad has one of the fastest left hands in the heavyweight circles and moves about with more speed and agility than any of the modern day heavies. He took all Joe Louis' hardest punches and kept weaving in to be the aggressor and in the last few rounds looked better than the champion—as a matter of fact had the bout been 20 rounds, I believe Farr would have won, or had he had stamina enough to even knock Louis down in either the 14th or 15th, he would have been awarded the decision, I firmly believe," Harry Robinson, Belleville fight enthusiast informed us upon his return from the Farr-Louis fight yesterday. "I'll tell you one thing—I've seen Louis in all of his important bouts of late but he's not as good as I at first judged him. Any man who can step inside and take a couple can knock him out," predicted Harry.

"I guess there has been a lot of controversy over the radio account of the fight. Well I kept as accurate a score as I possibly could and I gave Louis eight, Farr six and one even. Farr is a hard man to hit solidly. He'd jab away at Louis with a stinging and lighting left for quite some time and as Louis would shift around to get set for his knock-out blow, Farr would shift backwards with remarkably fast footwork and leave Louis unable to reach his target. I firmly believe Schmeling could slap Louis around with as much ease as he did before, while Farr has only to learn to punch with a stiff and he'll do it too. Really what Farr showed in his fight against Louis entitled him to some good boys and he'd be the most improved fighter in the ring. There is some little difference between English boxing and American fighting, I do believe," concluded Harry.

Coach Archie Duffield of the Belleville Rugby shaud, would like to see more candidates out for practice with the locals. "You cannot expect to hold successful workouts with only eight or ten out to practice. We've had as high as 28 out some nights on our various intervals, if we could average 15 a night, we Belleville would have a good football team," pleaded Coach Duffield today. We realize the humidity, but we are losing the present state of weather conditions that real conditioning can be obtained. It is less than three weeks to opening day for the fall classic and all candidates are urged to attend at least three practices.

Mike Jacobs and his crowd may be crowding Max Schmeling out of the heavyweight picture but Skipper Twig Woodley says the Toronto St. Cyprians should never push the Belleville Kiwanis kids out of G.B.A.A. championship two straight. "Sure we were downed in Toronto, but why?" asked Coach Woodley of us today. "Well, I'll tell you. We had 'em beat to a frazzle before Umpire Charlie called a bad one on our kids and disallowed Jackson in the late stages of the game. On Labor Day we intend to show that Terrible Terry Jones is human and we'll shut him down to get two hits. Sunday later, Farr would shift backwards with remarkably fast footwork and leave Louis unable to reach, his target. I firmly believe Schmeling could slap Louis around with as much ease as he did before, while Farr has only to learn to punch with a stiff and he'll do it too. Really what Farr showed in his fight against Louis entitled him to some good boys and he'd be the most improved fighter in the ring. There is some little difference between English boxing and Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings, champions of the National Hockey League, became a citizen of the United States citizen yesterday. Adams, who was born in Port William 43 years ago, first applied for American citizenship papers in February, 1935. Jack Adams is well known in sporting circles throughout the Eastern Ontario district having resided at Smiths Falls during the summer months, until he took up permanent residence in Detroit three years ago. Jack was a keen follower of the old Napanee Cornerstones and Belleville Intermediate O. B. A. A. heydays and also a softball umpire of parts.

Miss Myrna Waverly, well-known New Yorker, of George White's Scandals, married "Red" Doran, Belleville's remaining son in the National Hockey League sheet-tan days and, according to Walter Winchell's column. Incidentally the pocketsized "sorrel top" packster is still the prize property of the Americans and is being counted on as a regular on the Amerk's defence next winter.

We sincerely hope the local softball moguls lay off their beloved city championship series until after the Belleville Fair, at least. Just in the running for this title are Picton Anne, Ajaxaa Juniors and Corbin Locals.

Racing was not nearly as sensational as on the first day of the Belleville Fair, but was interspersed in the winning race turned in by Royal McKillop, owned in this city. The bay stallion paced like a real race horse and was really looking "for speed" when pinning the first two heats. He was ably handled by Dr. Stone. Harry Eile of North Bay suffered the loss of his horse, Scottie Gratton, for some time when he cut his ligaments badly and had to have the arteries severed by the cut saw by a veterinary. The times were much slower than on the previous day but Royal McKillop nearly shattered the two ten list with two sparkling miles in 2.10¾. Racing will be completed today with the Free For All and the 2.25 Class.

Frank Sedore's Point Anne softballers are the only local softball team left in the O.A.S.A. running. The "Cementmen" meet some tough opposition in the Lake Shore group winners on Saturday the Point diamond. The Point Anne squad had intended playing their remaining games at the Fair Grounds, but owing to the Fair this week will have to play their Saturday's game at Point Anne, however.

ROYAL McKILLOP LOWERS HIS MARK IN WINNING RACE

Local Owned Horse Paces First Two Miles in 2.10½

HORSE IS HURT

Drivers in 2.18 Class Given Lecture By The Judges

Believing his own mark by two full seconds, Royal McKillop, owned by Elmer LaBarr of this city and driven by Dr. Kane won the two-heat and the race in the 2.18 class at the harness meet held at the Fairgrounds on Thursday in connection with the Belleville Fair. In the 2.18 class, Una Gratton from the Pine Ridge Stables of London with Clint Hodgins in the pilot house won the first two heats and the race but only after the drivers were brought to the stand and given a lecture by the judges.

Royal McKillop, a son of Lee McKillop and Lady Liam and a son of the Gratton family was raised on a breeding farm near Galt and developed into a three-year-old and brought to this city, where he continued his early training. Always known as a picture horse due to his fine conformation he was known for his extreme speed and yesterday he showed the racing patrons what he has a good right to. He has become. The horse has been his most of the summer and is now reaching his peak and will be tough to take in future engagements. Yesterday he won the first two miles in 2.10 1-2 and appeared as if he could have stepped a full two second from that mark. He withstood a drive in every heat and always appeared to be ready to let out another loop if required. Why the horse did not win the third heat will always remain a mystery as Dr. Kane had a nice lead and into the turn for home but he went to a slight break and Una Gratton was left standing as Wireless Hall went on to win. At that had Una Gratton not elected to let go, the bay stallion would have nipped the winner. The crowd gave the bay horse a great driver an ovation after the race.

Horse Cuts Quarter

An accident occurred in the second heat of the race which will shelve Scottie Gratton from racing for some time. The horse started and won his race on Wednesday and was again a starter Friday in the 2.25 class yesterday. He was a tired horse as Chapman tried in the first two heats to capture a major portion of the purse. In some unaccountable way, the horse over-reached himself and cut his artery near the quarter. Dr. Bates attended the injured animal tieing the two arteries and stopping the wounds. He was drawn in the third heat.

After Logan McKillop had won the first heat in the 2.18 class against three other starters in the same time of 2.22, the judges called all drivers in the race to the stand and told them if the racing was not more satisfactory they would order off the race. Clint Hodgins after the warning and Una Gratton also of "Boiling" and she outdistanced her field to win the last two heats handily and without opposition in the third heat paced a mile in 2.12 1-2. Fenyard Champion was hard to keep pacing but when right got down to it Champion Ontario's real tussle. The Heiress was picked as the good thing in the first heat but she failed to be content with second money. The 2.18 class also owned by the Pine Ridge Stables of London, and the race will put her "on edge" for a tough race in Toronto next week. The results:

2.18 Class

Una Gratton, Pine Ridge Stables, London (Hodgins) 4 1 1
Logan McKillop, L. McEwen Weston (McEwen) 1 3 6
The Heiress, Pine Ridge Stables, London (Jason) 2 2 2
Marjory Gratton, G. S. Ill, Toronto, (Champion) 3 4 3
Time—2.22, 2.14, 2.12 1-2.

2.25 Class

Royal McKillop, E. LaBarr, Belleville, (Kane) .. 1 1 2
Wireless Hall, L. T. Payette, Weston (Champion) 2 2 1
Abworthy Gratton, L. O. Bennett, Port Hope, (Craig) 4 4 3
Scottie Gratton, Harry Eile, North Bay, (Chapman) .. 3 3 dr
Time—2.10 1-2, 2.10 1-2, 2.18. Starter—Dr. H. Welbanks.

NEW RECORD FOR WOMEN'S SWIM

Mrs. Leonora Wingard Wins Three Mile Splash in 1:21:24

Toronto, Sept. 3 (CP)—A new record was inscribed in the Canadian National Exhibition swim books today, placed there by 134-pound Leonore Knight Wingard of Homestead, Pa. The former amateur quart-smasher, splashed to victory in the three-mile women's professional swim last night, in 1:21:24, almost two minutes faster than the record set by Susan Robertson, Searight, N.J., last year.

Miss Looney, of Warren, O., who finished second, was clocked in 1:23:14, 22 seconds faster than Miss Robertson who came third. The husky Miss Looney, striking 74 to the minute, passed Miss Robertson in the last of the six half-mile laps inside the O.N.E. breakwater. But the 1936 winner held second place for two and a half miles.

Mrs. Wingard and Miss Robertson broke away from the other 12 starters early in the race and the winner established a never challenged lead in the quarter-mile mark. The blond Susan faded in the home stretch to lose position to flying May Looney.

PRESENT MEMBER AGAIN NAMED

Ontario. The wage bills are twenty five percent better than they were before. We are stimulating by new industries to Ontario because we have stable conditions, lower power rates and lower taxation." We are proud of our record in going a long way towards sound fundamental policies, which are going to make this province a better place for all of us to live in."

When the C.I.O. raised its head in the United States it swept through the country causing lawlessness, ruthlessness and chaos in industry. But when it attempted to do the same in Ontario it met a man in Mitchell Hepburn, who had the courage to check it. He told its representatives he would not allow the ruthless sit-down strike in Ontario and promptly ousted them. Martin, the minion of Lewis has stated, that the sit-down strike will continue, but they will not be permitted here."

The Hon. Mr. Nixon in the course of his address spoke of the many benefits derived by the citizens of the province from the policies of the Hepburn government and detailed the savings to Prince Edward county made possible by the elimination of the sales tax and other forms of legislature.

Prophesying the return of the present government to power, the speaker declared, that the citizens throughout the province is highly satisfactory. "In a recent tour of the province we found the people pleased wherever we went, for they have not forgotten the conditions, which existed four years ago."

Old Gang Around Clubs

In the opinion of informed circles in Centre Hastings, where it attended the Liberal convention, Mr. Rowe although he is the leader of the opposition his party will go down to disastrous defeat, by a three thousand majority," declared Mr. Nixon. "The return of the Hepburn government is assured and we can add conceding a single seat, in fact we will have more due to the popularity of our brilliant leader.

"It is inconceivable to believe that the electors of Ontario are now prepared to put the Old Gang back into power again. While Earl Rowe is the leader of the alleged reformed Conservative Party he is really gathering the old members and ministers around him. You will see them, Messrs. Challis, Macaulay, Black and all the old gang."

"We feel, that we have given you good government during the past three years, and things are much better today than they were in 1934. Little did we dream there would be such improvements in the Province as there are now."

In a spirited attack on the former government the speaker declared, "we were astounded at the chaotic condition of Ontario's finances, when we took over the reins. The Henry Government was going into debt at the rate of one millions per month and had a total debt of 182 millions while in office." The Hepburn Government has reduced the net over fifty per cent. We inaugurated various economies, such as reducing ministers salaries $1,000, eliminating cabinet Minister's cars and garage services, etc. Every department of the government has co-operated with the Premier in bring about the necessary economies and thus bring about the balancing of the budget."

Huge Operating Cost

"The Civil and Public Defence Department was costing $13,000 a year to operate under the Hon. Mr. Challis, and there was a constant frittering away of money. Ridiculous extreme were shown in this department one of which was the sending of three men and a truck about the country looking for ants to feed Hungarian pheasants. These birds, no larger than a robin, cost the government $62.00 each. The men stated, that sometimes they drove 14 miles to get an anthill, and then they put in a $60 bill for repairs to the truck."

"We effected economies where they would not interfere with public service," asserted the speaker. "We closed the one and one-quarter million dollar moving picture studio in Trenton. This, we turned a number of returned soldiers out of a job, but we put them on the reserve and re-employed them as soon as possible. Other returned men were let go but were gradually taken back.

The government can stand the closest scrutiny on this point as twenty-five percent of the appointments are being held by returned soldiers.

"Last year we gave Ontario its first balanced budget, and we have a surplus of nine and three-tenths millions besides. Having made this advance we started to turn the moneys back to the taxpayer. We have reduced taxes in you and this enabled you to adopt a better standard of living."

Enumerating the benefits accruing to municipalities and counties through the policies of the Hepburn Administration, the speaker pointed out that when the government took over the roads it meant a saving to Prince Edward of $87,000. Other savings in the county were: One mill subsidy, $12,500; Old Age Pensions, $9,500; Mothers' Allowances, $3,000; Education, on vehicle licenses, $4,000; Increase in township grant, $2,871. All in all a total saving to your county of $99,000.00.

Reduce Licenses

"The Amusement Tax," continued Mr. Nixon, "now known as the Nuisance Tax, has been abolished at a saving to this county of $2,000 and I hope Ontario never has it again. Then, it produced a revenue of $1,800,000 but at a great cost of collection. Now it is a thing of the past."

"You will be glad to hear the announcement by the Hon. the Premier on Friday night regarding the reduction in cost of licenses for passenger cars. You know what it will be, but it will be satisfactory to the people of Ontario. A license fee should be one of licensing, regulating and controlling. A poor license for a car should be a nominal sum of money. If a man's is not able to operate a car in the winter time, the establishment of a fee of nominal amount is a just fundamental policy."

Defending the repudiation of the Hydro contracts by the present administration, the speaker stated that conditions of the contracts were unfair if not nefarious. The reserve of 14 million was overdrawn. There were great blocks of stock we could not use, which were bought at $15 per H. P. and which were sold at $5.75. A compromise with the Quebec Interests was attempted whereby they would take back any unused power but they refused. "They demanded their pound of flesh so we cancelled the contracts."

"There is no danger whatever of a power shortage in Ontario," declared Mr. Nixon. "We have 133,000 h.p. in reserve in the Cataract alone at $1.75 which it a vast difference from $15.00. If Mr. Rowe can tell us where we can sell 150,000 H.P. tomorrow, the power problem would be solved."

"But he holds up his hands in horror. I will repudiate the repudiators he cries. What will happen is this. If Rowe gets back into power he will restore these contracts and sell you down the Quebec river. If the Beauharnois alone was restored it would add 35 per cent to your bills overnight."

Reduce Power Charges

"We have been able to reduce your power charges considerably. In the urban districts of your county, the reduction has amounted to $20,000 while in the rural districts it has amounted to $7,000. Under the old regime we would be paying eleven millions for the power instead of four millions as at present."

Declaring, that the charges of the Conservative leader against the Hepburn government "were fantastic and showed an astounding ignorance of the operation of legislature," Mr. Nixon stated that the public is showing a keen interest in what he says. "He charges that the surplus made by the government was attained through cancelling on the municipalities, and that we did not pay the money we obtained from the Dominion government. That is not correct. The cuts in the Federal grants were made at Ottawa and rather than pass them on to the municipalities we absorbed them. The province is now paying 57 per cent. for municipalities 23 per cent and the Dominion government 20 per cent."

"Again Rowe charges that we were chiselling against the binding not purchasing from the blind institutions. The records show that in 1931 when Tom Farmiloe was secretary in the Farmers Government the Institute for the Blind began to make brooms. I ordered that the brooms were to be made by prison labor, and since that time no brooms been made there."

"Rowe's criticism regarding the blind comes in poor taste. Ontario is the first province to pass legislature granting pensions to the blind forty years of age and over. Fathings of a multimillionaire raised like this Ontario leads the way."

"We are proud in Ontario of our balanced budget and surplus. True Mr. King has not balanced the Federal budget but he is making progress. It would take one hundred years of good administration to ours, to restore Canada back to the position it occupied before the Bennett government came into power. Mr. Rowe says he can borrow two dollars for every dollar borrowed by Ontario and give every man a job. That is a reckless policy. You cannot borrow yourself into prosperity."

Criticizing the "Rowe planks," Mr. Nixon stated, "the proposed Rowe establishment of Unemployment Insurance in conjunction with other provinces is nothing but a subterfuge. The Hepburn government has announced, that it will bring the Insurance question to an issue at the proper time. The time to start this is when there is plenty of employment not when we have a depression and there are thousands out of work."

Tourist Bureau Functions

"Mr. Rowe's claim that he will set up a Tourist Bureau to attract foreign tourist trade here, shows his ignorance of things provincial. In 1934 several branches under one head called the Tourist Publicity Bureau were established, and have been functioning ever since."

Gross inefficiency on the part of the Henry government in the collection of succession duties was charged by Mr. Nixon. "Wealthy estates settled for a mere fraction of what was due the province," he said.

"If this practice was allowed to continue it would be only a short time before the wealth of the country would be in the hands of a few."

"We investigated these estates with the result that within the last two years we have collected 38 millions which rightfully belonged to the province. We have 44 other estates under investigation and we expect to collect a further fifty millions of revenue, which will be turned back to the people. Relately with the election in sight, these estates have been stalling and blocking up at every turn in the hope that the Conservative Party will be swept into power. But if we are returned to power they will soon change their tune and the collections will be made in due proper way."

"We are proud to stand before you with this record of achievement for have gone a considerable way in leaving you savings to enable you to enjoy a higher standard of living, giving you fundamentally sound policies and will make this province a better place to live in," concluded Mr. Nixon.

"I am a Tumbe up politician," declared Mr. Bowerman in his afternoon address to the delegates. "If Mr. Hepburn is 70% right and 30% wrong, I will vote against him in the thirty percent."

Defends Policy

Defending the policies of the Hepburn Administration, the speaker stated that the control of the Province of Ontario is today the best in Canada and in the British Empire. "If the credit of Ontario is ruined as stated by the Conservative Party, why is it that we can borrow money at three percent."

"I am not a runaway politician. I have the spirit to stay in the fight and I would rather go down to honorable defeat; than run away from the issue."

Prophesying the return of the Hepburn Government, Mr. Bowerman stated that while he was not always with the Premier one hundred percent, "I believe him to be the smartest man in the British Empire. He has done wonders for this community and province. He has reduced the taxes and given you farmers increased hydro service."

"I am for organized labor to the extent that members remain law abiding citizens of Ontario. Mr. Rowe has been pussyfooting all down the line, and if he puts this plank in his platform that would benefit Ontario, I would back him up. On his stand on the liquor question, he is trying to mislead the public and cater to the Temperance vote."

Local benefits of the present administration, the granting of a free ferry and construction work on Highway 33 were pointed out by the speaker. He promised taxation would be kept "within a reasonable limit" if elected. He believed the Hepburn government was a wise and sane one which is carrying on in the best interests of the people of Ontario. "I promise to work for the best interests of the people of Prince Edward, the best county in the province," he concluded.

Brief speeches were made by Dr. Gerald Allison, President, Prince Edward Liberal Association, Ben Davy, President, Lennox Liberal Association, Dr. Roblin, Amos Macdonald and Cecil Pearsall.

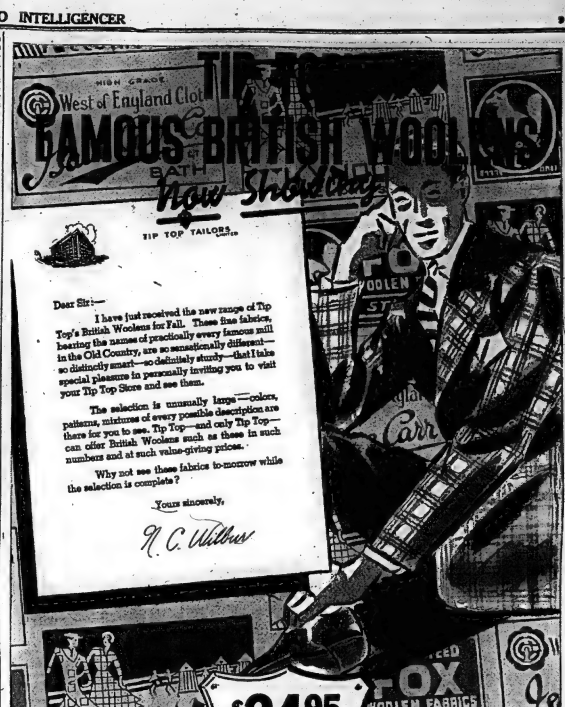
Make LABOUR Day COURTESY DAY

On Every Street and Highway

THE last long week-end of the summer season is at hand. It will be an occasion upon which Ontario's great army of sun-tanned children will enjoy their last big holiday. It is the responsibility of every motorist to see that the children go to and from their holiday safely and unhurt.

The easy way to do this is to Try Courtesy every inch of the way and make "Labour Day" "Courtesy Day".



Here are a few of the motoring practices observed by motorists who are courteous at heart and which all are urged to follow.

Drive with extreme caution where children and cyclists are present or where they may be expected on streets, highways, playgrounds or parks. Drive in your own traffic lane and do not "cut in and out". Warn others of your intention to slow down, turn or stop. Drive with due consideration for the other fellow and do not jockey with him. Dip or dim your headlights when you meet another motorist at night. When you intend to overtake those ahead of you, warn them with your horn in ample time of your coming. When you do overtake them, swing past at a safe distance but never pass at or near the brow of a hill, or on a curve or where there is not a clear view ahead. In these and many other ways you can show that you are courteous at heart and that you are out to make "Labour Day" "Courtesy Day" by Trying Courtesy every inch of the way.

ITALIAN KING BASKS IN IL DUCE'S SUN

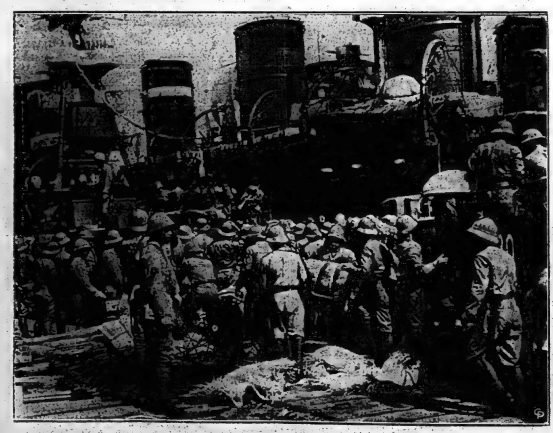
JAPANESE BOMBS WRECK LUXURY HOTELS IN SHANGHAI'S INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT

Shanghai's two great luxury hotels located in the International Settlement, the Cathay and the Palace, were both made targets for devastating aerial and ground bombardments as Japan's invading armies blasted away at their Chinese foes entrenched in and around the Queen City of the Orient, and subjected every important building either in the native city or in the area populated by foreigners to the fury of their guns. Those two graphic pictures taken after air, navy and army gunners and bombers had hurled tons of explosives into the city on August 14, show entrances to the Cathay (right), and the Palace (left), choked with debris and sock-marked with shell and shrapnel scars, after both had been hit. Deaths of civilians in the International Settlement have risen into hundreds as the undeclared war rages on, with both British and United States warships also under fire.



CAMPBELL AND WOOD MAY START INTERNATIONAL SPEEDBOAT RIVALRY

Since Sir Malcolm Campbell of England, turned his attention to speedboat racing, there has loomed the possibility of international rivalry between the British speed king and Gar Wood. Wood, American speedboat driver, held the water record for some time, but since Campbell raced his new boat over the measured mile, he no longer can claim the record because Sir Malcolm states he achieved a speed of 125.756 m.p.h. in Switzerland. Wood's mark was only 124.86 m.p.h. This layout shows the two speedboats and their drivers' Bluebird, Sir Malcom's boats, named after his famous racing car in which he set the land speed record is seen at top, prior to being launched in Switzerland for his speed test. Gar Wood's boat which retained the Harmsworthy trophy for the U.S. is pictured below, while Campbell is seen fitting on his helmet at the left. Gar Wood, American speedboat king, is seen in circle.

TOP-NOTCH GOLFERS FROM U. S. AND CANADA TO COMPETE IN OPEN

Before many more dawns, the ace golfers on the North American continent will arrive at Toronto for the Canadian open championship and Seagram gold cup to be played from Sept. 8-11. The course is extremely tricky, with numerous bunkers and blustering headwinds. The championship layout, St. Andrews, is the same ground over which the open was played last year. There are many natural hazards on the course, and the club is busy adding additional traps and fixing the greens and fairways. Workmen are seen here as they prepared one of the greens for the coming tournament. International stars will find the greens in first-rate condition when they start out after the coveted Canadian title. The club house is also shown with its spacious lawns and picturesque flower gardens. The defending champion is Lawson Little of San Francisco. He is seen at top right with the Seagram gold cup which he won last year. Another outstanding contender from across the line is "Slamin'" Sam Snead, Lower right. One of the prominent Canadian golfers who will be shooting at the cup will be Jules Huot of Quebec, in circle. Two other Canadian golfers who have shown themselves to be of championship calibre this summer are Bobby Grey, Jr., of Windsor, and Bobby Alston of Ottawa, also entered in the matches. Ralph Guldahl, lower left, who captured the United States' open this summer will be another strong contender.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Then one night her nerves rebelled. She felt as if she couldn't see him, couldn't look at him in front of strangers. She sent a message through her maid, pleading a headache, and settled down to the asking of her suite to a cold breast of chicken, a pint of champagne and a book. She sat rather long to keep white chiffon that trailed from her shoulders and arms to the ground. There was no peace or rest to her. She would have welcomed storm, the shriek of winds, the heaving thunder of waves.

"Oh my God—what can I do?" she said suddenly aloud and flung down her book.

She didn't hear the door of the salon open, didn't see him until his voice whirled her about.

"And why the outburst?" he stood with a lift to his long black eyebrows. In evening clothes, a white carnation at his lapel.

With a flying movement of her white gingerie, Jane turned to the open porthole. The sky was like a dark blue curtain. Music drifted in from the salon beyond, where they were dancing tonight.

"I don't know what's the matter with me," she said.

He stepped nearer. "Look at me."

She looked at him slowly, reluctantly.

"I know what's the matter with you," he said. "The same thing is the matter with me."

They stared at each other. Suddenly he strode over to her. His hand went out, stroked and pressed down. She began to tremble.

He let her go, walked away and called: "Come here."

She looked at him across space, but didn't obey.

He looked the salon door, and he was smiling as he came toward her.

"So you won't come to me, will you?" Suddenly he gripped her wrists. "You're my wife for the moment, I believe. And a very desirable woman. Have you anything to say to that?"

"You told me that once before, the night you married me." Jane's voice was low over the beat of her heart. "Once."

"But what? Oh, I know what you hoped for," he said harshly. "Cheap sentiment. What you call falling in love with you, I suppose." Jane strained back from him.

"And why not? If you'd really loved Lorna, I wouldn't be here now."

"Love—love—" he said contemptuously, and his fingers tightened, pulling her to him. "Yes, I suppose I have married Lorna. Then what?" Hurt. Bitter. Passionate.

"You can't get away," he said to Jane struggled in silence "We're divorced soon enough. But this way—one thing she has to paint in it I'm not interested in you as a wife. As a mistress—possibly. Merely an attitude of mind, my dear, which you are going to like."

"No—no—" Jane cried.

"We're quite properly married," he reminded her. His eyes were hard, his lips were hard as he kissed her on the eyes, on the mouth. This girl who had brought in her wake all this disturbance, this trouble, this ruin—had her ideal. It was smashing with fooling around women. Lorna. This girl.

He lifted her in his arms and strode into the darkness of her cabin.

CHAPTER XX.

LORNA AND HENRI

For once in her life, greedy life, Lorna Howland was frightened. The hysterical outburst at her party had hurt her. Tony Kaye, without ruining the gold and white girl she hated so much. She had committed the unpardonable social sin of marking her guests uncomfortable, and in openly announcing herself as engaged to a supposedly married man, she was behaving as a shrieking goop. Moreover, in counting on Tony, Lorna had ventured deeper and deeper in debt. There seemed nothing but disaster ahead.

Now her father refused to help her. "Your carelessness and extravagance know no bounds." He faced her the day after the ill-fated party, a lean grey gentleman at the end of his own letter. "I'm sinking down, not increasing your allowance. A house in Tuxedo is luxury enough these days. I can't pay the taxes, and I may even be bankrupt in a few months. That performance of yours last night," he bitterly continued, "has already cost me more than I can pay. Ask your mother."

But Mrs. Howland had taken to bromides and her bed. If Lorna's scandalous accusation were true and Anthony Kaye had not married the woman he presented as his wife, his conduct in bringing her to the house was disgraceful. If Lorna had invented the story, it became another worm, for she had then placed them all in quite a dreadful position.

"I can't believe what possessed Tony talking up with that extraordinary girl," Mrs. Howland wailed. "A creature without a name or memory he picked up on the street. And as for you, Lorna, making a scene—why, I never heard of such a thing. Poor dear father and I had really hoped you would settle down with Tony some day. Your shocking behavior has, of course, made that impossible. I have no patience. So it went—on and on.

Lorna got into her roadster, green eyes sullen under the fleeting cataque of her hair. Missing out with Tony was bad enough, but it wasn't only that she had to worry about. Bertram Cotter had vanished early with all the other whispering guests instead of spending the night as she had expected him to. Evidently he resented her betraying his indiscreet confidence and she couldn't afford now to let go of this rich young Westerner, who knew more than he was telling about Tony's pretended marriage. Then there was the Count de Paris. When she thought of Henri, a sickness came into her. Behind all her defeated plans and schemes, her desperation for the blond Frenchman there was the old thing she has to paint in. If him she had played a desperate game to win back Tony? Yes, she needed money, and Henri needed money. As Mrs. Anthony Kaye, she could have done a great deal more for Henri. Oh, not that he was in any sense a gigolo, but there were various things a rich young personess of the arts could do for a fashionable portrait painter.

She began scheming again as she drove in town to la Paulo's studio. She must see him that night. There must be no more scarlet lips as she rang the bell.

"Ah, bonjour, ma chere. This is a pleasure." La Paulo in a white linen painting smock, stood at the door. Then there was no visible pleasure in his pale face, only perfunctory gesture, the merest formality as his blond mustache upon the hand he raised, expressed a faint, cold sarcasm.

Then Lorna saw that he was not alone. The Princess Yolneire, in a pleated black lace dress and, set in a high-backed, carved chair, her harsh features outlined against the reddish silk curtains. It was the bold and noble profile of an old man.

"So—it is Miss Howland!" Her slavic gutturals conveyed no enthusiasm.

Lorna looked from one to the other, and the Princess arose with a touch of haughtiness. "I leave you now, Henri."

"Chere amie," I beg of you to stay," he said quickly. "You must not go. There is vodka and caviar there."

But the Princess moved to the door. There was in her air and manner the slightly fatigued weariness of a woman who has ceased to be amused by futile situations.

Lorna sat abruptly down on the couch, reaching for a cigarette. "I can see," she said, "that you've heard what happened at my house last night. You who dress most of the women who were there, Kadin, and Henri, who paints them—yes, you would know."

"Main certainement," Katia Tchiras answered calmly. "You, but certainly one hears many things." And she gave her fingertips to la Paulo his before she went out the door. He accompanied her into the hall.

An angry flush colored Lorna's small pointed face. Tchejrss pulling on size A dressmaker with a shady reputation, at that. Then she saw the evening newspaper among the red and grey cushions of the couch and a name leapt from its folded page. A brief item in the society column announced that the Anthony Kayes were sailing at midnight on the Normandy for an indefinite stay abroad.

Lorna was staring unbelievingly at it when la Paulo returned. He came in with his swift, graceful movement to stand with his back to the door. "You are more stupid than I thought," he said in his high French drawl, and there was nothing now charming about him.

He was narrow, edgy as a sword.

Lorna jumped from the couch. "Henri—Henri!" She ran to him, straining her small, alluring body as close as she could get. "Why are you this way? You nearly drove me away yesterday. I didn't know what I was doing—"

"That is a pit. Would you mind—"

The delicate shrug of his shoulders told her poses had been struck. Then she saw the evening newspaper and the red and grey cushions of the couch and a name leapt from its folded page. 3RD SIDNEY 3rd Sidney—The public school teachers on this line have returned to their schools. Miss Marjorie Kells to Actinolite, Miss Marion Aikens to the Harder school, Miss Irene Grills to Belleville, Miss Clara Adams to Toronto and Miss Frances Hinchliffe to the Department of Education, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Centenary School opened on Wednesday with Mr. Eldon Bonter of Marmora as teacher for another year.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grills spent a few days last week with their daughter Mrs. Fred Ash of Peterboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Selburne Weslover attended the wedding on Wednesday of Mrs. Weslover's sister, Miss May Hubble, to Mr. Clarence Hay.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Perry on their recent wedding. The bride was formerly Miss Aletha Parry, one of Aiken's most popular girls and a very faithful worker in Aiken Sunday School and other organizations, especially during her term of being President of the W. A. when an exceptionally large amount of money was raised for church purposes.

Mrs. Odgn. Penn has returned to her home in Toronto after visiting friends here.

Mrs. Chas. R. Simpson has returned to her home in Smithfield after visiting her sister Mrs. George Parry.

Mrs. Selburne Weslover was hostess at a delightful tea on Friday evening, the guests being Miss May Hubble, Miss Phyllis May, Miss Bertha MacArthur, Belleville, Miss Eva MacMillan, Reg. N. M.P., Mr. and Mrs Frank Reid, Mrs. McComb, and Mrs. Jack Reid, Mrs. Mrs. Merideen, Front Road, Mrs. Harley Hubble, Miss Frances Hinchliffe, and Mrs. Everett Hubble.

Miss Stella Craig of Detroit spent Monday afternoon at the home of her cousin, Mr. James Ray.

Mrs. Phillip Ray has returned from the Belleville General Hospital with her infant daughter, Donna.

Miss Stella Craig, who has been on an extended trip to the continent, stopped off a few hours on Monday at the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Ray, on her way from Quebec to her home in Detroit where she is engaged as a teacher. Another cousin who came for the afternoon was Mrs. Jack Thompson of Sidney.

TWEED

TWEED & DISTRICT ..... Considerable excitement was caused in the village early on Thursday morning when a fiery Cross, emblem of the K.K.K., was burned on the main street. Sid Arber returning from the bake shop, discovered the object in flames and extinguished the blaze. The flaming torch was composed of a wooden frame work in the form of a cross, covered with burlap bags soaked in coal oil or other inflamable fluid.

The bright light roused a number of citizens from their slumbers and a considerable crowd soon gathered in the street in various stages of semi-dress, speculating as to the purpose for which the cross was lighted.

Ruth Watson, 4 1-2 year old daghter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Watson of Toronto, was awarded first prize in the seven and under class in the piano competition in the Canadian National Exhibition on Monday of this week. Mr. and Mrs. Watson are annual campers at Stoco Lake. Mrs. Watson is a graduate of Toronto Conservatory of Music in piano, and is her little daughter's teacher. Ruth has already shown signs of remarkable musical talent. She began her musical career at the age of two and has composed several short compositions depicting the joys of childhood and spring.

Ruth possesses that rare quality of perfect pitch and can hum or sing any note or combination of notes, or name them when sounded on the piano.

6TH SIDNEY

6th Sidney—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lott entertained to dinner on Monday night on the occasion of their wedding anniversary, Dr. R. S. and Mrs. McCreary, Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. H. Beatty, Toronto, Dr. Wm. and Mrs. Findley, Wilkinsburg, Pan., Mr. and Mrs. F. Sprague, Big Island.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Striker and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Chapman.

The funeral of the late Mr. Russell Seeley was held at the family residence on Tuesday afternoon. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Miss Nellie Striker who is leaving for her new school at Milford was presented with an over-night bag on Sunday by her Sunday School class, presentation was made by Miss L. Bond. Although completely surprised Nellie very fittingly replied. All wish Nellie every success in her first school.

Rev. E. B. Sexsmith and daughter Marjorie Goode were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lott.

Miss Mary Striker spent Monday with friends in Milford.

REGISTRATION OF SUBMARINES IS SUGGESTED

Mediterranean Powers To Confer at Geneva Upon Submarine Attacks

Britain and France Prepare Plan to Put End to Private Submarines

FEELING RUNS HIGH

Recognition of Franco Seen as Price of Italy's Participation

London, Sept. 4 (AP)—Government today drew up plans to drive piratical submarines from the Mediterranean.

"Important proposals" will be made, the government announced, when the Mediterranean powers gather next week in Geneva to discuss the situation created by submarine attacks on international shipping.

As Europe's chancelleries pored over plans for the hurriedly summoned meeting, these developments added new elements to the situation:

1. Official Russian newspapers accused Italy of "piracy on the Mediterranean" and said the Soviets would make "any necessary reply dearly" for the sinking of a Russian vessel off Algeria.

2. Diplomats reported the Spanish government, as well as the Insurgents, would be excluded from the conference.

3. Early prize for co-operation was reported to be British recognition of Insurgent belligerent rights.

4. Spanish rebels denied responsibility for submarine attacks on Spanish craft.

Guerilla Raids Threatened.

As four destroyers sped from Rosyth

AREA OF TROUBLE

Great Britain, angered at the attack on the British destroyer Havock and the sinking of the British freighter, Woodford, off the Spanish coast, has accepted a plan followed in the Crimean between Mediterranean powers and has also decided to increase the number of British fighting craft in the trouble area. The attacks on the British boats occurred approximately 75 miles northeast of Valencia and within twenty-four hours of each other. Italy has been formally charged by the Loyalist government in Spain with "piratical ventures" in the western Mediterranean.

Kalamazoo, Mich. Sept. 4 (CP)—Larry Teitsfaff, 18, was bitten recently by a poisonous copperhead snake. He recovered after a few days in hospital; but the reptile died today, a victim of its own bite, Teitsfaff says.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiesen
Science Service Meteorologist

Falling leaves! This month and next the leaves of deciduous trees will take on their autumn colorings and fall to the ground. Even in mid-summer some leaves will turn yellow or brown. This apparently is not due to the weather, no frost has touched them. They have performed their function of manufacturing food, and they wither and die. Leaves fall because of the forming of a layer of cork tissue across the leaf stalk, and the leaf hangs on, only by slender veins or fibres. Frost and wind come along and help the process. Leaves of the beech and oak, keep their foliage all winter.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—A deep disturbance, centred near the Labrador Coast, has a trough of low extending southward over Northern New Brunswick to the Lower Lakes while pressure is high from Lake Superior northwestward to the Yukon. Thunderstorms have occurred in many districts of Ontario and Quebec with a change to cooler weather. It has been for the most part fair and warm in the Maritimes. Except for light showers in a few dis'ricts it has continued fair and cool in the West.

Lake Superior—Moderate north-east winds, partly cloudy and quite cool. Sunday—Moderate northeast and east winds, fair and cool.

Western Provinces — Northeast and east winds; partly cloudy and cool today and Sunday; light scattered showers, chiefly in Southern Districts.

DANCE CLOSES FAIR

No Accidents And Stock Stood Terrific Heat Well

The last high note of the electric plane on the busy carousel had died to a tinny whisper. Along the midway, lights that had blinked in dancing chains darkened their glare with the trailing hush, that followed the silencing of scuffing feet and the rasping cries of hawkers from the last stands. Long since had the last of the visitors departed, and even though lights still burned in the office on the western side of the grounds, the 1937 edition of Belleville's annual Fair was declared officially over late last night.

Only a blizzard of paper, of empty peanut bags and discarded wrappings of lunches strewn on the green, was left as the exhibitors packed up, and the countless footsteps in the dust of the paths remained to tell of the long passing of those, who had come to attend the exhibition and had left it well satisfied that this year's was just as good, if not better, than preceding efforts by the Belleville Fair Board.

How many thousands of Belleville and district residents attended the Fair during the four full days' busy executives of the Board were loath to guess, the count as yet has not been completely finished, but it was intimated today by treasurer Alderman Ben Hagerman that it is believed, has been highly satisfactory.

"We are well satisfied. We believe we received the full support of everyone, and we are thankful," stated president of the Fair Board, Alderman Barker last night. Without the help of the public we would not have been able to put it on. We want to take this opportunity of thanking everyone."

Different From Others

From many aspects, this year's Fair was different from others that have been held during the past twelve consecutive years. It was pointed out by officials of the Board, that for the first time in all there was an oppressive, clammy

China Fails to Understand Japan's Intent' — Hirohito

Peace And Stability in East Aim of Japan Says Emperor

JAPANESE DIET OPENS

Tokyo, Sept. 4 (CP-Havas)—Clear in military uniform, Emperor Hirohito today opened the special session of the Diet called to vote funds for prosecution of the Chinese campaign.

"It has always been our utmost concern to establish peace and stability in the Far East by co-operation between our Empire and China," the Emperor.

"We deeply regret China failed to understand Japan's true intentions and that it resorted to provocations leading up to the present incident.

"Our soldiers are now showing their loyalty and courage in spite of innumerable difficulties to attain the aim of-assuring China to reconsider and thus firmly establish peace in the Far East. We hope our subjects will do their best to reach the goal thus determined."

Japanese Checkmated in Battle for Shanghai

NEW HUDDLE—BY FRENCH CABINET MINISTERS

After their hurried cabinet meeting at Paris to deal with the bombings of the French concession in Shanghai, these French cabinet ministers got together to discuss their recently-ended vacations. In centre, former Premier Leon Blum, now vice-premier and minister of state, exchanges pleasant words with M. Vincent Auriol (left) minister of justice, and M. Max Dormoy (right), minister of the interior. The Chinese ambassador assured the French cabinet the bombings of the concession were accidental. The Japanese envoy said his land and air forces in the Sino-Japanese area had been given instructions not to interfere with any of the foreign concessions, especially that of France.

New Europe Nazi Dream; Duce's German Visit Seen as Herald of New Era

Berlin, Sept. 4 (AP)—Nazi party convention preparations today paved the way for Premier Mussolini's forthcoming face-to-face meeting with his closest collaborator—Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Strengthening of Italo-German relations and open inclusion of the Spanish Insurgent regime of General Franco in the Fascist bloc of nations were expected to be important developments of the Nazi convention that opens in Nuremberg Monday.

Soon thereafter Mussolini will come for a portentious visit with Hitler. Official announcements that Mussolini will be here in the last half of this month upon the invitation of Der Fuehrer.

Hitler's own mouthpiece, Voelkischer Beobachter, hailed the approaching event as new evidence of the strength of the Rome-Berlin axis and as heralding the birth of a new Europe.

Although plans for the Duce's visit were incomplete, it was understood he would be present at special army manoeuvres in northern Germany.

Cannot Change Law by Saying "It is Will of God"

COURTS UPHELD

Edmonton, Sept. 4 (CP)—Attempts to change the constitution by "a defiance of law" were condemned by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Federal Conservative leader, in an address here yesterday in which he defended the authority of the Dominion government to disallow provincial legislation.

Addressing a joint gathering of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce and the Monday Club, Mr. Bennett said the British North America Act, which lays down definite powers for the Dominion, Provinces and the courts must be regarded as the Canadian constitution.

"Alberta cannot change our constitution by stating it is the will of God," said Mr. Bennett although he made no direct reference to federal disallowance of three Alberta Statues directed at licensing of the bankers and granting of moratoriums without consent of the provincial government.

NASAL SPRAY FOR CHILDREN

Simcoe, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP)—All Simcoe children between the ages of three and ten will be treated with nasal spray solutions of zinc sulphate, now being tested in Toronto and other centres, to determine its value as an infantile paralysis preventive measure, it was announced today. Preparations were made to treat between 75 and 800 children.

$5.00 REDUCTION IN CAR LICENCES STATES PREMIER

Moving Towards Nominal Fee With Gas Tax to Pay For Roads

NOT BID FOR VOTES

Says Reduction Frozen in His Budget Address

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP) — Ontario motorists will pay $5 less for their 1938 license plates, Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced at Dundas last night. A straight reduction of that amount will be made in the fees charged for all passenger car vehicles.

The government was moving towards a nominal fee for motor licenses, Premier Hepburn declared on the gasoline tax for revenues to provide for expenditures. He disburn told the Hamilton-Wentworth Liberal convention as it renominated Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways.

The Premier recalled that when in his budget address he announced a reduction in commercial vehicle license fees, he forecast a reduction in passenger car licenses. The reduction now was therefore not a bid for votes, he said.

Under present fees for passenger cars are: four cylinder, $7; sixes up to and including 28 horsepower, $12, over 28, $15; eight up to and including 33 horsepower, $15, over 33, $20; twelves, $30; sixteens, $40.

Not to Continue Policy

Mr. Hepburn saw a possibility of a repudiation here and the spirit of terror which disgusted all fair-minded people of the country to the south of us." If Hon Earl Rowe and the Conservative party should win the Oct. 6 general election.

C. H. Millard, Dominion representative of the Dominion Textile Industrial Organization, had said his party would be assured "quiet, peaceful and orderly lines." Such quiet and orderliness might disappear if the government which had so strenuously opposed the C.I.O. was to be defeated, Mr. Hepburn said.

The Premier said it had never been the policy of his government to continue indefinitely the policy permitting exports of Northern Ontario pulpwood to the United States. First concern was to get the timber limits in back to Ontario rather than the Southern States for sale.

As long as the physical assets of the companies remained, they limits were in Ontario and taxable by the province, he cared little where the actual cash from, said Mr. Hepburn.

Cooler Weather Raises Hopes Against Epidemic

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP)—Cooler weather raised the hopes of health officials here today in their battle to keep in check the spread of infantile paralysis.

While the City of Windsor still remains comparatively immune from the epidemic of poliomyelitis another case was reported to the Provincial Health office today, raising the total for the year to ten cases.

The latest case reported is that of a boy who recently returned from Muskoka, where he spent the summer. Dr. Fred Adams, M.O.H., said that the youngster stopped off at Southampton for several days before returning home.

Shanghai, Sept. 4 (CP-Havas)—Checkmated as far as the struggle for Shanghai, now entering its fourth week, Japanese aircraft took to the air over Shanghai today in a new effort to shatter the stolid, unshaken resistance of the Chinese forces.

Planes attacked half a dozen sectors of the city in an attempt to harry the Chinese rear and improve the precarious positions of the Japanese troops maintaining a bare foothold along the edge of the Whangpoo and Yangtze Rivers.

Shrapnel In Concessions.

Shrapnel from Japanese bombs and falling bullets from answering Chinese machine guns killed one and wounded about 30 in the French Concession, and 21 in the International Settlement. All were Chinese.

Japanese naval artillery opened up a new bombardment of the North Station district by the Chapel, already scarred and all but levelled by previous air and land attacks. One Japanese plane was shot down west of North Station.

ONLY STARTING PROMISES MADE SAYS EARL ROWE

Roads Promised in 1934 Just Begun Says Leader

HIGH COST OF BOOKS

States Increase in Some Cases More Than 200 Per Cent

Perth, Ont., Sept. 4 (CP)—On the eve of a provincial election which Premier Hepburn was only now starting public works which he had promised to undertake in his last election campaign, Conservative Leader Earl Rowe told a political gathering here last night.

"Roads promised before the present into office are only just begun," said Mr. Rowe. "But what Mr. Hepburn is starting now party will complete."

Ontario must have a sound and consistent road policy, said the Conservative leader, adding it was his intention to establish a department for rural development.

One of Mr. Hepburn's campaign undertakings in 1934 had been that he would apply all monies from gasoline tax and motor license fees to highways, Mr. Rowe said. Last year $20,000,000 was collected, and of this amount only $4,500,000, subsidized by the government from the Dominion, had been spent on roads.

In the three months previous to the election Premier Hepburn contemplated spending $3,500,000 on five hospitals, he declared.

Reiterated Charge

"Every cabinet minister is getting a road constituency all his own dis'rict," Mr. Rowe said.

A municipalities leader reiterated that Ontario was confronted with a power shortage. In this connection he said the "dishonest repudiation" of crown contracts with another province was the blackest blot in the history of Ontario".

Mr. Rowe told his audience that Mr. Hepburn had now come round to his (Mr. Rowe's) position on labor matters. The people need have no apprehension about the Conservative Party establishing law and order, he had done so in the past and would do so in the future, nor would he need the aid of "the Hepburn Hearsays".

Mr. Rowe criticized the government's educational policy, and asserted that with the public and high schools now re-opening after the summer vacation, parents found the cost of books had risen in some cases more than 200 per cent.

14 NEW CASES OF PARALYSIS ARE REPORTED

In Many Places Schools Remain Indefinitely Closed

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP) — Three deaths from infantile paralysis were reported to the health department here today, raising the number of fatalities in Ontario since the epidemic broke out early in June to 39. Twenty of the deaths have occurred in Toronto. Fourteen new cases of those stricken so far in Toronto is 347.

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP) — By coincidence all the infantile paralysis patients seen so far by Dr. Frail Woodstock, special Department of Health consultant for this district, have had the same first symptom.

That was still the fact when he visited a nine-year-old girl here, first paralysis case in this district.

Ten new cases brought were being made in the Medical Research Department of the University of Toronto today to aid in the fight against infantile paralysis. The artificial respirators were invented by a 32-year-old research worker in the Banting Institute at Toronto.

Bernard Lieb, inventor of the respirators who once suffered from the disease that since early June has stricken 1,100 persons, said the machine worked on a bilateral unknown principle in science. "The iron lung encloses all but the victims' heads and through air pressure forces the lungs to inhale and exhale when infantile paralysis has so weakened

European Blood Wasted In War Says Der Fuehrer

Suggests England And Germany Alone Can Save World

London, Sept. 4 (AP)—A letter from Chancellor Hitler urging an Anglo-German accord was today strengthened by "adherence", of the United States, to "peace peace and preserve "the interest of the white people" drew scant comment here today.

In publishing the letter The Daily Mail said "although the letter was widely circulated among leading papers not one of them took any steps."

Hitler wrote Lord Rothermere, publisher of The Daily Mail, saying that:

Millions Die In Vain.

"Nine-tenths of the blood poured out during the last 300 years in Europe has been wasted. In those 300 years, Europe has lost from 30,000,000 to 25,000,000 "lives in wars which were intrinsically without benefit to the nation, if benefit is estimated in terms of practical advantage rather than dubious prestige.

"All hope for the future is dead so far as the human eye can see, unless it comes from England and Germany."

The communication urged an Anglo-German agreement and the calling of a conference of the many powers to examine Germany's claims to colonies.

Deadbury, Conn., Sept. 4 (AP)—An attack by a madman in his dreams sent Austin J. McDonell to a hospital with a fractured pelvis.

So realistic did the bandit "attack" seem, said McDonell, that he leaped through a second floor window to escape and landed on a concrete sidewalk.

BOYS' BAND AGAIN VISITS THE CITY

Members of the Oshawa Boys' Band, who last placed third in the Canadian National Exhibition band competitions at Toronto, this week and who delighted Belleville Masonic Lovers on Wednesday afternoon at the Fair during their brief stop over, were again guests of the city on Friday afternoon, when they stopped over en route to Ottawa for a real and hearty meal at Conways restaurant. The boys were in the city from 5.30 o'clock in the afternoon until seven.

COTTAGE AND CASTLE SHOWN AT THE FAIR

Just at this time when the minds of men and women are concerned considerably with thoughts of home improvement and building new homes the exhibit of The Thurston Co., Limited, of Belleville at Belleville Fair, attracted more than usual attention. This company sees in for building material in a big way and has won a high reputation for quality resulting in a wide territory, even shipping building material to Toronto. Featuring a modern mill equipped with the latest machinery, all building requirements can be met on short notice and the exhibit at the Fair was an eye opener as to the magnitude and variety of the firm's capabilities. Every type of building the Company have an attractive exhibit at the Belleville Fair and their display is always looked for as a necessary part of the fair. Here is shown the complete parts of a house building, everything from the foundation to the roof, for a cottage or a castle. Object lessons are also given in the structure of insulation and how best to apply, samples of factory work, lumber and hardwood finishes of various kinds were shown in a very interesting way. Special attention was drawn to the advantages of Rockwool Roofing with examples of its wisdom and the economies and protection provided by its use. Mr. Fred Thurston, John Thurston and other members of the firm were in attendance at all times to explain the exhibits and give advice on proposed building operations.

FASHION FOOTPRINTS IN GAY COLORS

Stepping out in new shoes is one of the joys of the fall season for both sexes, hence the exhibit of new fashions in footwear by W. M. Leslie of Leslie's Shoe Store attracted the interested attention of many of the fair visitors. The very latest styles in men and women's wear were shown and exhibit was an object lesson in the shapes and colors of footwear which will comply with fashions decrees this fall and winter. In addition the attractive exhibit displayed a fine range of luggage, showing in every latest in travelling goods, from wardrobe trunks to hand luggage and overnight bags. The women visitors were specially interested in "Travel Twins," Aeropack, Aeropack, Suitette, Fitted Cases, while mere man was amazed and pleased at the evident care and inventive genius displayed in providing for his comfort. And smart appearance in wardrobe gladstones, Berkeley Bags, Aeropacks, Club bags, etc. The "all-in pack" for women adds pleasure to travelling and is one of the newest creations for smart women.

GIVES UP TRIP IN COLLAPSIBLE CANOE

En route to the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto in a small collapsible rubber canoe, Miss Hay Cochrane of Ottawa, yesterday gave up the idea of continuing the trip via water and has parked her craft in Picton. She will finish the remainder of the trip by automobile. Setting out from Ottawa eighteen days ago, Miss Cochrane completed the voyage up without incident. Having to make the turn toward Deseronto at the Glenora ferry, she landed at Picton. Here she engaged the name of the place. Members of the Picton Yacht Club learned the girl planned further travel on the lake in her frail craft and made arrangements for her trip to Toronto with a city bound motorist.

WOLVES ARE AGAIN WORRYING FARMERS

Tyendinaga wolves are again worrying farmers of the township, and in the district of Marysville concerned action is expected to be taken to end their depredations on sheep flocks and other domestic stock. Becoming bolder this year, the stalking animals have at times pursued fowl and sheep into the farm yards of the farmers, slaying their victims here in broad daylight. Thirteen of the slinking animals were seen in one time by William Alexander of Marysville on the outskirts of his farm.

Mr. Alexander managed to get close to one of the largest wolves of the pack, but was alarmed and the animal beat a hasty retreat.

Huge Flying Boat Cambria Skims Over Top of Belleville; Loses Port Wing at Toronto

Low-Flying Air Liner Seen by Thousands in Belleville

Drowning in smooth, effortless flight from the mainland lake out of the east, just one minute behind her scheduled time of 2:05 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the huge four-motored flying boat, Cambria, hirtled over the city of Belleville, oceanic air supremacy, passed over the lower section of the city en route west.

Her silent motors, in direct contrast to those heard above the city from other heavy machines, carried the giant air boat over the district at an altitude estimated at less than five hundred feet, causing residents of the district an excellent view of the silver ship as she crossed the Atlantic in record time. Low clouds and a heavy heat haze forced the pilot to keep the ship down from some distance east.

The ship, hurtling across the Province on a good will tour, is of the Imperial Airways and Trans-Canada Airlines fleet of Boucherville base, Quebec early in the morning. From there she passed over Kingston en route, and leaving Belleville, she flew over Trenton and other towns along the lake, expecting to reach Toronto in less than an hour. Over Belleville sought observation vantage points long before the giant drew near of her passing in order to observe the largest heavier than air machine ever seen in this district.

Cambria Flies Over Fair

The Cambria passed over the crack race horses at the Belleville Fair Grounds, apparently unnoticed as the huge ship glided over the city. Only thousands, Faces were turned upward and necks craned at varying angles as the large craved through the air. Then as the great ship until it disappeared from sight in the direction of the Bay of Quinte.

Flying so low that the whirling propellers of its four motors were plainly visible, the "Cambria" which in the words of one spectator "resembled a flying house, banked and veered sharply to the left when over the grandstand, apparently following the water route to Toronto.

Weather Conditions Disappointed

Toronto, Sept. 4—(CP)—Accident that overtook the empire's largest flying boat Cambria today prevented her scheduled flight over Western Ontario and disappointed thousands of residents who anticipated a glimpse of the transoceanic giant.

The Cambria, having negotiated the stormy Atlantic in three uneventful flights, lost its port wing pontoon yesterday while making a routine landing before the eyes of Canadian National Exhibition spectators lining the Lake Ontario shore.

Cause of the mishap remained in doubt although Captain Griffith J. Powell, commander, said he believed a submerged log was responsible. Aviation experts who witnessed the occurrence from the shore held over-wind diutrial may have contributed, causing the flying boat to dip its wing tip in the waters as well as forward motion.

Rail Moved Under Ten Wing

Rail Moved Under Ten Wing

The pontoon was towed to the Toronto air harbor at the foot of Bathurst street immediately after the accident and within an hour technical experts swarmed over the damaged wing. The port pontoon was cut loose and sent ashore for repairs.

A raft was moored under the torn wing and from it mechanics and riggers labored at repairs that expert opinion said might take from two to four days to complete. The ship was to have left for Windsor early today and after a flight across Western Ontario with one or two scheduled stops was to have left Sunday afternoon for Montreal and her return flight across the Atlantic.

A civic dinner at which Mayor W. D. Robbins was to bid formal welcome to Capt. Powell and his crew was postponed from last night to tonight. The captain superintended repairs to his ship after issuing the brief statement through Trans-Canada of Imperial Airways, owners of the craft.

MELONS, PEACHES FLOOD MARKET, FRUIT PLENTIFUL

Fine Farm And Dairy Produce Display Greet Shoppers

EGGS DOWN

Melons by the truckload, melons by the basket, but and crate lots, in paper bags and other containers deluged the city market from early morning in an avalanche of fruit to herald a veritable glut of farm and dairy produce that attracted a large crowd of Saturday morning shoppers despite the fact that sullen skies threatened momentarily to send down a deluge of rain.

Melons Plentiful

Catalogue from the size of an apple to that of a pumpkin in varied colors and prices were offered to a briskly buying crowd. For the sum of five cents one could purchase the smaller fruits, while the larger ones ranged up to as high as thirty and thirty-five cents. Rockmelon Watermelon was also profusive, large ones and small ones in varying shades of green found favor in the eyes of early morning shoppers and sold from ten cents upward.

Peaches ran a close second in quantity to the melons, with huge wagon and truckloads being brought in for sale. Discriminating housewife with an eye to preserving fruit bargains availed themselves of the low prices offered. No. 1's were offered at forty and forty-five cents by the basket, and No. 2's quoted at thirty and thirty-five cents the six quart lot.

Pears, also in plentiful exhibit were Bradshaw plums at thirty-five cents per basket; dimpse quoted at thirty cents; Burbank plums at thirty-five cents for the six quart basket. Pears were offered at sixty cents per basket and blackberries at twenty cents per box.

Vegetable Prices Firm

Tomatoes showed no change in price from those quoted a week ago. Bushel baskets were offered at fifty cents with baskets at fifteen and twenty cents. Potatoes likewise remained firm with bushel prices quoted at seventy-five and eighty cents and peck lots at twenty cents. Sweet corn was offered in most quarters at ten cents per dozen ears, although some vendors demanded twenty-five cents for two dozen lots.

Cabbage and cauliflower of good quality were offered at from ten cents upward. Cucumbers did not decrease in quantity and sold at the prevailing price of ten cents per dozen. Carrots, beets, radishes and onions sold at the regular bunchlot prices of five cents.

A fine display of eggs, poultry and other dairy produce greeted housewives in the inner market. Eggs showed a slight decline in price from the quotations of a week ago with "A" selects selling generally at twenty-seven cents per dozen with extras quoted at twenty-three and twenty-five cents. Dairy butter held firm at thirty cents per pound, although some vendors held out for higher prices.

Broiler chickens struck a popular note, selling at from sixty-five to ninety cents per pair. Other chickens were quoted at from sixty cents to one dollar each. A few ducks were available today and sold at from fifty to seventy cents each. Honey was offered at ten cents per pound in different sized containers, comb honey was quoted at twenty cents per comb.

Muskrats, at fifteen cents per pound, was the only fish available today.

14 NEW CASES

the muscles that they cannot perform this function.

Plague Quite General.

Most of the cases remained centred in Toronto, followed by London, but almost every section of Ontario had cases on record. Northern Ontario was almost free of the disease with Western Ontario showed more severely than the eastern portion of the province.

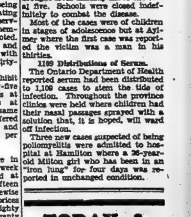
Already postponed from the scheduled Sept. 1 opening, schools in many towns and cities will remain closed indefinitely in the fight against the disease. Quarantine was enforced strictly and children were kept from public places in many towns.

Northern new cases reported at Toronto yesterday, brought the total to 334 with 11 dead from effects of infantile paralysis. London had the next highest number of cases on record from four new cases last night brought the total to 50.

Baby Boxer Called Off.

First cases in the epidemic were reported from Aylmer and Guelph and measures were all taken to stop spread of the infection. At Stratford, where there are seven cases under treatment, children under 16 were banned from all public places including Sunday schools.

A baby show was called off at Cornwall when the fifth case was reported. At Kingston a sufferer brought from Lindsay made the total five. Schools were closed indefinitely to combat the disease.



Most of the cases were of children in stages of adolescence but at Aylmer one of the first cases was reported of the victim was a man in his thirties.

1,200 Distributions of Serums.

The Ontario Department of Health according to reports had distributed to 1,100 cases to stem the tide of infection. Throughout the province clinics were held where children had their nasal passages sprayed with a solution that, it is hoped, will ward off infection.

Three new cases suspected of being poliomyelitis were admitted to hospitals at Hamilton today, a 36-year-old Milton girl who has been in an "iron lung" for four days was reported in unchanged condition.

Swim Ban Signs Are Torn Down; Offenders Warned

Signs banning bathing off the government dock were torn down and destroyed by some persons, it was reported late Friday. The incident was reported to the Board of Health and the police department who are investigating.

Owing to the fact that concern for public health dictated the action of the Board of Health in placing such signs placed at this point and others, those responsible and their conviction would mean the possibility of a severe penalty.

Other placards were erected at the government dock to replace those destroyed.

The Board of Health officials impress the fact that those who removed these signs were committing a serious act. Their ordinary common sense ought to make it clear to them that these were placed as a precaution for the health of every citizen of Belleville and district, including those as daughter, less or senseless as to remove them.

How to Kill Fleas from Dogs and Cats Common in Homes

Owners of dogs and cats are often alarmed and annoyed during summer and autumn by the appearance of actively biting fleas in their homes, sometimes in considerable numbers. These fleas, scientifically known as Ctenocephalus canis and felis, of the dog and the cat flea, respectively, may be especially troublesome after the home has been closed up for several weeks, while the occupants are away enjoying a summer vacation. The reason for this is that in temporarily vacant houses the cleaning activities of the housewife are suspended, and the fleas are able to develop and multiply undisturbed. In such cases, the fleas become excited, the absence of the cats and dogs, and when the occupants of the house return they are likely to be attacked by large numbers of these voracious insects. Fleas may be recognized as small, hard-bodied, active insects, wingless, but possessing powerful legs well-fitted for jumping. Their mouthparts form a lance-like piercing organ with which they penetrate the skin of their victims and suck blood, their laterally compressed bodies and backward-projecting spines are admirably adapted for allowing them to move rapidly among the hairs of their hosts.

Their life-history is briefly as follows: the small, white, oval eggs are deposited loosely among the hairs of cats and dogs or in their sleeping places. The eggs drop or are shaken from the animals and hatch into tiny, cylindrical, white maggots, which feed on various organic substances in floor cracks and similar places. On reaching maturity the larvae spin small silken cocoons and transform into the pupal or resting stage, emerging later as adult fleas.

The period occupied by the complete life cycle from egg to adult, and the length of life of the adult, are variable, depending on the food supply and atmospheric conditions. The former may be as short as two or three weeks, or much longer, and the latter may be from a few days to several weeks.

Investigations by an officer of the Entomological Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, has shown that infestations of fleas in dwellings may readily be eliminated usually without recourse to fumigation. Control consists of three phases: (1) destruction of adult fleas in the house; (2) on the dog or cat, and (3) destruction of the immature stages (eggs, larvae and pupae) in floor cracks and similar places. The destruction of adult fleas in the house may be accomplished by spraying the infested rooms liberally with a good pyrethrum fly spray; those on the dog or cat may be destroyed by dusting the animals thoroughly, over newspapers, with fresh pyrethrum insect powder, which kills or stuns the fleas and causes them to fall on the paper, after which they may be destroyed by burning; or, the animals may be washed in a solution of cresol or cresolin, 3 per cent for cats and 3 per cent for dogs, followed shortly after by soap and warm water. The sleeping places of the cats and dogs should be scrupulously cleaned, to destroy the immature stages of fleas, a thorough house-cleaning is necessary, using a vacuum cleaner, if available, and scrubbing the floors with hot soapy water. Particular attention must be given to the basement of the house, as this is most commonly the chief source of trouble.

Cost Analysis Made Potato Production

Early in 1935 a National Committee on Potato Research was organized to study all phases of potato production and marketing in Eastern Canada. The Economics Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture undertook to make a study of the production methods and costs of production in the Upper St. John of New Brunswick, the study taking the form of a comprehensive farm management survey. While the Economics Branch provided the personnel of the field party, the New Brunswick Department of Agriculture supplied half of the transportation and the assistance of the Agricultural Representative for the area in an advisory capacity.

The counties of Carleton and Victoria were selected for the purposes of the production study. They are located in the west-central section of New Brunswick bordering the State of Maine and constitute the valley of the Upper St. John River. During July and August of 1935 a total of 302 farm survey records were collected, the New Brunswick Department cooperating further by providing assistance in the office work. In view of the abnormal marketing situation which existed in 1934-35, the study was continued in part during the summer of 1936, by means of a written questionnaire and limited personal interview with farmers in the area, a total of 70 records covering the crop year 1935-36 were secured from the same farmers who had co-operated in the previous year. All the information of these surveys and a detailed analysis will be found in the 70-page bulletin "An Economic Study of Potato Production in New Brunswick" issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Cost of producing potatoes per acre on the 70 farms covered in the two-year study averaged $17.14 per acre for 1934-35 and $20.56 per acre for 1935-36. Items which tended to increase the cost per acre from one year to another will be found in the formation of these surveys and a detailed analysis will be found in the 70-page bulletin "An Economic Study of Potato Production in New Brunswick" issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

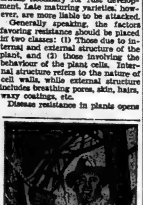
Cost of producing potatoes per acre on the 70 farms covered in the two-year study averaged $17.14 per acre for 1934-35 and $20.56 per acre for 1935-36. Items which tended to increase the cost per acre from one year to another will be found in the use of equipment, and use of building. The increase in these items were offset to some extent by decreases in such costs as seed potatoes, fertiliser, spray materials and labour charges. The fact that the increaser costs in 1935-36 were greater in part due to an increase in the per acre charges of the fixed costs demonstrates the same fact that was shown in the analysis of 190 farms in 1934-35, namely that costs tended to increase as the acreage is lower. There was a general reduction of the potato acreage in 1935-36 and consequently the general increase in costs was to be expected.

The study covers every phase of the farm unit with, soils, climate, land utilization, farm capital, farm stock, equipment, farm receipts, incidentals, and expense cost of production of potatoes, and factors affecting that cost, such as farm income, size of business, acres of potatoes, degree of specialization, crop index and location of farm, together with information on the production of potatoes in the Dominion. The bulletin may be obtained on request from the Publicity and Extension Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Disease Resistance In Farm Plants

(Experimental Farms Note)

It is a striking fact that nature has endowed some plants with the quality of disease resistance while others, even of the same sort, are very susceptible. Although the reasons for this variation in susceptibility to disease have been shrouded in mystery, nevertheless investigators have made marked progress towards accounting for this phenomenon.



In Canada alone it is gratifying to know that definite progress has been made in the production of a number of economic crop plants possessing resistance to destructive diseases. For examples of such progressive advances may be made to the recent introduction of rust-resistant wheat varieties and to the turnip strains resistant to club root,—accomplishments credited to the personnel of the Experimental Farms Branch, at Ottawa.

By "disease resistance" we mean the peculiar ability of plants to resist attacks of disease-producing organisms such as fungi and bacteria. This condition may be complete, partial or absent.

Complete resistance implies true immunity—as is possessed by Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain potatoes, which do not contract the disease known as wart or canker. Partial resistance is illustrated by certain varieties of potatoes which produce stems and leaves resistant to blight while the tubers are highly susceptible. Equally striking is the behaviour of the Katahdin potato which is immune to mild mosaic but which is successfully attacked by other kinds of mosaic as well as leaf roll and spindle tuber. One must not be misled by apparent immunity, or by an escape from a disease — a circumstance frequently attributed to true immunity, for disease may be avoided through seasonal or climatic factors. For example, at present wheat in Prince Edward Island is free from stem rust, while epidemics are damaging this crop in Western Canada. In fact, wheat on the Atlantic sea-board, particularly in the Island Province, has thus far escaped before the occurrence of conditions necessary for rust development. Late maturing varieties, however, are more likely to be attacked.

Generally speaking, the factors favoring resistance should be placed in two classes: (1) Those due to internal and external structure of the plant, and (2) those involving the behaviour of the plant cells. Internal structure refers to the nature of cell walls, while external structure includes breathing pores, skin, hairs, waxy coatings, etc.

Disease resistance in plants opens up valuable possibilities towards eliminating the heavy losses and great inconveniences due to disease of crop plants. For this reason Canadian farmers should keep themselves informed on the developments arising in this important phase of plant disease prevention.

COULDN'T SLEEP COULDN'T WORK

What a relief to settle down to a real night's rest, and awaken refreshed, ready for the day's duties. Many people who were tortured by frightful nights—tossing, turning—were comfortable. Half awake days—dizzy, dead, drowsy, body and mind in a daze when they needed rest. "Try Dodd's Kidney Pills" a friend said. "They may be your salvation." I did, followed his advice, and now I'm sleeping like a top—thanks to !!!

Presents a Statement by

The Academy of Medicine, Toronto, on

"INFANTILE PARALYSIS"
(POLIOMYELITIS)

Realizing the anxiety which exists in the public mind today with respect to the increased prevalence of Poliomyelitis ("Infantile Paralysis") in Toronto and other parts of the province, the Academy of Medicine of Toronto, which represents more than one thousand physicians, called a special meeting of its Council, September 1st, to review the whole situation. To this meeting were invited representatives from all departments of medicine interested in this subject.

At the conclusion of the conference, during which time all of the pertinent facts of the present situation were presented and discussed, it was felt that, in fairness to the public, an official statement should be made to set forth the facts exactly as they exist. To this end, a committee was appointed to prepare and issue an official statement, which follows:

Poliomyelitis ("Infantile Paralysis") is a communicable disease. It is definitely known that it is caused by the entrance into the body of a minute form of life known as a virus. It is known also that this virus enters commonly through the upper part of the nasal tract. There is no evidence that the disease is conveyed by flies or domestic animals.

When an outbreak of the disease occurs, healthy persons as well as those ill with the disease are found to harbour the virus in the secretions of the nose and throat. The disease is, therefore, spread through the contact of persons one with another.

Usually the virus occasions only a mild illness but sometimes the virus enters the central nervous system, which may result in paralysis. The majority of adults are not susceptible to the disease.

Present Situation

While the number of cases reported in Toronto is greater than in any previous outbreak of this disease, and there is no reason to presume that the incidence rate is likely to decline within the next two or three weeks, it must be borne in mind that not 25% of these cases show any evidence whatever of paralysis. Furthermore, among those developing paralysis, the majority eventually will recover complete use of their paralysed limbs. It would appear, therefore, that while there is every reason for the public to view the present situation with concern, there is no justification for undue alarm or hysterical behaviour.

According to figures computed by the Department of Health, Ontario, to date, there are estimated to be 750 cases in Ontario, of which 285 have occurred in the City of Toronto. Of this number, 212 cases have been admitted to the Riverdale Isolation Hospital, only 54 of whom developed some degree of paralysis. There were 11 deaths in this group. Statistics of a similar nature apply to the Hospital for Sick Children, which has received its cases not only from Toronto but from other parts of the province.

Control Measures

These include the strict isolation of all persons ill with the disease and the quarantine of those who have been in immediate contact.

In as much as it is not known who are or are not carriers of this disease, it is advisable to reduce to a minimum, contact with other people. In other words, keep out of crowds. As children are particularly susceptible, it is most important that they be kept as far as possible from mingling with other persons. For this reason, the opening of the schools of Toronto has been deferred and the Department of Health of the Province of Ontario has recommended to parents that they see to it that their children avoid attendance at theatres, playgrounds, bathing pools and beaches and other places of amusement where children congregate. The Academy agrees with the provincial and municipal health authorities that the responsibility for the control of the activities of children is primarily the duty of the parents.

The Department of Health of Ontario has completed within its own organization plans whereby serum for the treatment of this disease is available in any part of the province upon the request of the attending physician.

Nasal Spray

Experimental work with animals indicates that Poliomyelitis can be prevented by spraying the extreme upper part of the inside of the nose with a harmless solution of zinc sulphate. This was discovered during the past year. To date, its value in the prevention of Poliomyelitis in humans is not known. To be in any degree effective, the spray must be applied high up inside the nose. This can only be done with a specially constructed atomizer and by a physician thoroughly familiar with this type of work. The application of this or any other spray by an ordinary atomizer or to the lower part of the nose is quite useless. The possible value of the nasal spray properly administered is being determined at the present time in Toronto.

The Council of the Academy of Medicine of Toronto endorses the attitude adopted by the provincial Department of Health and the local Board of Health in respect to measures designed to control the present situation. We would respectfully suggest that the public will best serve its own interests by endeavoring to follow the advice which is being given by these health authorities.

PLAINFIELD

Plainfield—On Wednesday afternoon at the Belleville Fair Robert Harold Mason was awarded first prize for boys under six months of age. Robert was born on March 18, 1937, and baptized in Plainfield United Church on Sunday July 4th, by the Rev. J. F. Evenson, his grandfather, who on that date celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination. He is an only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mason, Belleville, and a sister of Barbara Jane Mason who was born in June, 1933 and who, four years ago at the Belleville Fair was awarded first prize for girls under six months of age. Mrs. Mason (nee Flossie Viola Evenson) the youngest daughter of Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Evenson is a graduate of Belleville General Hospital and when asked about her little son's beautiful complexion said, "A baby's complexion is affected wonderfully by the attention a mother gives herself before her child is born."

Robert, who by the Pully physician, Dr. Demorest of Stirling, was under 10 per cent, was a couple of days before the fair checked by a Belleville doctor who pronounced him as nearly perfect as any child could be.

Mr. Mason is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Mason, Belleville, and assistant manager in Loblaw's Groceteria, having been in the employ of Loblaws since he was a boy, having accepted a position with that firm when a store was first opened in Belleville.

Rev. R. A. Whatham , of Toronto and Rev. L. S. Wight of Belleville were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Evenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Creeper spent a day recently with friends in Northport.

Miss Margery Creeper and Miss Evelyn Outwater have joined the number of those attending the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

William Arthur Marshall is visiting with his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall.

CARMEL

Carmel—Some of the farmers in this vicinity have started their fall plowing.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dafoe spent Sunday afternoon at Mr. Geo. Hollinger's, Moira.

The High School boys and girls of this line are starting back to school again on Wednesday Sept. 1.

Mr. Palmer Phillips and Fred Vandewater spent three days last week in Perth and West Port.

The Public School re-opened again with Miss Mona Wright as teacher.

Master Garth Sine and Nema have returned home after spending a week with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Sine, Hawdon.

Mr. Seldon Homans spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. G. Vandewater.

Mr. Frank Guay is not much better.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bailey and family of Toronto spent Monday evening with Mrs. W. Sine and mother.

NEW NORTHWEST PASSAGE FOUND

The name Northwest Passage has been the theme of mariners and navigators, particularly of those of the British race for four centuries. It refers to the route of a ship across the top of the world in the Canadian Arctic from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It was as far back as sixteenth century that seamen who come of that daring race who have set on Britain the naval crown of the world were seeking this route to find a shorter voyage to India. Failure after failure meant nothing to the doughty men but in 1905 Amundsen in the ship Gjoa sailed from the Atlantic to the Pacific by way of Davis Strait, Lancaster Sound and Bering Strait. About seventy five years ago Sir John Franklin's party found the historic passage but his company all perished though the goal was within reach.

Yesterday a new passage was charted across the top of the world when contact was made by two ships the Hudson's Bay Company ship Nascopie and the Schooner Aklavik in Bellot Strait. The Aklavik from Cambridge Bay in the Western Arctic drew alongside the Nascopie from Montreal.

This event meant a new northwest passage through Bellot Strait which separates Boothia Peninsula, the most northerly tip of the Canadian mainland and Somerset Island.

Although ships have run the original north-west passage farther north, along Lancaster Sound and Barron Strait, it was the first time a ship had passed through Bellot Strait, thus opening a new passage.

The Nascopie was picking its way through the strait, guided by a small boat in which Capt. F. T. Smith was taking soundings in the uncharted water. The schooner suddenly came into sight around a rocky headland scarcely visible in light snowfall.

Amid cheers from the Nascopie, the schooner pulled up and Eskimos from the eastern Arctic grinned down on Eskimos from the Mackenzie River district.

THE MINING INDUSTRY

Growth of the mining industry is one of the factors working for the expansion of Canada. The country is one of the richest in the world from the standpoint of natural resources and has a source of greatness which is the envy of the nations. This year it is anticipated the output of the mines will be half a billion dollars, an increase of one hundred and ninety million dollars in annual production in three years. By 1946 this output is expected to reach the great total of $750,000,000. This will mean an increase of one hundred per cent in ten years.

Importance of this great industry can be realized in the stability of the Canadian dollar.

IT'S NO RIDDLE

It seems a riddle that most accidents occur when the driver is going straight ahead. It isn't a riddle at all. Can you solve it? Here's a clue: That's the only time when the driver can really "step on the gas." Last year, in 628 accidents in which people were killed, 521 cars were "going straight," and so were 8,000 of the cars involved in the 38,000-fatal accidents. Highway deaths can be eliminated if drivers will mix brains, as well as air, with their gasoline.

ROYAL AIR FORCE AND BAGPIPES

Bagpipes have been officially recognized by the Air Council and pipe bands have been formed at English and Scottish R.A.F. stations, according to the London Morning Post. It is explained that the Air Council's musical director set out to discover what type of music could be heard by flight officers and men after long association with the roar of airplane engines, and as soon as the first drone of the pipes rose, a high officer sprang to his feet and shouted "Contact!" The trials were exhaustive, every conceivable type of musical instrument, from mouth organ to tomtom, having been listened to at different stations. As the R.A.F. men paid no particular attention until the skirl of the bagpipes rent the air, it is apparent that the Scottish musical weapon is the very thing for men used to the droning roar of plane engines. The aviators' ears being attuned to engine music, the beautiful notes of the pipes doubtless were "like home" to them. Every soldier knows that bagpipes are fine things to march to, and it may be that they likewise are eminently suitable for air service man. In any event, they have been recognized by the Air Council, and despite what their unappreciative detractors may say about them, they promise to be heard in the land more often and for a long time to come.—Montreal Gazette.

Belleville Rotary Club Monday entertained Mr. Victor Sifton, General Manager of the Winnipeg Free Press, who addressed the club on the subject of the League of Nations, having been Canadian official observer at the league assembly in Geneva last year. He is a son of the late Sir Clifford Sifton, noted Canadian public man, who was one of the builders of the West and was well and favorably known from Winnipeg to the Rockies, taking a prominent part in public affairs in the early days of Western Canada and being noted for strong opinions which caused him at times to vigorously differ with leaders of his own party.

THE BEEFEATERS OF OLD ENGLAND, celebrated in song and story, are falling down on their job, apparently, for news comes from London that lighter luncheons are being fancied by the working classes. Instead of roast beef and Yorkshire pudding and steak and kidney pie, and other such substantial viands, London busmen are now being regaled on braised nuts and spinach, curry, salad, and spaghetti. What a mess to feed with a pint of ale or bitters! But this has all been worked out scientifically according to calories by the London Transport's welfare department which provides lunches for 25,000 busmen. It would be simpler, perhaps to issue the printed number of calories required for the week with the weekly pay envelope and save wear and tear upon dishes. Eh, what?

Six years ago come Sept. 18, the wicked Chinese blew up a section of the Manchurian railway south of Mukden. As a result Japan found it necessary to take over Manchuria, a country of half a million square miles with 35,000,000 inhabitants.

On July 7 last, in the vicinity of the Marco Polo Bridge near Peiping, the Japanese were once more the victims of an unprovoked attack. Their troops, engaged in peaceful manoeuvres, were fired upon by Chinese soldiers—so Tokyo says. As a result of this wanton outrage it seems altogether likely that Japan will end up with anywhere from fifty to one hundred million Northern Chinese under her suzerainty.

Looking forward into the more distant future, who can doubt that as the result of similar brutal cases of assault and battery perpetrated on innocent Japanese troops Tokyo's imperial banner will yet be floating over the remaining three hundred million Chinese all the way to Canton and Tibet?

Thus does the New York Times columnist sum up the colonizing methods of the Japanese, backed up by a great military armament which they are only too willing to use, and find their neighbors, the Chinese very convenient to practise on.

OTTAWA PARADE

Back Stage In the Dominion Capital with WILFRID EGGLESTON

When Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn was first considered as a possible candidate for the Liberal leadership of the province, he was a relatively obscure back-bencher of the Liberal party, and some political writers who should have had more insight dismissed the idea, with some scorn.

Indeed, one parliamentary correspondent who attempted to give his paper in Toronto a "scoop by forecasting "Mitch" as the probable choice of the provincial Liberals was foiled by his own paper, which declined to print what it evidently regarded as an absurd rumor!

In those days the present premier may not have looked like an eminent political leader 'on the make', but anyone who had listened senior, after any session to his speeches could not help being made aware of one thing:

In a free-for-all, or even a good warm exchange of opinions in the House, there was no one in the Liberal ranks who could "take it" better than young Mr. Hepburn. He displayed a gift for badinage, a saucy humor, an Irish vivacity in handling hecklers, a good "barnyard" style at times that rivalled that of Mr. Motherwell. He made his addresses in an infectious spirit of good humor.

The more superior and august members in the House, especially those who were the heir of "Mighty" Ahearn, were inclined to think some of his observations cheap and in questionable taste. But no one could question their political effectiveness. It should have been clear to anyone in the Galleries, as far back as 1926, that the member for West Elgin was destined to be a powerful fellow on the stump.

For some reason or other, Mitch liked nothing better than an Irishman to go after. Redmond has previously been one of his encounters.

They range from such casual gibes as that when Dr. I. H. Cotnam, protesting as a Conservative in the current election) interrupted Hepburn as follows:

Mr. Cotnam: "I will shake my political future against that of my boon friend . . ."

Mr. Hepburn: "Let me tell my boon friend that he hasn't any political future. I saw his colleagues from South Renfrew bowled over in the non-political gathering in his own riding before a group of farmers."

. . . from such trifles as this, to a major diatribe such as that against Dr. R. J. Manion, who had just sat down after an eloquent address:

Mr. Hepburn: "My friend, sir, always listen with amusement when the Minister of Railways (Mr. Manion) floats along on the floodtide of his own verbosity, invective, and sarcasm. He has a proximity for rousing everybody and everything.

. . . His capacity for invective always reminds me of Huckleberry Finn's father. It is reported that on every occasion possible he used to cuss everybody in his own household.

He would then go on to cuss the town council; then the state representatives, the state governor, and would finally get into the larger House, the members of the Senate, and last but not least, the president himself. Then in case he had overlooked anyone, he would start with the president and come right back to his own household."

Later on in the same debate, the present Ontario premier proceeded to get thoroughly warmed up himself, and in one of his more powerful moments, delivered the following classic:

"Do not let hon. gentlemen opposite be disillusioned for a moment into believing that they have pulled the wool over the eyes of the Canadian people again. The people have, it is true, been propagandized; they have been hypnotized, but they are not subscribing to the politics as they are being enunciated by our hon. friends opposite. As a matter of fact, when I am speaking about getting one's eyes opened, the thought just strikes me that the Prime Minister (Mr. Bennett) has a great capacity for opening people's eyes. He opened the eyes of the Canadian people with his many promises in 1930. He opened the eyes of the British statesmen at the Imperial Conference in 1930. He opened the eyes of his followers to his own autocracy. Indeed he might be known from now on as the 'Right Hon. Eye Opener'."

This drew a chorus of boos and jeers from Conservative ranks, and as soon as Mr. Hepburn could make himself heard he commented:

"That this is the usual contribution some hon. members make during the whole session, and then they go home and tell their constituents how hard they are working."

During this period in the House of Commons, Hon. Earl Rowe, now Conservative leader in Ontario, was also a comparatively obscure backbencher in the House. Oddly enough, there was a remarkable similarity in the rough and ready eloquence of the two, and Mr. Rowe's style of speaking after themselves when the heckling became fierce.

I recall one speech of Earl Rowe's that was a revelation. Up to then I had thought of him as a pleasant private member of no great oratorical accomplishments. He was speaking on the Ottawa trade agreements, and some of his remarks provoked a veritable storm of interruption and objection. It was a test of parliamentary skill and nerve that Earl Rowe came through it with colors flying, and with more effective with every backer vanquished. It showed what he could do on the stump, once he was thoroughly warmed up and over since that exhibition in the House those who heard him from the Galleries have had a good deal more respect for Mr. Rowe's campaigning abilities. Perhaps neither Hepburn nor Rowe touch the highest levels of political oratory, but for mass popular appeal, they are hard to beat.

The water works company has arrived at a very interesting part of the work—the laying of the suction pipe at the pump house. There are 30 inches in diameter and reaches out 1,800 feet into the bay. Buoys mark the direction it is to be laid. Each section of pipe used for this purpose weighs a ton.

Mr. W. J. Brown, who has succeeded to the management of No. 1 fire steamer, is spoken of by foreman James F. Wilson as being as good a man as Fire Chief Campbell could have selected. Besides being fireman on the engine for three years, he is one of the oldest members of Madra hose company and has a record as a careful, and industrious man.

Mr. D. C. Strong, son of Col. Strong, U.S. Consul at Belleville, has been given charge of a new consular agency opened at Trenton. The Trenton people will find Mr. Strong courteous and agreeable.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

Meet "General Donald"
. . . an Army of Thousands
. . . Obeys his Commands!

As little Denny Watson talks to his Aunt Mary 200 miles away, he is using a service that employs an army of thousands of men and women in pleasant and profitable employment, eager to serve the communication needs of a nation.

Even as most of us forget that the purpose of Labour Day is to honour the working man, we forget also how much scientific advance has lightened his load and created new and more agreeable occupations.

In making man's work easier, the telephone is playing a tremendously important part. It is no exaggeration to say that thousands of Telephone people are employed in congenial employment—immeasurably better employment—than were all of them if old, cumbersome modes of communication were still in use. And so are we all . . . to whom telephone service has become an accepted everyday convenience.

LABOUR DAY, MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 6th

Recent rate reductions saving telephone users $600,000 annually mean wider use and greater value to each subscriber.

Thursday, Music Day

Although I am writing these lines on Thursday, I must explain that my Exhibition observations were interrupted due to the necessity of my return to Belleville for school opening day, yesterday, as it is our biggest day for the year, and as many as possible are only called into service at that time.

Before leaving the "Ex" grounds last Tuesday, I saw the beginning of the men's ten miles' swimming race which began at two o'clock. Thousands stood along the waterfront and saw them pass and repass inside the breakwater, and then ether the lake beyond. Weather conditions were perfect with the water 72 degrees and the water surface as smooth as glass.

Seventy-three men plunged into the water at the crack of the pistol and as usual three soon began to speed away from the rest. It was a wonderful sight to see so many arms rise, rhythmically into the air like the paddle wheels of a Mississippi steamer. It reminded me also of a mid-Atlantic scene, when herds of porpoise at play rise repeatedly above the surface of the ocean, and then immediately disappear.

When I left the grounds to take a four o'clock train for Belleville, Billy Nokes of Chelsea, Mass., was leading away with two others about fifty yards behind. On my return to the grounds Thursday morning, I learned that Frank Pritchard, Buffalo, N.Y., won first place in four hours, twenty-two minutes and seventeen seconds. In the same had been a similar five mile race and fifteen mile race, but never before a ten mile race, and hence no comparison as to records can be made. The first prize was twenty-five hundred dollars.

William Nokes, Chelsea, Mass., won the second prize of seven hundred and fifty dollars.

There were eight other lesser prizes gradually diminishing to the lowest which was fifty dollars. The number and value of the prizes were intended to induce as many as possible to enter the competition. In former years this feature was sponsored by a Toronto firm, but this year the burden fell on the finances of the Canadian National Exhibition. The interest continues to be very great.

The women's three mile swim takes place this (Thursday) afternoon at six and will be fully reported by me to-morrow.

STREET CAR INQUIRIES

"Which way to this here Fair?" shouted an elderly gentleman as he boarded a street car this morning.

"In all seconds on what entrance you want, Eastern Gate, Western Gate, Dominion Gate or holes under the fences," replied the car driver with a twinkle in his eye.

"Cut my corn, but it must be an overly big place to have so many ways to get in!" exclaimed the Fair's visitor in the midst of much hilarity and cheering.

"Two miles from end to end," continued the official to the great amusement of those within hearing distance.

"Any hogs? That's my ambition."

"Plenty and more going in all the time. Just take a seat and your ambition will be satisfied in a few minutes," and then the car rattled along and the visitor smiled no doubt from pleasant anticipations.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS

The serious outbreak of the much feared infantile paralysis in Toronto has affected the attendance at the Fair. It was particularly noticeable on children's day, and also to some extent, every other day. As this contagious disease cripples for life not only children, but older people in the age of thirty, it is little wonder that the present situation causes widespread alarm. The writer knows a beautiful little girl in Belleville who will never walk and play again. He has also seen President Roosevelt supported and assisted in his movements for that great man is similarly afflicted.

HOTTEST AUGUST

We have been informed at the "Ex" that August of 1937 has been the hottest in one hundred years, and there is not a person to be found who thinks it. It has been ninety or more every day on the grounds here, and it really seems much hotter. I never suffered so much with the heat in Bermuda, Florida or Southern California because there was always a delightful cool breeze from the ocean.

MONEY

Everywhere we go in this world, we find every one seeking and toiling for money. That is the chief impression you receive as you go around this great World Fair. A booth costs not less than one hundred dollars and another hundred for operating expenses per year, but most of them cost much more. This explains so much of the yelling and energy that is so evident. The primary object of a Fair is to advertise, and create profitable business. Some make it pay but some do not. Some careful observers have pointed out that this age can be distinguished from all others not for its supreme desire to make money, but for its inordinate desire to make MUCH money (more than is needed) and to make it very easily.

PHOTOGRAPHIC ART

This building is particularly interesting to those who use a camera. The exhibits surprise you in the possibilities of photography, even for amateurs. So many use their cameras at random without thought, study or planning with the result that the picture by mere chance may be good, bad or indifferent. A visit to the splendid display at the "Ex" will instruct all in that, and impress you deeply as follows:—

1. You will learn by careful practice and testing to focus your camera properly so that you can secure clear, well defined outlines. This is the basis of a good picture, but it is by no means all.

2. You will strive for the posing of all life to exhibit some predominant mood such as joy, sorrow, play or meditation. This applies to persons, animals and birds and also to some extent to landscape scenes for Nature has her moods too. True this may be accomplished by accident but such is not always the case.

3. You will learn to use the effects of light and shade, often from the bright light gradually to the deepest shadow. Light of the best pictures I saw had a high light on some part of the body, usually part of the head, and then this light little by little deepened into darker tones. The background usually had similar effects and the results, always so different, were very, very beautiful. I would recommend to amateur photographers that they study the pictures they take carefully for the principles mentioned, but very particularly for the last as our greatest artists give the effects of light and shade very careful attention often with startling results.

CAT SHOW

To-day I visited the thirty-sixth annual international cat show at this "Ex", and saw two hundred feline aristocrats from Canada and the United States. Each cat was securely imprisoned, and labelled, in a wire cage, and most of them never ceased to proclaim a protestation at their lack of freedom.

About half the exhibit consisted of the popular, long-haired, dominating, Persian in all the usual cat colors from white to black. The writer owned one of these (a Maltese Persian) for seven years, not as long ago, and it became such a tyrant that we had to send it to the country. Its favorite scheme was to walk to and fro over the piano keys during those still, sleepy hours of night, and to bring its four fifteen to sleep angrily on my feet. It had several other peculiarities equally objectionable. We have never liked anything from that time which savored of aristocracy or pedigree.

The other cats were chiefly of the commoner, well known varieties with the exception of half a dozen Siamese. These cats were not large, and were of a slightly dirty white color, with black ears, nose and tip of tail. They are said to be so affectionate that they do not thrive without much care and petting.

Various inquiries revealed the fact that the owners, middle aged women, asked from ten to fifty dollars for their cats about a year old. The variation in price depended on the ability to win prizes.

These cats were carefully washed and combed, fed on six cubic cubes and had the best food that science can produce for their welfare. Thousands of children in Toronto do not receive anything like this care and attention, and they are worth much more to Canada than fifty dollars each.

OLD CARS

Automobile manufacturers at the "Ex" are lamenting the fact that nearly half the cars in use in Canada to-day are six years old, and hence unfitted for the scrap heap. They even suggest that they constitute a dangerous highway hazard.

BELLEVILLE CHAMPIONSHIP

In the agricultural society section the Belleville Agricultural Society won second place in the grain and seed championship contest.

A THOUSAND PRIZES

Yesterday (Wednesday) was merchants' day, and the chief event was the awarding of a thousand prizes in the Foods Product Building. As you entered the building you were given a ticket with a number stamped on it. Then you went from booth to booth until it was recognized, taken up, and you received your prize which consisted of some merchandise handled by the booth concerned. Many of the prizes were articles of considerable advertised value, and hence as might be expected the "Treasure Hunt" as it was called was eagerly contested.

In order to secure equality of opportunity to the hundreds of booth holders in the Food Building, the regulations allowed eight prizes to every twelve feet of frontage. Every exhibitor in the Building went to the limit in this Treasure Hunt. Human nature is pleased to receive something for free nothing.

Best wishes to all.

History of 'Cedar' School
MADOC S. S. 4.

Previous to the erection of the present frame building of S. S. 4, Madoc, the pupils attended school in an old log building having a cedar roof. It was built of fresh cedar logs, from which it derived its name, Cedar School. As near as can be learned it was constructed about one hundred years ago, in 1837.

The children sat on long benches, which were placed around the sides of the room. An extra bench was placed in front of these for the little ones. Near the front were two or three rough seats on which the older pupils sat when special exercises were given. The pupils received instruction in reading, writing and arithmetic under the supervision of the awful birch rod.

Heat was furnished by means of a big box stove in the centre of the room. There was no enclosure around the school grounds, at this time.

Religious services were held in the school by Mr. Childerhose of Cooper and Mr. Marsh of Madoc.

The first trustees of the old log school were Mr. Coleman Harris and Mr. Philip Glover. At this time the teacher's salary amounted to $75-$100 and the teachers boarded around, spending a week or two with each family in the settlement. Every family brought a cord of wood to keep up the supply of fuel.

The first teachers in the old school were: Mary Ann Barry (who was fourteen when she took the school), had a first class certificate, obtained at Belleville); Wm. Kirk of Tweed, Mr. Pollock.

The first pioneer settler of this section was James Broad who came from England in 1831. Some of the early settlers were: Peter Young, Patrick Kirk (Irish); George Smith; Alex McKinnon; Donald McKinnon; Frederick McKinnon (Scotch); Coleman Harris (Dutch); Mrs. Frets (Dutch); Patrick Kincaid; R. T. Ferguson; John Love; Jas. McCaw; Frank Trotter; Irwin Love; John Reid; Alex Reid; John Eagleson; Benjamin Ewaits; Rufus Palmer; Philip Glover; Wm. Ward.

The present building was constructed in 1868 by Mr. Coleman Harris (as far as available records show). A picket fence enclosed the school ground, which was later replaced by a board fence in which the boards ran lengthwise. The posts were cut on an outward slant on top and a narrow board placed on top of this. This formed a favorite seat for the pupils and a rare treat for the more daring. Even the girls made use of it, this way, when the snow banks insured no broken bones.

—TOY NOW

Life has changed glamorously during the past few months for members of the Fare family, because Tommy Farr learned to use his fists as a lad in the mining villages of Merthyr Tydfil, Wales. His sister, Phyllis Evan and his sister Sally, have been installed in Farr's new home at Slough. Money earned in Farr's championship fight against Joe Louis in New York will go far toward keeping his sister Phyllis, the eldest of the family, who "mothered" her orphaned brother and sisters in Tumpanah. She is the hostess at Tommy's new home and is pictured here.

Over the fence, east of the school house was a little grave yard of two plots. This was enclosed by a picket fence.

The school at this time had no porch. Inside was a bench, fastened to the wall all around the classroom. The water pail was placed on this bench, just inside the door and the pupils' dinner pails along it at the back of the room. The pupils sat on the side benches except at such times when public examinations were held, when this bench was reserved for the public. (This examination was held each year at mid-summer). There were two rows of seats up the centre of the room with a narrow aisle between. These seats were not stationary and were moved about by the children at will, being an aid in many of their games.

Extending the full length of the front of the room was a high platform on which stood a high pupils' desk. This desk was closed in on three sides and many a culprit spent an uncomfortable half hour or so in this little prison, close to the master's hand. A bench fastened to the wall served as a chair for the teacher.

A great box stove, The Rambler, furnished heat for the room. This was replaced in 1922 by a new stove. There were no pictures but the school was supplied with three or four good maps that hung between the windows on both sides of the room. In the front of the class room were two blackboards that stood out from the wall. These blackboards were replaced by two painted boards in the front and four smaller ones on the side walls between the windows. In 1923 two slate boards were purchased for the front of the room and in 1936 two more for the side walls.

In 1900 the board purchased twenty new seats, which are in use at the present time. In 1907 a set of scales, pointers, measuring capasity, clock ($4.00) and cupboard ($3.50) were purchased. Up to this time the school had been without a clock. The cupboard has been used as a library since that date and books added from year to year and

Department of Health of Ontario

"INFANTILE PARALYSIS"
(POLIOMYELITIS)

The Department of Health has a sufficient supply of Convalescent Serum for present demands. This serum is obtained from persons who have previously suffered from an attack of "infantile paralysis".

In anticipation of further requirements the Department now requests that persons who are willing to provide blood for this purpose (donors) register with the medical officer of health in their district.

The Department remunerates donors on the basis of Ten Dollars for 100 cubic centimeters; the usual amount withdrawn from one donor is 200 cubic centimeters. This can be readily obtained without discomfort or ill effects to the donor.

Children under fourteen years of age are not eligible. Persons who have suffered an attack of the disease during the present year are also not eligible. Those persons fourteen years of age and over who have suffered an attack within the past twenty-five years and who show some definite evidence of resulting paralysis, are requested to provide the medical officer of health with their name and address.

Those who have already acted as donors need not register again.

When a clinic is to be held, donors will be notified through their medical officer of health.

Weddings

TURNBULL—KENNEDY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Kennedy, Pine Street, was the scene of an interesting wedding at five o'clock this afternoon, when their daughter, Helen Frances, became the bride of Mr. Howard Douglas Turnbull, son of Mrs. Turnbull and the late John M. Turnbull of Montreal. The Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, officiated.

The rooms were very prettily decorated with gladioli and garden flowers. Wedding music was played by Mrs. J. F. Houston. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of beige Chantilly lace over beige taffeta. The gown was made in basque effect and the full skirt ended in a graceful train. A matching beige turban with shoulder length veil and brown accessories were worn. The bride's bouquet was of Johnson Hill roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Hazle Kindree, cousin of the bridesmaid and wore pale blue net and sheer lace over taffeta, with short sleeves and matching accessories. She carried deep pink roses and blue delphiniums.

Little Miss Adele Turnbull, niece of the groom, was flower girl and wore a pastel floral organdie frock with taffeta with matching poke bonnet and carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Master Tommy Collyer, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer and a white suit, was train bearer.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served. Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the bride, in navy blue sheer with corsage of Talisman roses and Mrs. Turnbull mother of the groom, attired in navy blue sheer with corsage of red roses, received with the bride and groom.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Turnbull left on a wedding trip to Atlantic City and Washington, the bride choosing for travelling a navy blue wool suit with navy hat and navy gray topcoat.

Upon their return they will reside in Montreal.

MORAN—O'CONNOR

Trenton, Sept. 4.—(Special)—This morning at 9.00 o'clock St. Mary's Cathedral was the scene of a pretty wedding when Olive Josephine, daughter of Mrs. O'Connor and the late Michael B. O'Connor, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Moran, son of Detroit, Mich. Very Rev. J. J. O'Reilly performed the ceremony and the Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Rev. J. O'Neill with Rev. G. J. Hanley of Toronto in the deacon's ary. The guest pews, were distinguished with knots of garden blooms. The sweet voiced children's choir sang during the Mass.

The bride given in marriage by her mother, wore an exquisite gown of white suede lace over heirloom satin. The gown was nurely fashioned with long button-ed sleeves and a detachable cour-tesan veil fell in graceful folds from a coronet of orange blossoms to completely cover the long train. She carried a shower bouquet of Butterfly roses and bouvardia.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Howard E. Chase, as matron of honour, who wore a charming frock of printed taffeta with sheer redingote and accessories of Dorothy blue while Miss Kathleen O'Connor as bridesmaid was in gold printed taffeta with chasuble brown accessories. They carried frilled nosegays of corn flowers. Mr. William Moran of Covington, brother of the groom was best man and Mr. Francis Long was usher.

A reception and buffet wedding breakfast followed at the bride's home. The rooms were brightly decorated with autumn flowers. Receiving with the brides party were Mrs. O'Connor, who was gowned in black transparent velvet with matching hat and shoes and wore a shoulder bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley, and the groom's sister, Mrs. Rose VanHarlemore of Detroit, attired in black velvet.

For travelling the bride wore a smart angora suit of hobnspun red with accessories of cinnamon brown and brown wool coat. After a motor trip through Western Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Moran will reside in Detroit.

SPAFFORD—RYAN

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Timmerman, 11 Alexander Street, uncle and aunt of the bride, a lovely Autumn wedding took place at noon today, when Miss Helen Jeanette Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bell, was united in marriage to Mr. John Webster Spafford, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Spafford.

Gladioli and fern were used in the decoration of the home and the ceremony took place before a mass of the colorful blossoms. Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in her gown of bridal white marquisette, with tulle shadow veil, caught to her dark hair with orange blossoms. She carried Butterfly roses.

Miss Marjorie McLean, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a pretty frock of yellow net. Her bouquet was of Talisman roses and blue lace flower.

Mr. Warren Spafford, brother of the groom, was groomsman. Mrs. Fred S. Farrell played wedding music and was soloist during the signing of the register.

A buffet lunch was served after the ceremony. Mrs. Bell, mother of the bride, wearing navy blue crepe with corsage of roses, and Mrs. Spafford, mother of the groom, in navy blue chiffon with corsage of pink roses, and Mrs. Timmerman, attired in white with corsage of American Beauty roses, received with the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Spafford left on a wedding trip to Chicago, the bride's travelling costume being of thistle crepe with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

PRESENTATION TO WHITE LAKE COUPLE

On Monday evening, August 30th, the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. R. Grant Coulter met in the White Lake Church for a social evening together, before their departure from Crookston, Ontario. The pastor, Rev. Lackey, acted as chairman, and read the following address:

White Lake,
August 30, 1937.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Coulter

The sympathy of our community went out to you in the destruction by fire of your property and it is with regret that we learn of your intended departure from our midst.

Your store at Crookston has been a great asset to the community and your kind sympathy and characteristic interest in all matters would long be remembered.

The White Lake Church and its various organizations greatly value your loyal support and interest. Your generous liberality in the various activities of the life of the church has been a help of permanence, partly perhaps, because of the cost to yourself at a time when money was scarce.

It is our hope that the friendships you have established here will remain unbroken and that in your new home you will all enjoy health and happiness. We would like to express in a tangible way our appreciation of your sojourn with us and we hope you will accept the enclosed as an indication of that appreciation.

From your Friends and Neighbors.
Mrs. Will French
Mrs. Harry Mullett.

After Mr. and Mrs. Coulter voiced their appreciation for the many acts of kindness shown to them in their recent fire, Mr. H. M. Mullett, Mr. Wm. Ward Holland expressed, on behalf of the church and congregation, their regrets on their departure from Crookston. A musical programme was then enjoyed, being rendered by Mrs. R. Haggerty, Mr. Leslie Blakely, Glen Haggerty, Misses Goslie and Dorothy Radnor. Lunch was served.

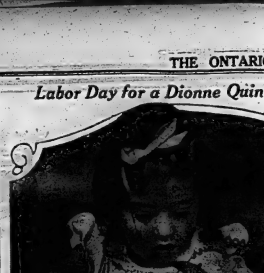
LONSDALE

Lonsdale—The whistle of the threshing machine is heard on every side in some places the grain has not turned out as well as expected.

School has re-opened with the former teacher, Mr. Masters in charge.

Mr. Alvin McRae who underwent a recent operation in Belleville General Hospital came through successfully and all wish for him a speedy recovery.

Misses Bobby and Franklin McCullough, Whitby, arrived at their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCullough on Thursday evening and will visit other relatives and friends in this community for a week or more.



Miss Bernice Dowdle spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Dowdle.

Miss Lena McCullough is also enjoying some holidays with her mother and brother, Mrs. Mitchell McCullough and J. M. McCullough.

Dr. Robert McQuay and Mrs. McQuay, Whitby, made a few calls in this community on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack McRae and Mrs. Will McRae and Mr. Norman Whiteman motored to Kingston on Labor Day to visit friends.

Don't Leave Lessons for Child But Have an Interest in Them

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Henry didn't mind school. It wasn't hard to study there since everybody was studying. Although not naturally a studious type, Henry even managed to work up a little enthusiasm for his subjects at school.

Back at home it was different. He didn't feel like studying at home. No one else was studying. No one else was interested. Father didn't believe in children being helped with their homework. Mother said: "Gracious, Henry, you're way beyond me" and Henry could tell by the tone of her voice, and the quick way she went on to something else, that she wasn't really interested in lessons, or didn't consider them important.

Without putting it into words, or even into clarified thought, Henry resented his parents' lack of interest in his school activities. It hurt him, dulled his enthusiasm and his ambition. Why should he work so hard when his parents were so indifferent to what he was doing? Father never even asked whether he was studying. Mother took tes on Sunday evening with Mrs. McCullough.

Mrs. Alma Glass has returned to Napanee after spending a week with Mrs. Frank McCullough.

Messrs. Murray, Donald and Joe Stuart have returned home to Toronto after enjoying two weeks with friends in this district.

Mrs. Kathleen McCullough spent five days last week with Miss Thelma Meiborn, Napanee.

Quite a few attended the service held in St. Jude's Church, Kingsford, on Sunday evening.

Shirley Temple has Alice Faye to hi-de-ho with and Jack Haley to tap-a-tee with in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" at the Capitol Sunday Monday and Tuesday.

Why Use A "Sissy" Laxative?

Chronic constipation has to do with the colon or large intestine. Unless the large bowel is thoroughly emptied from time to time you become a victim of chronic constipation and the poisoning of the system which results in colitis or other serious diseases.

Mild or "sissy" laxatives merely cause a movement of the bowels without effecting a thorough cleaning out of the colon or large bowel. For this reason you are misled into thinking that you are doing all you can to overcome a constipated and poisoned condition of the system.

Those who know Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appreciate the value of a real medicine which not only effects a thorough cleansing of the colon or large bowel but also arouses the liver and kidneys to activity in filtering poisons from the blood.

Once you have proven the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will never return to the use of "sissy" laxatives. Used regularly once a week this medicine ensures pure blood and freedom from constipation and the pains, aches and serious diseases which accompany it.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 35 cts. at all druggists or from Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co. Limited, Oakville, Canada.

THE SCHOOL MEDICAL AND DENTAL EXAMINATION

You may be sending a youngster to school for the first time and are surprised, perhaps annoyed, when you receive a report from the school physician and dentist that various defects have been found—adenoids, infected tonsils, some cavities in the teeth or even a root infection. There may also be a notice that there is a curvature of the spine that should receive attention.

Now your first reaction should be one of gratitude that a competent physician and dentist have been employed to safeguard the health of your child; and that of the taxes collected for street, road, and other community improvements it has been thought advisable to use some of the money to "improve" the health and physique of a more precious asset — the children's health.

Your first duty therefore is to have your youngster overhauled by the family physician and dentist. If further advice is needed authorities will see that the youngster gets the best advice and medical attention necessary.

There are some parents who object to having their youngsters' clothing removed during the examination. While this can be understood to some extent in the case of little girls, it is hard to understand why parents should not allow a boy to remove his clothes for examination just as he would to go swimming or bathing.

If parents could realize that the removal of the clothing enables the physician to see whether or not the spine is straight, the shape of the chest (perhaps not getting sufficient breath in proportion to the size and immobility of baby chest), they would certainly not object to the removal of the clothing.

Further, a proper or complete examination of the chest, heart and lungs—cannot be made without the removal of all the clothing from the upper part of the body. The spine just beginning to curve, a heart that needs a play or exercise, an early or beginning tuberculosis, cannot always be detected unless the clothing is removed. Should any of these go undetected the parent is to blame.

I therefore believe it is only fair to the school health authorities that the youngsters' parents should be reminded of their duty to their children at this critical age.

Grace Needed More Than Curves

Alice Faye

She knows that grace is more important than weight

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Let a girl read a table of weights and measurements and does she have fun! For some odd yet exact measure, there is a checking up. If she does not qualify according to a board Hoyle, she should not have fits or shed tears.

There can be no standard weights and measurements because of the bony framework, which may be large or small. There are plump darlings with pretty figures, slim ladies who may be underweight yet are attractive because they carry their clothes beautifully.

The important things are to feel well and to move gracefully. For a girl who is five pounds overweight to go on a starvation diet is nonsense. Those extra five pounds may be responsible for her charming appearance. It is gratifying that reducing isn't the only fascinating that it used to be. Fashion demands some curves and a girl can sit down to their three squares a day and enjoy them greatly.

When a scar is freshly made against nightly with ointment or lotion. Whether this helps or not will depend destroyed. If the scar is deep, of long standing, no ointment will have any effect. By means of plastic surgery it can be established. While seeking treatment of that character, know your operator. He should be a medical man of good standing.

Should Husbands and Wives Take Vacations Even Each Other?

Holidays away from home—what do you think about them?

Does the everlasting dullness of domesticity get on your nerves? For the sake of a change, you'll take it for granted that you're absolutely entitled to your husband or wife, as the case may be. Nevertheless, isn't it a good thing to get away from the monotony, even for a little vacation.

Any report from a daily routine is to be welcomed, whether it's from home, business, a profession or the kitchen stove. Even the sun requires release from the yoke.

A great many people don't even write to this column and say that they need a vacation, but that they can't afford to take one. And then expand and tell about the domestic or business problems opposite to days of the year, wear endurance thin. Perhaps vacations at home might be arranged if husbands or wives will forego those little habits which have developed in their presence exasperating.

Mr. X. always loves his wife, but that it drives him crazy to see her smear her face with cold cream every night. He does not object to the use of cold cream, but in Heaven's name why doesn't Mrs. X. take it to the bathroom where there's a good mirror, lock the door, apply it and throw away the wrapping paper? Mr. X. is beginning to be interested in a lady whose beautifying processes he does not see.

Mrs. Y. cannot bear to hear her husband eat soup. And he's a great soup-eater. His has it every night for dinner. And she says he eats every spoonful so it sounds like the last plop of water running out of the bath-tub. She has reminded him of this gently and he has flown into a rage.

Mr. Z. hates to have the entire clan of his relatives descend on them for Sunday dinner. He doesn't begrudge the food, but it's more than that, and their conversational line drives him to despair. He plays golf, fishes, motors with his wife, as he is so exhausted with business during the week that he doesn't like to talk at dinner.

Mrs. W. says that her husband does not know how to wash his hands; that he really washes them on the towel, and not enthusiastically. She wonders if any man knows how to wash his hands and face. She has tried to loosen the dirt with soap, grab the nearest towel, and then push them into a nice bathroom, and is discouraged over the appearance and the bride always repeats.

Mrs. W. also does not like the way her husband eats his meals. She's English, and wants an egg eaten from an egg cup, not broken, scooped and spilled all over the tablecloth.

These crumpled rose leaves of domesticity aren't serious, but repeated day after day they appear like a burden.

In marriage it's the fundamentals that count—the way a man provides for his wife, the kind and tender things that he does for her, the way he washes his hands or eats his soup. And women nag—but oh, the pity of it!— because they're over-conscientious in regard to their husbands.

A week away from faulty handwashing, visible cold cream smearing, noisy soup-eating, may work miracles. And again, being reminded of these things in print may cause domestic reforms.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CURING THE "LINE"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

This is from two male readers of your column. My chum and I are often confronted with the question of whether a girl should talk of another boy she has been out with while in the presence of another escort. My girl friend and I have been going together since last winter. I think she is true to my own people—the nicest person in the world, but invariably when my chum goes with my girl friend's sister, the sister starts talking about boys she has been out with. Naturally my girl friend starts talking on the same subject, and it leaves my chum and me without anything to talk about, and we feel we should be as just two dummies, and our company is not worthwhile. Please tell us what to do.

Male Readers

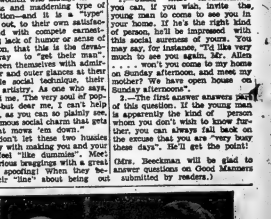
It's a queer kink in the female brain, dear sirs, especially the young female mind, to do a generous bit of bragging about sentimental conquests. (But I don't mean that it is normally limited to the young female mind!) The girls or women who indulge in this unconscious and unbecoming type of conversation—and it is a "type" figure out, to their own satisfaction, and with compete earnestness and lack of humor or sense of the ridiculous, that the revealing way to "get their man." They preen themselves with admiring inner and outer glances at their admirable social technique, their subtle artistry. As one who says, "Look at me, The very soul of poppycock—believe me, I can't help it. It is, as you can so plainly see, my enormous social charm that gets 'em, that mows 'em down."

Now don't let these two husiles get away with making you and your friend feel "like dummies". Meet their serious brag ings with a great deal of spoofing! When they begin their "line" about being out with Bill Jones, tell them how proud you were last Tuesday when Greta Garbo asked you to take her to a dance, or when Myrna Loy was late returning to the lot because she couldn't bear to tear herself away from your scraping company. And, for good measure, you might add a couple of engagements with Miss Whosedoop, or whoever is your city's most popular debutante. Those two young ladies will soon quiet down to talking about things that interest all four of you pleasant young people. Don't stop the spoofing until they do!

New Acquaintance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—If a girl meets a very nice young man at a dance or at any other social activity, and he asks her to go out, she doesn't feel as though she knows him well enough to accept his invitation, what would be the proper thing to answer in order not to hurt his feelings?



2.—What would be the proper way to say to anyone who asks a girl to go out, whether he is nice or not?

Uncertain

1.—Under these circumstances you can, if you wish, invite the young man to come to see you in your home. If he's the right kind of person, he'll be impressed with this social sureness of yours. You may say, for instance, "I'd like very much to see you again, Mr. Allen . . . won't you come to my home on Sunday afternoon, and meet my mother? We have open house on Sunday afternoons."

2.—The first answer answers part of this question. If the young man is apparently the kind of person whom you don't wish to know further, you can always fall back on the excuse that you are "very busy these days." He'll get the point!

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Build Sense Of Wrong, Right

(By LISA GRENELLE)

"Let your conscience be your guide." That admonition from the grandmother's sampler—quaint and stuffy, belonging to another period altogether.

We don't go in for consciences nowadays, do we? They don't fit into the modern pattern; they're too cramping. Has the modern girl or the modern young man a conscience? Surely they wouldn't be "bound" so old-fashioned. And while I if they had one, or to let it dictate to them?

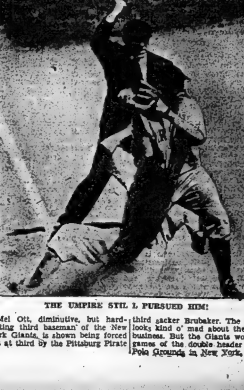
Let it dictate to them? Why, it rules them, just as conscience always has ruled the race of mankind, for better or for worse!

"For worse is it?" That sounds odd. The idea of a conscience ever leading one astray! But it can.

Conscience has the command-ment of God, or a still, small, necessarily ruthless dictator.

Our conscience is simply the teaching of our early childhood, hands up to the principles and prejudices of our parents and our educators. It is, then, a very unsafe sound or always noble. It is just as good or wise, as small and as prejudiced as was the point of view of our parents.

What about, what attitude, what negligence was it that brought; our neighbor wrath down upon us? What did they make us feel was wrong, what unworthy?



Let me tell you. In it

A child has no sense of right and wrong. He isn't born with a conscience. We give it to him and are responsible. And it's a serious responsibility. Shall children grow up, day, all of us are at least largely influenced by our consciences.

Are you giving your child a strong sense of guilt, a feeling that he is always in the wrong? If so, you are crushing him under the burden of a sense of guilt, of unworthiness which, tripping him up at every turn, must defeat him, make him hopeless in planting him for any constructive purpose.

On the other hand, you give your child a sense of guilt because he is sick, unduly sensitive or different in a way that he can't help, you are also doing him a grave injustice that will indeed be hard to life sense of inferiority which he can never hope to rectify entirely.

But if you make your child ashamed and in the wrong only when he deliberately and voluntarily has been cruel unfair or deceitful, then you are bequeathing to him a constructive conscience by which will not crush or confuse him, but which will join with his own reason in helping him to build and strengthen his character.

THE UMPIRE STIL I. PURSUED HIM!

Mel Ott, diminutive, but hard-hitting third baseman of the New York Giants, is shown being forced out at third by the Pittsburg Pirate third sacker Brubaker. The umpire looks kind o' mad about the whole business. But the Giants won both games of the double header at the Polo Grounds in New York.

Foul, bloody murder had been done,—for there on the boards lay a skeleton, bone-white and grinning horribly. The Great Detective gazed at it reflectively, picking specs off his trousers meanwhile.

"Poor sale," said an oily voice at his elbow.

The Great Detective's meditative air was shaken as Mr. Gordon Ponto of old Lewis, who owned the pawn shop.

"Poor sale," repeated the old man, "and you'll go a long ways before you find a better. Aunt Hortense gave seven dollars and ninety-five cents."

He rubbed his hands and cackled. The Great Detective sighed, and but never before had it lain in the slender curve so long a period. Usually Doc redeemed it before old Lewis had held it a week.

Lewis' luck did grow up to be a rich relative like Aunt Hortense, but then you can't pick and choose like she did with her bony fingers. Why, it was not the first time that it had sprained there, mule tethered to a no-old fellow's wrist, but never before had it lain in the same drawer so long a period. Usually Doc redeemed it before old Lewis had held it a week.

New York, Sept. 4 (CP)—Max Schmeling, signed for a second crack at Joe Louis, the negro heavyweight king he layoed in 12 rounds, started another trans-Atlantic jaunt home today and promoter Mike Jacobs' elimination tornamint' ideas to find a Louis challenger went into the discard.

The jolting German signed for the bout yesterday and will get his fight for championship next June—approximately two years from the time he knocked the Brown Bomber to sleep.

The contract signing came just when the heavyweight fight business, firmly in the control of Michael Jacobs, Louis' boxing czar with the store teeth, was taking on the general outline of a merry-go-round.

Jacobs had announced Schmeling, only recent heavy whose contract he lacked, could join with Tommy Farr, Max Baer, Jack Pastor and Jim Braddock in an elimination purney to decide Louis' next opponent.

But when Schmeling put the bust on Louis in June, 1936, former champion Max annexed Joe's place as No. 1 challenger for Braddock's crown and, even after the run-round that Max in the cold, cold Louis lifted the championship halo from Jersey Jim's head, Schmeling stood for "Louis or nothing."

Plans Not Named

Uncle Mike was behind the Braddock-Louis go that made the negro the champion last night in Chicago just as he was behind the Louis-Farr bout last week which robbed Schmeling of his scheduled bout against the courageous Welshman in London.

These were the Jacobs manoeuvres leading to yesterday's conference in Uncle Mike's chambers. Differences were eliminated and the June title fight lined up, all except the exact date and place, though it was agreed it will take place "somewhere in the United States in June."

For his part Schmeling gets 20 per cent of net receipts and a good chunk of radio and movie revenue.

Louis takes 40 per cent Under the contract Schmeling must not fight Farr, Braddock, Pastor, Baer or his brother, Buddy. Nor can he fight outside Germany except under the propositional banner of Jacobs.

Louis can fight only for Uncle Michael who announced no plans underway for Joe. However, should Louis lose his title in a line-up bout Jacobs guaranteed Schmeling a shot at Joe's successor, who would be jousting only under Mr. Jacobs' aegis.

And should Louis go down under the thunder of the Schmeling mittens, the German is bound to fight under Jacobs' promotion until Sept. 30, 1939.

All of which leaves Jacobs just as he was before—the czar of the heavyweight bones. His idea now is to wind up the elimination tournament to find an opponent for the Louis-Schmeling victor.

PETER CHILCOTT FAILS TO BREAK TRACK RECORD

Easily Wins Free-For-All But Only Paces Mile in 2.08

CHAPMAN WINS

Peter Chilcott, seven-year-old chestnut stallion, owned by Hon. Earl Rowe, easily won the Free-for-All in the closing day of the harness meet sponsored by the Belleville Fair but failed to break the track record set by Tom Gratton on Wednesday, although Clint Hodgins did team the big horse a mile in 2.06 in the last heat without a particle of opposition. Tom Gratton and Gratton Axworthy expected to give the chestnut a real race, did not start, the owners of Tom Gratton believing he had a tough race on Wednesday and another in Toronto next week did not think it is wise procedure to start, while Gratton Axworthy, in charge of Gid Litt, is partially laid up with a bad knee.

The Chilcott horse did not look impressive in his race on Friday and he will have to be more "alive" to take the free-for-allers into camp in Toronto. He made a standing break in the second heat, while in the third in his attempt to break the record he "rolled" considerably due probably to the soft footing that prevailed. Hodgins, however, had little trouble disposing of his opposition. Miss Worthy Widow the second best horse in the race. Catherine Gratton, owned by John Penny of this city, tired badly at the end of each heat after being up with the leaders in the early stages of the going. Each heat the horses finished in a bunch and the judges had a hard time placing them. They placed the first heat in 2.10½, the fastest heat in the race. Summary of the week the racing was excellent and the large crowds present on each day enjoyed the harness racing as still popular in this district.

ST. CYPRIANS TO TACKLE KIWANIS

Second Game of Junior Playdowns Here on Monday

Headed by their ace flinger, Lefty Mingo, the Toronto St. Cyprians journey inwards to the Belleville Fair Grounds, the home of the Kiwanis Juniors, Monday evening at 7 o'clock in second game of the Junior O.B.A.A. provincial semi-finals. The Wood-Gundy team of Toronto, who have been in the thick of the baseball battle every season, are the favorites to win the first game of the best-in-three series on the home lot by the score of 7-0 on Wednesday night.

Behind the eight-hit pitching of Mingo, Toronto's Cyprian Church kids were out-locked in Toronto but expect to reverse the tide in Belleville. The Cyprian kids on their own ballwick at the Don Dimaggio Lea Gerrard meeting. The game will doubtless develop into a pitching duel with Lefty Weeks, the local curve ball artist opposing Lefty Mingo, Toronto's international southpaw, who is heralded as of professional material.

Weeks, a second, the diminutive Consoul their catcher and Mooni at shortstop are the main cogs for the Wesley Hall team while the local swatsmiths must don their very best batting togs if they hope to solve the slants of Mingo. The Kiwanis juniors will be at full strength Monday and a large gallery of fans is expected.

BEING GROOMED FOR A BIG FIGHT

Before many more months have passed, Joe Louis, heavyweight champion of the world, will have plenty to worry about as far as his boxing crown is concerned. Latest reports are that another "white hope" in the person of Jimmy Adamick is rapidly coming to the fore. He is at present being groomed by Jack Kearns for a big fight. He has won his last 37 bouts by the knockout route. In his latest encounter he hit his opponent so hard he broke his jaw. Adamick is seen here in a fighting pose.

Giants' Lead Shaved More As Dodgers Win Slugfest; Yanks Steadily Lose Ground

Bob Feller Stops Gehrig And Company With Seven Hits

TIGERS WIN

Full Game Cut From Yankees Lead in America-

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Joe McCarthy is beginning to agree with Ripley's "believe it or not" slogan. He's now convinced that baseball is a game of inches.

Although the Yankees are hitting only .256 since the Goldrush caught up with them, it's largely due to the fact that the three big guns—Dimaggio, Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey—seem to be loaded with nothing more explosive than dry powder these days.

Cut Full Game

Rookie Ken Chase, whose chief previous claim to fame was based on a decision he earned over Bobby Feller, handed Gehrig and Company its third straight beating yesterday. He baffled Gehrig's heavy hitters, allowed only seven hits altogether, and finished on top 4-2. Since the Tigers trounced the White Sox, 4-3, this defeat cut a full game from the Yankee lead.

The big doings of the day, however, were staged at the Polo grounds. The Daffy Dodgers, never having so much fun as when they're pinning the donkey's tail on their long time feudists, really knocked the ears off the Giants, clubbing out 15 hits for a 15-7 victory. Since the Yanks were idle, the defeat shaved the Giants' lead to a bare half-game.

The Indians featured a nine-run eighth inning in waltzing the Athletics 13-3. The Bees put on a five-run spree in the 10th to take the Phillies 7-3, for Jim Turner's 16th pitching win. The Reds hag a seven-run fifth frame to take the Cardinals 9-1 in a night game.

Like the Cubs, the Pirates in the National League and the Red Sox and Athletics in the American had the day off.

3 TEAMS ENTER FOOTBALL LOOP IN EASTERN ONT.

Flyers, Signals And Local Gridders to Compete in League

SCHEDULE DRAWN

First Game to be Played in Belleville on September 22nd

Three teams definitely entered the Eastern Group No. 1 in the Intermediate ranks of the O.R.F.U. for rugby football clubs from this part of the province convened at the Queens Hotel last evening. Three clubs appeared in the fall classic in this district will be R.C.A.F., "Flyers", Belleville Rugby Club and the Royal Canadian Signals.

The playing schedule was adopted for the season, which with the opening game slated to be played in Belleville between the R.C.A.F., on Sept. 22nd, Mr. Harold Bailey, secretary of the O.R.F.U. and referee, championship meet meeting with his presence and assisted in the organization of the new group and also gave an educational talk to the gathering relative to the playing rules and regulations of the game. In his outlining of the rules Mr. Bailey clearly defined the more minute details of the game.

The league decided to adopt the point system in the matter of wins and ties, two points for a win being awarded for a win and one point, when a tie game is played. Mr. Bailey explained, that a new intermediate O.R.F.U. group has been formed this year, known as the intermediate "B" group. The club finishing first will compete in the provincial "A" playdowns, while the second placed club at the termination of the season intermediate will advance to the intermediate "B" playdowns.

Neutral Officials

Neutral officials will be employed throughout the playing season, a referee and umpire to be appointed by Secretary Bailey, to officiate in fixtials from within the group area. The headlineman will be appointed from among the home officials, but will not be permitted to play on the playing field, only the referee and umpire having such rights. The schedule issued by two clubs last night were—Belleville Collegiate Institute "Flyers" Second and Lester Shiels, R.C.A.F. —Flight-Lieut. Carr-Harris; Flight Lieut. R. C. Dunn; Flight Sergt. J. A. Collins and Sergt. C. E. McGuire. Clubs will be advised by their list directly to Mr. Bailey. All games will commence promptly at 7.30 p.m. daylight saving time.

The 1937 schedule adopted by teams composing group No. 1 in the O.R.F.U. will be as follows:

Sept. 22.— R.C.A.F. at Belleville.

Sept. 29—Belleville at R.C. Signals.

Oct. 6—R.C. Signals at R.C.A.F.

Oct. 13— R.C.A.F. at R.C. Signals.

Oct. 20—R. C. Signals at Belleville.

Oct. 27.—Belleville at R.C.A.F. Mr. Bailey assured the meeting he would endeavour to procure a trophy club for the group, possibly another Kingston team to work in conjunction with the R. C. Signals "Providing we get a fourth team. that club will assume your schedule and thus play home and away games. A club that happens to be idle," explained Mr. Bailey as he outlined the need of the use of a rugby football in good condition and the commencement of games at a fixed vertised time. Mr. Bailey's explanatory talk on the playing rules proved interesting and popular.

The delegates present included—"Flyers"—Squadron-Leader Thos. Lawrence; Flight Lieut. R. Signals —Lieut. Houston and Captain Locke Gagnon. The various clubs announced their club colors also.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Hon. Earl Rowe's great pacer Peter Chilcott failed to break the track record, although he won with ease, the 2.10 pace yesterday. Driver Clint Hodgins announced he would try to establish a new track record when he came out for the second heat, after winning the first heat in a field of four. The track attendants soaked the track too much before the second heat, but Hodgins started to drive Peter Chilcott out, but he broke just after rounding the bottom turn, but still won. In the last heat Hodgins really drove the big chestnut out. He led the field by nearly 150 yards at the finish, but only covered the mile in 2.08, one second over the track record of 2.07 established by Tom Gratton, at the Pine Ridge Stables on Wednesday. Incidentally in the first heat Peter Chilcott paced the half mile in exactly 1.02 1-2. Eight horses started yesterday in the 2.25 class and some spirited racing was seen. The Belleville fair is the last of the circuit, but some really good harness racing was seen to the satisfaction of the patrons.

Only three teams will be included in the new Eastern Ontario football group, the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery amalgamating with the Royal Canadian Signals to place one team in Kingston with Belleville and the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" being the other two clubs officially entered. Secretary Harold Bailey of the O.R.F.U. was present at last night's meeting and assured the new loop, every effort would be made to provide a fourth club, however. In the meantime the league drafted a schedule with the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" meeting the Belleville rugby team on the Fair Grounds to open the season on Sept. 22nd. Home and home games will be played with the team finishing first continuing in the intermediate O.R.F.U. playdowns and the second placed club continuing in the provincial "B" play-offs.

The local club drew a bye for Thanksgiving week and may endeavor to bring in a Toronto team for a Saturday game that day. Neutral officials were agreed upon, a splendid move towards securing the fall classic in the eyes of the patrons. A neutral referee and umpire will be employed while the headlineman will act as an assistant official, but will not be permitted to call plays on the field—another good suggestion made by Mr. Bailey. We understand Dr. Harry "Red" Battione has been engaged to coach the R. C. Signals along with Captain Brownley, former Bobcat mentor.

If the local Kiwanis kids can continue their wielding of potent bats against the Toronto St. Cyprians at the Fair Grounds on Monday morning, there should be no reason why a third and deciding game should not be needed. On paper with Lefty Mingo, Leo Gerrard and Bill Dickey—seem to be loaded- there always so much uncertainty—they look like a million dollars but the Kiwanis juniors have a band of heabees. Since they entered the Junior O.B.A.A. provincial semi-finals they have been playing consistent ball and it was only ill luck that kept them out of the win column right in Toronto.

Judging from the amount of enthusiasm shown about town a capacity crowd will welcome the two junior squads at the Fair Grounds Monday morning. It is a true day since Belleville has advanced a ball club to the O.B.A.A. semi-finals which, in itself is attracting interest. Monday's game will be a battle of southpaws with our own Lefty Weeks clashing with Lefty Mingo, heralded as the best junior moundsman to come out of the Queen City in many moons. Some really good baseball should be seen.

We may not have any motorcycle race in Belleville on Monday, but there will be plenty of entertainment for all. Starting with the Kiwanis-A. ball game in the morning there's the gala field day and aquatic regatta sponsored by the Belleville Yacht Club off Victoria Park that continues all day and culminates with a dance in the clubhouse at night. Then for those interested in lawn bowling, there is the annual district Scotch doubles slated for the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club.

Secretary Erick Baldree of the Yacht Club, informs us there is to be a complete programme of sports on Victoria Park, one of the features of our annual regatta this year will be the power boat races. The Picton Yacht Club is sending over a fleetlits of sailing boats, and one team in the power boats, while Trenton, Deseronto and Napanee will also be represented," added Skipper Baldree, as he reminded us that the annual "King" Rogers cup race is being held on Sunday. The "King" Rogers Cup was donated by the late William "King" Rogers as a challenge trophy to be raced for once annually as a handicap race.

The tennis club, that is affiliated with the Quinte Skating Club, situated on the corner of Bridge and Dufferin Ave., is branching out and will introduce floodlight tennis on their courts in the near future. So rapid has the growth of this club been that a inter-club tennis tournament taking in all surrounding tennis clubs is being organized by the new organization next Wednesday. A galaxy of tennis celebrities from the vicinity will compete for the fine collection of trophies that have been procured for the occasion. Incidentally the non-playing public are also invited to attend these court events and enjoy the day's fun.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Lorna drew in her breath sharply. So she's been stealing, was it? Well, she'd show her what for. Her voice rose. "This isn't like your usual portraits. Even if you thought Tony would pay a fair price for it, you must have known he never could show that to anyone as his wife. What's the idea?"

"That, ma chere," la Paule said, with a disagreeable quiet, "is what you in America call—none of your business." His cold light eyes were fixed on her with the hint of a threat.

"All right, then, don't tell me." Lorna, swung away. "I'll find out. And you'd better be nice to me, Henri. I'm not like your other women. I've taken a lot of this for you. You can't afford—" she said slowly, "to make so many of me."

La Paule smiled. "That is true, my little darling. But you—you have sat, as we French at, dans le sang—in the blood. You will always obey me—and so?" He stepped nearer, and with a gay cruelty turned her hand upward and kissed the palm. "And to be friends. It is wiser," he said. "I will be frank with you. I go to Paris next week. It is finis—finis—finished, between us." His fingers clipped an invisible thread.

"Oh, you can't—" Lorna cried frantically.

"Be reasonable," he'd argued, still gentle. "I cannot marry you. I have nothing. You cannot marry Tony now. And you have nothing."

"So you're going after them to Paris, leaving me here! You don't believe me. You think she's Tony's wife, and you watch me, you can get out of it." Lorna's small white face gashed across with the scarlet of lips turned sullen. "Well, I'll tell you really can't know me, Henri, if you think you can get away with that." Her hand flicked up in a wave that bade him and the studio an ironical farewell. The door slammed in her face almost his making any move.

It was later in the afternoon when she found Bertram Cotter planted moodily at one of the tables. His heavy good-looking face was flushed, his brown eyes sluggish. But he was sober.

Not a trace of emotion lingered now in Lorna's manner. Smooth as cream. Red hair and green eyes tumbled to metal.

"Lo, Bertie," she said carelessly, as if she hadn't expected to see him there.

"Lo," he answered ungraciously. She shouldered slimly beside him. "What's the matter with you?"

"You know damn well what's the matter."

She poised beside him with the vivid airiness of a bird. "I have my car outside, and I'd really like to talk to you, Bertie. You left your bag at the house last night," she went on. "I can drive you out for tonight. The Maradons are giving a party after dinner. If you'd like to go."

Bertram's ming flushed gloomily in the Social Register. "I'm serious. Might be fun. He was bored and sore, for he, too, had read the item about the Anthony Kayes sailing, and he felt somehow, somewhere Jane Curry had put something over on him. He swallowed his drink and packed himself in the roadster beside Lorna. In spite of his grumpiness, he had been impressed by the Howland house and the party.

Once they crossed the river, Lorna let the car fly along. There was no inviting glider to her as she drove nonchalantly, sloped behind her wheel.

"Hang it all, why did you make such a bull last night?" Bertram grumbled, till own conscience had not rested easy as to his share in last night's rumpus. Thank Heaven, he hadn't blurted all he knew. Lorna shrugged her shoulders, "I was half wild," she admitted.

"Right, you were," Bertram muttered viciously. "Well, you got what was coming to you. Your spookey wasn't worth a bean, but friend Tony's taking the gal off to Paris. Explain that away."

Lorna nosed in and out of a few tracks. "Light me a cig, you're slow tonight, Bertie—as the sun. "You know, darling," she said, "I have a terrible hunch myself for Paris. Even in July. Lots of places to go from there."

Bertram lit and handed her a cigarette. He wasn't contesting he'd never been slow.

"Quite a few of the crowd are sailing in the next few weeks," Lorna said carelessly. "We might make up a party." Feeling him out, this boy—Tony Fond du Lac with a checkbook.

He nibbled at the bait. "Make it for a week-end, and I'm on." He said with a fine air of worldliness. A squat dash over and back with Lorna and her friends. Not so bad. But trying that on Tony—well, well, funds were low.

Lorna's smile could be slow and sweet. Her perfume was heady as she leaned toward him. "We'd have fun," she said. Everything had clicked in her brain. Elsie Forrest with pots of money as chaperone, Bertram to give parties. And she'd manage to reach Tony somehow.

"I'll say we would." Bertram's eyes were brighter. This girl knew how to get round him. He could win his money back for a few more thousands. But he was unpleasantly conscious of her last letter, received this morning. The first time she had ever hinted of money troubles.

Lorna flung the half-smoked cigarette in the road. She must wangle this trip, money or no money. Yes, once in Paris— And her green eyes narrowed as she plotted and planned.

CHAPTER XXI
PARIS

Paris magic for Jane, with the incredible joy of feeling that Tony was beginning to care. More than that she did not question, but took what the gods gave, her arms flung out and her head in the sun. There came days like clear, quick bells making music that drowned out everything but this: new, this wonderful life. She was Mrs. Anthony Kaye, with every luxury at her command, and a man whose attractive looks and manner made women glance after her with envy. Far behind lay that violent night on the Normandy, when Tony had left her at dawn.

He had said later on: "Have no illusions, my dear. I have none. You're very sweet and lovely. But I'm not trusting women these days. This thing between us may last a week, a month, or forever. I promise nothing."

Jane heeded no such warning. With the same spirit she had gambled with fate, cutting herself off from the past, she accepted now the unfolding of her every wish. Each among shadows were people who had chained her to lies and intrigue, but for her the chain had broken. Only sometimes at night she awoke shivering to think of secrets still buried, and of those lies that formed her frail bridge to happiness. They, too, pressed through the dark—Lorna and Howland, who hated her, the Comte la Paule's oddly light, magnetic eyes, and Bertram Cotter, who alone knew her as Jane Curry of Fond du Lac. She defied them all, lying in the big balconied room of the Hotel Crillon, with Tony beside her, long-limbed and dark in satin.

"Dear C—, I love him so!" This thing between us may last a week, a month, or forever. I promise nothing."

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The huge, angry beast charged with all the fury of his kind, and it charged in deathly silence. Tarzan did not give an inch. Instead he took a firm stance. His muscles like hardened steel and swung it in a great circle that started low at his right side.

He timed the blow to the fraction of a second so that it met the leopard with its full momentum, backed by the strength of the ape-man's mighty thews. Full upon the beast's flat skull it fell, before the extended talons or bared fangs could claim their victim.

There was a sound of splintering wood and bone, the thud of the heavy body on the hard ground, then silence. Lord zaspad, hardly able to believe what he had seen. And the eyes at Woora's window were filled with a sudden fear—with fear, and evil cunning.

Now the ape-man moved cautiously in the direction of the window that opened into the room at Woora. Quickly the watching flyers crowded into the darkness. And the wily brain above those sinister eyes was busy with schemes to trap this bold intruder!

wine, dances and manners, we'll trot over to Italy." he said one evening during dinner at the Ostrer de Madrid in the Bois.

"You're making a tourist of me, my dear. I'll be writing postal cards home next." He smiled at her across the table. "It seems hard to imagine anyone quite so marvellously open to impressions." He toyed with his ash and sipped his Montrachet. "Whenever I think of it, I wonder if you weren't spun out of lilies and honey in some witch's garden, and translated to Paris in secret, where I found you. I don't believe you ever really escaped from there."

"I don't believe I ever did," Jane answered, but he had commanded up the very things she wished to forget, and she looked away from him.

humidity with which directions had to contend. The combating of extreme heat, the serious sickness scare in the Province, all mitigated against what might have been a record event.

This year's number of exhibits was probably the highest on record ranging all the way from heavy livestock to needle work in the Arts Building. One of the latter grandstand performances of the time was also presented for the entertainment of the public. A splendid and higher class of exhibits all along the line was commented upon by outside judges brought in for the purpose. It was evident from poultry to vegetables. Never have the exhibits of local dealers representing nationally known manufactured articles and products been shown to better advantage in the various buildings, and sales from the floor have been reported excellent during the four days from the automobile dealers to washing machine representatives alike. Refrigerators of the electric type this year were particularly popular in sales, while new radios also ran a close second.

Stock Stood Heat Well

Though the extreme heat did result in fatalities among sheep and swine—two pigs and one sheep succumbed to their pens during the hottest day, it was reported by Robert Mitchell, in charge of this division—livestock on the whole did not suffer owing to the care exercised by owners and vendors. Water was permitted from the taps and used freely during the hottest periods, with cold showers, misting, being given cold showers from the hose at frequent intervals. The largest entry list in years was noted in the livestock division.

Probably not in years has such keenness been manifested in horse racing as during the Fair just ended. This was due to the large number of entries in the various classes, and the excellence and well known merit of the various animals entered. The Fair will be known for the ease in which the local track record was broken twice by Tom Grafton, speedy London pacer who caused two miles in 2.07 flat on Wednesday afternoon.

Unnerved by Accident

It was a Fair unmarred by accident of regrettable nature, or any incident other than those fostered by good will on the part of those who managed and those who exhibited. An early procession and program program, each was carried out smoothly and evenly, concerning the effect that lay underneath. Even firemen of the local department whose job it is to guard the grounds and buildings entrusted to their care, and to take on the duties of uniting lost young ones with parents again, found their task in this direction a much easier one this year. Only on Children's Day, the first day of the Fair were they busy in this respect.

Officials of the Fair Board were still busy checking and rechecking the scores of details connected with the Exhibition, the task made impossible during the hurrying days of the Fair owing to the necessity of concentration in other directions. When final check is made, however, it is believed that this year's event, in the matter of attendance, and dollars and cents alone, will equal if not better previous attempts. As to the good will and benefit characterized and won this has been immeasurable.

DESERONTO

Deseronto—The Deseronto Public School reopened on Wednesday, September 1st, with two new teachers on the teaching staff. The teachers for the year are; Mr. Geo. Nobes, Principal; Miss Mae Hunt; Miss Ina Bowen; Miss E. Burley; Miss L. Warren and Miss K. Caulk.

Mr. and Mrs. Burke and Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Rochester returned home on Saturday after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sweazor.

Mr. Will Dowling of Rochester is visiting his brother Mr. Edmund Dowling, Deseronto Road.

Mrs. Margold and daughter Joyce have returned to their home here after spending the summer months at her mother's home in Fort William.

Sympathy is extended to Miss M. Stoddart in the loss of her sister Mrs. K. Douglas of Edmonton.

A well known and highly respected resident of Deseronto passed away in Kingston Hospital on Friday, August 27th, in the person of Dr. F. E. Curran in his 38th year. Surviving to mourn his loss are his widow and small daughter Joyce also his mother.

Dr. Curran was well known having practised dentistry here for a number of years and will be really missed throughout the district.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. D. Wells on Monday. Interment taking place in Verona.

Mrs. J. Dunn and daughter Miss Mary have returned home from visiting friends in Ottawa.

Mrs. Goode, who is ill, was taken to her son's home in Toronto on Tuesday.

Mr. Harry Berry of North Bay was in town owing to the death of his uncle, Mr. Thomas Maxwell.

Miss Hall of Montreal is visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clement have as their guests Dr. and Mrs. Fred Clement and children of Toledo, Ohio.

Miss Ruth Schell has been engaged as teacher for the coming year in Kingsford Public School.

The funeral of the late Thomas Maxwell, who passed away on Thursday, August 26th, in Kingston Hospital, was held on Sunday afternoon from his residence on Dundas Street and conducted by Rev. Craig of Demorestville.

Surviving are two sisters, Misses Isabella and Pamile Maxwell.

Mrs. Dorran of Oshawa was in town owing to the death of her son-in-law the late Dr. F.E. Curran.

Miss Lucille McAlpine of Marysville has been engaged as teacher in Trenton High School

POINT ANNE

Point Anne, Sept. 4.—Public school opened on Sept. 1 with the old staff of teachers in their places. A number of small new pupils started for the first time.

Congratulations to the Point Anne softball team on winning the Eastern Ontario championship by eliminating Gananoque in two straight games. The last win was due to the splendid work of Stan Laffman, pitcher, and he had good support in the field.

Mr. and Mrs. John Darlington and Mr. and Mrs. Max Darlington and children motored to Camden East on Sunday and spent the tea hour with Mrs. Effie Arnold of Roblin.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Law have moved to Belleville to make their future home also Mr. and Mrs. Patrick O'Shaughnessy and family.

Mr. Thomas Whalen left on Tuesday for the road camp at Gilmour after a two weeks' stay at his home here.

A number from here attended the Liberal rally at Madoc on Wednesday, Sept. 1.

Mrs. May Yates of Belleville is visiting her sister, Mrs. Edith Wilson.

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

Warily Tarzan scaled the wall to Woora's apartment. At the window he paused while his ears and nostrils searched the dark chamber. His ears heard the scuffling sound of sandaled feet and the faint closing of a door. His nostrils clearly caught the scent of Woora.

The ape-man pulled himself silently into the room. Crouching his cloth ready to strike, he stood listening. But no sound came to his ears, not even the sound of breathing, which his keen hearing could have detected.

He concluded that Woora had seen him coming, and that those first faint noises had been caused by the magician's hurried departure. Now he must be doubly on his guard. There were three rooms in the suite, besides the throne room. To which had Woora fled?

Tarzan came to a door. Noiselessly he opened it. Then he blundered! He advanced slowly. Suddenly he felt something beneath his feet—the cords laid upon the floor. Instantly, he was suspicious—the suspicion of a wild animal that senses a trap.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, Sept. 4 (CP)—Facing a wet-end prolonged by the Monday Labor Holiday, traders avoided the market today and the selected list were marked down to show minor losses for the groups except the industrials and the golds. Aggregate turnover was under 150,000 shares.

O'Brien fell back to 8.10 from a set of 25 cents. The market was a bit soft also for Dobi, Cons Pirate, Lamaque, Jellicoe and Gillies Lake. Buffalo-Ankerite 10¼ was off a fraction.

In the base metals Nickel provided a narrow decline and Normetal, Bulolo, Base Metal Cerdic and Noranda fell into line. Aldermac and Sherritt strengthened.

The industrials posted more gains than losses. C.P.R. weakened further to 15¼ on a light turnover. Brazilian was up slightly and Ford A dropped about a point. Other utilities recording minor gains included B. C. Power A, International Utilities B and Gen. Steel Wares.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Sept. 4. — (AP) Creeping advances of as much as a point or so in Steel and Specialties today punctuated one of the slowest stock market sessions in months.

Customers rooms in the commission house were thronged at times as most traders passed up the two-hour prolonged holiday to early start on the lengthy holiday. The ticker tape frequently was motionless. Transfers were around 1,000 shares.

Canadian shares moved irregularly. On the offside were Lake Shore Mines, Dome Mines and Canadian Pacific, while fractional gains were registered for Distillers Seagrams and International Nickel. Canada Dry's moved up slightly while Dominion Tar's were unchanged at 99.78 7-16 cents.

While stock issues were plentiful at the close, buyers were conspicuous by their absence, it was observed. Specialties displayed Umatilla Electric, Hudson, Anaconda, Kennecott, Canada Dry, Armstrong and Cork.

Capps Ore Development Proceeding Favorably

According to despatches received today from officials of Capps Gold Mine, in Arnprior, development work is proceeding with favorable results being obtained.

On the 210' level west of the number five shaft (Jane Vein), sawing on the south drift were $19.25, $12.70 on the north drift with one chanel sample across ten feet running $40.60. Highest sample was $78.00.

The vein has been drifted on 150 feet south in good ore. Ore face 10 feet with this ore still showing, on both sides. North drift, also, is in good ore.

Base and Precious Metals Results from Coyle Lake Group of

Eva Lake GOLD MINES

The combined base and precious metals discovery recently announced has now been methodically channel sampled. Commercial values have been obtained over an area 400 feet wide with 22.8 inches. We invite you to send for complete details of results and engineer's report.

In the face of the significant evidence being accumulated from the Company's operations in Beardmore and Coyle Lake, present market prices appear to underestimate the potentialities of this enterprise.

MARKET COMMENT

A prominent Montreal business man, in conversation with London trans-Atlantic telephone, gleaned the information that British bankers are more optimistic over the Far East situation and the tension there has eased. With reference to developments in the Mediterranean, no anxiety is felt in London. He was also informed that London brokers feel that the market has been oversold and that a sharp rebound is in early prospect. A similar opinion pervades in the local Street.

One security that is universally liked on the Street and for which higher prices are predicted, is Brazilian Traction.

Geog Results at Sladen Mal...is Sladen Malartic's last drill hole put down in a northerly direction, filed out on the eastern end of the property, has indicated further good widths of vein material. Located about 500 feet from the two holes drilled at the end of the campaign on the eastern boundary the new intersection cuts across 25 feet according to reliable advice.

It appears that the western ore in the area where the shaft is located has pitched out, the new eastern zone. Underground work has established the ore in the area as going as far as the Canadian Malartic boundary. Drives now being put out to the east on the bottom level have encountered favorable ore and it is what is known as the eastern orebody and the establishment of a mine of values still further east will give the company a very large area in which orebodies may be expected.

Hollinger

Hollinger Consolidated has produced and sold gold to the value of more than $1,200,000 every thirty days for the past year. Gulligher has produced approximately $19,700,000 during the eight months ended August 31st. The ore has averaged $8.80 per ton.

Canadiia

Canadiia Commodity Exchange has been formed to take over Canadian Commodity Exchange advise Financial Post, and will operate from the beginning of September in butter on a much larger scale now.

Hiram Walker

Recent buying in the United States has led Hiram Walker, Gooderham & Worts Limited to consolidate their interests south of the border. This step may be the forerunner of a further merger of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Company might be absorbed completely.

POLICE BLOTTER

Gilbert Pearce, Roslin, was forced to ride his bicycle home without one light after the only light went out last night. Young Pearce rode from Bayside Belleville to attend the theatre, leaving the bicycle parked at the upper end of Front Street. Upon his return from the theatre, however, he found the saddle of his bicycle missing. He had informed the police before commencing his return home to locate the machine without a seat beneath him. An old pillow was tied to the rear of the frame and used in lieu of the seat for the time being, however.

C. J. Aris, Trenton motorist, was apprehended driving his automobile at an excessive rate of speed at the close, last night. The matter is still being investigated by police.

Fender and rear bumper damage resulted, when two motor cars accidentally collided at the Bridge and Front Streets, intersection early last evening. William McEwan, 15 Albion Street, was driving easterly on Bridge Street, when attempting a left hand turn at the Front Street intersection his car collided with a westbound car driven by Gordon Tindall, 128 Victoria Ave., causing the rear fender and rear bumper of Mr. Traill's vehicle. The matter of damages was amicably settled between the parties upon the arrival of P. C. Thomson while no charges were deemed necessary.

Local police were asked to assist in the recovery of a girl, who police were told was Thelma Brant, 15 years of age, reading—at 13 Pounds—last night. The girl was reported missing last night, but apparently has since been safely, as police received no subsequent complaints in this regard.

BELLEVILLE BAND TO HOLD CONCERT

Spectators Can be Comfortably Seated in Grandstand

Belleville Fair will unofficially pass out of the 1937 picture on Sunday night at 8.30, when the Belleville Municipal Band under the direction of Lieut. Bandmaster Fred Johnson, will render another of the popular hymn-sings and concert that took the public fancy by storm a few weeks ago. Many requests have been sent to band officials for a repetition of this type of concert and members of the band who rendered yeoman musical service during the fair's week, will climax a week of fine entertainment with another stirring concert.

Bandmaster Fred Johnson has prepared a suitable program in which is included a trumpet solo by Bandmaster Cooper R.C.A.F. whose performance during the last Sunday night concert drew rounds of well merited applause.

The grandstand at the Fair Grounds has been secured for the listening public, while the band will occupy the raised dais directly in front of the stand. Lieut. Johnson will conduct the community hymn-sing and a stirring evening of musical entertainment is being looked forward to by a large number of city and district residents.

JUNIOR FARMERS SHOW FINE CALVES

Hastings County Win Majority of Awards at Local Fair

Hastings County won first place in the Junior Farmers competitions held at the Belleville Fair when scores of younger farmers of the district competed in one of the keenest trials held in some time.

Several of the events aroused much interest that judging was carried out in the main ring near the grandstand.

First prize in the Calf section of the Junior Farmers' Fat Stock Club competition went to George Sutherland, of Stirling, Grand Champion, Halladay, was placed second. Stuart McKinnon, Kirk, Wellington County, third; Lorne Bowerman, Bloomfield, fourth; Stanley Kerr, Consecon, fifth place. Ross Walker, Prince Edward County, sixth, and Lewis Wright, Wellington, seventh.

Pleasure over the fine quality of the calves exhibited was expressed by M. C. McPhail, assistant director of agricultural representatives.

Winners in the boys' judging club educational competitions were Keith Hartshall, Bloomfield, Prince Edward County; Ross Halladay, Consecon, field, and Stanley Green, Thomasburg.

In the calf competition for Hastings; Carman Geen, Thomasburg; were made by Charles Emerson, Halloway; Geo. Sulberland, Stirling; Lorne Bowerman, Bloomfield; Howard Cooney, Stirling; Stanley Cook, Thomasburg; Arthur McDonald, Stirling, and Jack Ketcheson, Foxboro.

land to the western Mediterranean with orders to "sink, burn and destroy" pirate submarines, one report said today.

Reports of the sinking of the torpedoing registration and strict surveillance of all submarines of powers bordering the Mediterranean.

Undersea craft found outside their zones would be sunk on sight, in a move to prevent repetition of incidents such as the sinking of the British tanker Woodford and the attempt to torpedo the destroyer Brock.

Secrecy surrounded the plans, but it was understood that they had been agreed on a joint action with France to meet the problem, since France faces the same problem in Spanish waters keeping open maritime communications.

Recognition of France a Factor.

Paris diplomatic circles reported today that the current Greek British the price of Italian participation in the conference would be British recognition of General Franco as a belligerent.

Such a proposal French sources said, received a reply that such matters had nothing to do with the Mediterranean situation and should be handled by the Nyon conference.

Exclusion of the Madrid-Valencia government from the conference table was predicted by political sources as a British gesture to gain Italy's co-operation.

Lost—Four Flirts Flown, "Third Time My Girl," Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern Comedy Hit

A Title and Two New Rival Reporters

"Thrilling! Exciting! Pulse-Pounding! are the official and complete words of approval given to Warner Brothers' Championship fight pictures, round by round, blow by blow, announced for presentation on the Belle screen today and Monday, matinee daily.

The super-human gamuzzes of the fistic game is thrillingly in amazing as the 15-round blasting by the Brown Bomber. Was Tommy Farr robbed? The answer is revealed in these pictures, the fastest, cleanest, hardest battle the world has ever witnessed.

"There Goes My Girl"

Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern are a screen sensation in "There Goes My Girl," the feature attraction on the Belle screen today and Monday, matinee daily. It is a fast-paced show with ample action, thrills and ludicrious and comic situations, with the blonde-haired Gene and the "brunette" and glamorous Ann as the "rivals."

They play the happy roles of rival newspaper reporters who are love. Their plans to get married were interrupted right in the middle of the wedding ceremony when the editor, played by Stanley Fields, to handle the most important assignment that has yet been handed Martini and Miss Lupino and in love and after a series of highly exciting and thrilling situations, satirizing the tactics of newspaper reporters, Martini obtains the release of the victims by a clever bit of lightning stratagem and the story ends on a joyous note.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gay Desperado" and "Four Hills Rich Girl"

Two Very Interesting Plays for a Week-end Change

Romance, melody and laughter are the order of the day at the Capitol Theatre where Nino Martini, the handsome singing star of radio and concert and films comes to the Capitol on Sunday midnite, and Monday and Tuesday as grand holiday fare. He is in the "Gay Desperado." It's a skilful concoction of every ingredient of a perfect evening's entertainment—it's the answer to a movie star's prayer.

Unusual Story

A far cry from the usual film feature is an operatic songbird, "The Gay Desperado," briskly directed by the inimitable Rouben Mamoulian, is a fast-moving, thrill-packed, laugh-loaded story, laid under the Mexican grands.

As a silvery-throated singer in a Hill Billy cabaret, Nino Martini proves that he can act as well as sing. Martini is kidnaped by a mob, but when the leader—Leo Carrillo who worships American gangsters and imitates to adopt their methods, but is really a sentimental, music-loving chap at heart. Martini has a pull on "It's a New American-style kidnapping and there ensues a hilarious wedding of a wealthy American family, Martini's abduction is followed sweetheart, Ida Lupino. Carrillo invites his American idol of the underworld to remain as his guest and by Stanley Fields, to handle the ransom negotiations and then forget his pranks! Martini and Miss Lupino fall in love and after a series of highly exciting and thrilling situations, satirizing the tactics of newspaper reporters, Martini obtains the release of the victims by a clever bit of lightning stratagem and the story ends on a joyous note.

WAR - - KIDNAPPING - - POLITICS - - DISASTER - -

BUT.... it's the LITTLE THINGS that count....

New drapes for the guest room, and Junior's first haircut. A new recipe for peach pie and new pans for baking it. A picnic at the beach, and a new hat for the weekly bridge. Every day events? Of course! But they're the things that make life livable! What's a war in Illyria and another Arctic expedition, compared to the thrill of the first glimpse of the family that's moving in next door, and the delivery of a shining new refrigerator? What's a royal wedding, and twelve rooms filled with gifts, when Anne has her fifth birthday tomorrow? They're interesting enough, something to talk about, to wonder at, perhaps, but pretty far away from that most important spot and the people who live there . . . your own home.

That's where your heart is, and that's where the real thrills lie, in the things that concern you and the people who live around you, next door, in the next block, anywhere in town. There's news about them in every issue of the daily Ontario Intelligencer in "inside page" stories—and in every ad too, for the ads in the Ontario Intelligencer are news! There's news about new clothes for the family, and new food for the table, and new furniture for the home. There's news about new entertainment, and new ways to get to it. There's news about something new on every page, from the latest dispatch on the front page to the new shoes for Anne on the last . . . all written to you and for you, put up in a neat package and delivered at your door-step every day.

UNITED AID OF NAVIES FOR SHIPPING URGED

Britain Goes Forward With Conference Plans; Would Confine Subs.

Uneasiness Felt Over Attitude of Italy And Germany

SOVIET COMPLICATION

Effective Action in Defence of Safety on Seas Sought

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—Great Britain plans to go ahead with the Nyon Conference whether Italy attends or not.

No replies have yet been received from the 12 powers to whom invitations were addressed. But, since by the Russian note charging Italian guilt, the newspaper Messagero of Rome declares it is "inconceivable" even to imagine Italy can appear in the role of the accused."

In the British view action against underwater pirates in the Mediterranean cannot be delayed. Consequence of the present situation would be intolerable.

Proposals Made.

British proposals for the conferences are understood to include:

1. Registration of submarines in the Mediterranean.

2. Measures whereby submarines of all powers shall be kept within defined zones.

3. An understanding that the warships of all conferring powers shall defend each other's shipping.

Foreign Secretary Eden will head the British delegation which intends to make a strong effort to secure collective action in defence of safety on the high seas.

Denials Blamed.

But already doubt and fears have over Nyon. If Italy either declines to attend as a result of the Russian note or imposes conditions on her attendance, Germany almost certainly will follow suit. Thus neither Italy nor Germany will be bound by any agreements reached at Nyon. Both charge Russia with torpedoing the conference.

In Russia huge rallies of young workers declared their readiness to die for the Soviet Fatherland.

French authorities in Geneva meanwhile were negotiating with the Swiss officials for permission to hold the conference in Nyon, a town 13 miles from Geneva.

THREAT OF WAR CAUSES SHARP MARKET BREAK

Leading Utility And Metal Shares Decline $2 to $4

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Leaders of the Toronto Stock Market crashed down $2 to $9 on nervous selling today, trailing foreign markets. The war threats of war in Europe were apparently the unsettling influence. Base metals and golds led the slump. Smelters declined $4 to $7 and the preferred paper issues, Great Lakes and Abitibi were off $7 to $9. Dominion Steel B, Brazilian and other industrials were down around $1 or more. All the golds fell into line on the down grade.

Toronto, Sept. 7 (CP)—Turmoil in Europe over air raiding in the Mediterranean and spread of the war zone in the Far East brought a lot of sellers into the stock market today and prices were marked down sharply, practically throughout the industrial and mining sections. Leading metal, steel and utility shares showed losses of as much as $4.

International Nickel fell back $4 and losses of $1.50 to $3 were recorded at noon for Noranda, Hudson Bay and Consolidated Mining and Smelting. Falconbridge and Sherritt were off 50 to 50 cents each and Waite-Amulet, Hollinger, Lake Shore, Teck-Hughes and Aldermac were down 19 to 20 cents.

The big golds, Lake Shore, McIntyre, Hollinger dropped fractions and Sherritt hit a new low for the year at $4.65, off 25 cents.

In the industrial section Brazilian, Dominion Steel B, the Great Lakes Paper stocks, International Paper, Massey-Harris, Walkers Common and Great West Saddlery Pfd. had losses of $1 or more.

New York, Sept. 7 (AP)—Touched off by a sharp break in commodities, stocks crashed through resistance points in today's session, with losses of one to ten points generally. There were a few wider setbacks. It was the worst break of the year, with numerous issues plunging into low ground for 1937. Volume likewise dwindled late; and there were mild recoveries here and there.

Tension in the relations between Italy and Russia over the latter's charges of "piracy" in the Mediterranean by the former's submarines, bolstered by reports were the principal cause or relapse.

'Wetter' Water is Reality, Clarifies Air of Dust

Alcohol From Waste Gas of Oil Wells Put in Water

WALL PAPER REMOVAL

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 7 (AP)—It took the spectre of industry, thirsty like yarns that would take an inthousands of millions for something to take dust out of the air when nothing else ever did—became a reality today.

This latest miracle of chemistry was announced by the American Chemical Society by B. C. Willkes of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, Pittsburgh, and J.N. Wickert of the Carbide and Carbon Chemical Corporation, South Charleston, West Virginia.

It's no pun, but "wetter water" is made that way with alcohol. There is nothing intoxicating about the stuff. The alcohol is a new "synthetic", something that does not exist in nature. It is made from waste gas of oil wells. The new feature of this alcohol is the giant size of its molecules.

GERMANY, ITALY, JAPAN DEFEND WORLD—HITLER

Defence of Europe is Dressed by Der Fuehrer

NAZI PROGRESS

Not Boundaries But Civilization is Question Says Hitler

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 7 (AP) —Chancellor Hitler stressed Germany's solidarity with Japan and Italy today—against "Communist conflagration" in East and West.

His annual proclamation, read to the Nazi Congress by Adolf Wagner, thundered that Europe was referred Germany's demand for return of her lost colonies "not for the sake of the latitude of other powers toward this demand "incomprehensible".

Defence of World Civilization!

Italy, Japan and Germany are bound together in a community of interest, he said, for all three are committed to the defence of world civilization against attacks which break out today in Spain, yesterday in the Orient, perhaps the day after tomorrow, somewhere else."

He added:

"Our (Anti-Communist) agreement with Japan serves the same fundamental mission—to stand together in defence of world civilization.

World Crisis.

The crisis among the world, said Hitler, is "no mere controversy of states, but a question of the maintenance or destruction of mankind's social order and civilization itself," adding:

"If Germany, like Italy, is able in the end to see these same forces stand as a secure and mighty strong bulwark in the South-eastern National Socialism itself has travelled along the road to social revolution without that violently destroying the existing order and thus transforming the basis of our political and cultural life into chaos.

Portmarnock Wins Champagne Stakes

Doncaster, Yorkshire, Sept. 7—(CP Cable)—Sir Humphrey de Trafford's colt Portmarnock won the 1938 St. Leger winner Fairway out of Dorothy Paget, today dictated the Aga Khan's heavily-backed filmy Bois Roussel in the 1937 Champagne Stakes, outstanding two year old event run over a six-furlong course at Doncaster. Two favorites, Lord Milton II Sir Abe Bailey's Golden Corn, were tailed in the field of eight. The winner paid 11 to 2.

Shanghai Chamber Protests Warning

Children of Good Family More Likely to Be Test

Nottingham, England, Sept. 7 (AP)—The learned members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science turned their attention today to such divers matters as how to play dice and grow old.

The president of the association, Sir Edward Poulton, told of dice throwing experiments in which scientists had proved that the chance numbers come up most frequently because they are lightest.

Numbers on dice often are made by scooping out the faces, Sir Edward said, adding there is just enough weight taken out by a number six to make it roll to the next one with less force.

Take it from Dr. E. P. Poulton, Physiologist of Guy's Hospital, London, the only sure way to grow tall is to be born into a good family. A study of the British people over a period of years, he said, showed that children grow tall if well born and were dwarfed if born into poverty.

On the other hand, the chances of survival were said to be about equal among the very rich and the very poor. A five-year count in Durham showed that, while the older the mother the greater the chance of stillbirth, the highest mortality was found in the richest and poorest classes.

About 1941, predicted Captain C. W. Hume of the London University Animal Welfare Society, there will be a plague of rabbits, caused by increasing rapidity of multiplication that will do untold damage.

Men Riding in Lumber Wagon Injured When Auto Strikes

Two Others Hurt in Accident Outside Trenton

Trenton, Sept. 7 (Special)—Five men escaped death late Saturday night when a horse drawn lumber wagon on which they were riding east on highway No. 33, a few feet outside the city limits was struck by a car driven it is said by Bryce Graham, of Belleville, travelling in the same direction. Another auto operated by Alex. Cartwright, of Trenton proceeding west was struck by the Graham machine after it had struck the wagon. The wagon and the Graham car were both facing south when the side of the road when police arrived on the scene. A man who witnessed the accident related that one of the riders on the wagon was hurled through the air by the air and fell in a ditch some distance from the main entanglement. Other members of the wagon crew were lifted out of the wreckage by men who came upon the accident in motor cars.

The boy was taken to the office of Dr. W. J. Johnston for treatment. Later he was removed to his home. Local police investigated.

WOULD REVAMP CONTROL BOARD

Premier Hepburn Makes Statement at Richmond Hill

Richmond Hill, Sept. 7.—Complete reorganization of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, and "all the hopes, renews the contentious liquor question forever from the field of party politics," was announced here Saturday night by Premier Hepburn as promptly effective in the event of his Government's return to power.

A Supreme Court Judge as chairman, supported by two other members of the Legislature, one Liberal and one other Conservative, the Chairman over them, and the Prime Minister indicated, comprise the Liquor Control Board. They will be given "a free hand." Both assistant commissioners of the Liquor Control Board would be responsible, the Premier stressed to the legislature and to their respective constituencies. Besides the Chairman over them, Justice of the Supreme Court, efficient, non-partisan operation of the liquor law was aimed to be believed, and there could be no repetition, he said, of any "foul play" such as had "flourished" in the past.

COL. DREW AS INDEPENDENT CON.

Toronto, Sept. 7—(CP)—Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, former Ontario Attorney-General and former leader of the Conservative Party in Ontario, today announced he would run as an Independent Conservative candidate in the coming Ontario general election in Wellington south.

The last only one candidate has been nominated in Wellington South, A. Bernhardt, Communist. Col. Drew's opponent in 1934 was Dr. J. King, Liberal, elected at a by-election in 1935. Dr. King polled 666 votes to 3,366 for R. B. Robson, Conservative. In the 1934 general elections Wellington South returned Paul Munro, Liberal, who died, and Conservative Drew before that the riding returned a Conservative.

"It has been proposed," said Col. Drew, in his statement, "that I should be a candidate elsewhere in what might be considered a safe seat, but my interest in Wellington south member was elected by a majority of 2,700 votes. I am not going to force my own people in the county that I have been and have lived all my life."

Col. Drew resigned from the chairmanship of the Conservative party's campaign committee in Ontario May 8, last, after the split with Mr. Rowe on the issue of the C.C.F. standing over Col. Drew's head, "no way changed."

ITALY REJECTS SOVIET DEMAND OVER SUBMARINE

Relations Hang by Slender Thread as a Result

ITALY ANGERED

Semblance of Diplomatic Intercourse May Vanish

Rome, Sept. 7—(AP)—A new approach to Spanish non-intervention, and Italo-Russian diplomatic relations hung by a thread today as a result of the presentation and immediate rejection of a Russian demand for the withdrawal of the two vessels in Guerilla submarine warfare. The Soviet Union blamed Italy for the attacks.

Various Italian Fascist mouthpieces declared they had been about to participate in the new non-intervention talks, based at ridding the Mediterranean of Pirate submarines, but now would reconsider their position in the light of the Russian move.

New Blow May Wreck Peace

The belief circulated in many quarters tonight that the almost weak relations of the two powers scarcely could withstand this new blow.

Relations have not been more than a formality since the Fascist and Communist states but it appeared that even the semblance of diplomatic intercourse might vanish as result of the note handed to Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano by the Russian Charge D'Affaires in Rome.

Italy Denying Raps

Italian newspapers published attacks accusing Russia of "torpedoing" the non-intervention Nyon conference, scheduled for Friday, but also Europeans peace. The controlled Italian Press said the Russian note would force Italy to draw back from participation of the conference.

An editorial for this morning's editions of Il Popolo Di Roma said "one thing appears clear upon Russia rests the responsibility for this attempt to upset European Peace".

FEEL JAPAN SIDE-STEPPING

British Press Japan For Final Reply in Near Future

London, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Great Britain's dissatisfaction with a Japanese "interim" reply to her protest against the airplane attack on the British warship Ladybird was emphasized today in intimations to Japan that a final reply "should not be long delayed".

It was no secret an unfavorable impression had been created here by Japan's non-committal note, side-stepping the British charge that a Japanese plane machine-gunned Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen while the latter was motoring from Nanking to Wuhu and Shanghai.

The cabinet will review the situation tomorrow.

Issues are Unchanged Since By-election Vote Says Rowe at Madoc

Conservative Leader Refers to Succession Duties And Hydro

SCHOOL ASSESSMENT

By Staff Reporter

Madoc, Sept. 6th.—Echoes of the now historic East Hastings by-election were voiced here on Saturday when the Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative Party leader in a stirring address condemned the policies of the Hepburn Administration before a crowded Masonic Hall where Lt. Harold Welsh, present sitting member, received the unanimous endorsation of South East Liberal-Conservatives to retain the seat he now holds in the Provincial Legislature.

The Masonic Hall was packed to overflowing. Outside an enthusiastic crowd milled trying for parking spots where they could hear the address of the Conservative Leader which was carried on there over a loud-speaking system. Streets and sidewalks were lined with cars. People clamored to get egress into the building.

Reeve Clary, Warden of the County of Hastings, and president of the Madoc Liberal-Conservative Association presided over the meeting, and introduced the seven nominees for the candidacy.

Those presented for nomination were: Harold Welsh, Wesley Gray, Geo. While, John Churcher, George West, C. H. Campbell, Charles Ketchenson, and Major Merrill Price. Five minutes were allotted to the nominees, all of whom withdrew in favor of the sitting member.

The historic building rocked to the cheers of the delegates and visitors in the audience when Chairman of the party in Ontario arose to speak. Seconds elapsed before the din subsided. People stood up and cheered, as Mr. Rowe held up his hand for order. Outside a large crowd who failed to gain entry into the hall shouted their cheers and made more fortunate inside the hall.

By-Election Referred to

In his address Mr. Rowe at present regime Mr. Rowe said:

"But for when the Government in Queen's Park came here with all the forces behind that it could command, they could not succeed. It plain what they thought of the East Hastingsites, they thought darling." Mr. Rowe said. "They showed that they did not approve of the Welsh-Hepburn Government. The Hepburn Government then, and I know they will now, repudiate October sixth.

Mr. Rowe gives consideration in the By-Election last Fall are the same issues that the people of Ontario are concerned with today. Up to date there has been no change has been dumped in the Niagara River, but we have yet that communities below would not suffer from the consequences.

Kingsville, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Through the joint understanding both Liberal and Conservative candidates were withdrawn from the same hall for a meeting during the by-election here. The hall has been granted use of the hall on the same night at the same hour. Both speakers are known to have five prior rights and the meeting was abandoned to another meeting place.

Twin Elm, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Eggs with yolks as green as grass are being laid by a flock of pullets at Leghorn hen owned by Byron Fowler. The eggs were sent to present an ordinary appearance when they were candled. Installed a trap nest to determine which hen was responsible for the unusual eggs and found the culprit about a dozen from the same bird.

Dresden, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Elmer McDonald, 25-year-old racing car driver from Erie, was killed instantly at Erie Beach yesterday in preparation for event of a Labor Day celebration. His car hurled into the air and turned over, pinning the driver under it. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Evansville, Ind., Sept. 7 (AP)—Cecil Newby, 13, just out of the hospital, had his dessert today—about a "life of milk and honey."

A runaway cow he had been chasing into a neighbor's field gored him in the chest. He has been swarmed onto Newby, stinging him unconscious. Neighbors rescued Newby and rushed him to a hospital.

Lindsay, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Fred Altman, 37, has a daughter, seven, a wife, 37, a mother-in-law, 65, and a home. He has turned up too often in his life to be a confirmed bachelor. He's a newspaperman, and he lives at 37 Shoemaker Avenue.

New York, Sept. 7 (CP)—Dr. Henry Thomas Fleck, 74, head of the music department of Hunter College from 1909 until his retirement in 1933, died yesterday.

A leader in the movement to popularize good music, Dr. Fleck was born in Suffolk and received his A.B. degree in 1883 from Princeton University.

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Miss Dora Noakes, now 26, has spent the past 20 years living in the bottom drawer of a kitchen cupboard in the home and still resides there, Mrs. Noakes told police. Stricken in childhood by rheumatic fever that left her with a heart condition, she keeps "active" by sewing and reading.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 7 — (CP)—Work will start soon on the Niagara Falls, N.Y., joint sewage disposal plant, with a minimum capacity of 60,000,000 gallons a day. Up to date this city service age has been dumped in the Niagara River, but by next year that communities below would not suffer from the consequences.

Kingsville, Ont., Sept. 7 (CP)—Through the understanding both Liberal and Conservative candidates were withdrawn from the same hall for a meeting during the by-election here. The hall has been granted use of the hall on the same night at the same hour. Both speakers are known to have five prior rights and the meeting was abandoned to another meeting place.

Nutrition Conditions Better, Two - Year Report Reveals

Europe's Small Farms Best Suited For 'Protective' Foods

HEALTH CHALLENGE

London, Sept. 7 (CP)—Malnutrition from which millions of people in all parts of the world suffer, is suffering remains "an outstanding challenge to constructive statesmanship and international co-operation," according to report on nutrition prepared by a League of Nations Committee.

Investigation by Experts.

The report is the outcome of two years' work by an international group of agricultural and health experts, known as the mixed committee of the League of Nations on the relation of nutrition to health, agriculture and economic policy.

It declares towards better nutrition exists in the countries with the richest agricultural resources and the greatest attack in the pro-obstacles to progress, the report says, are included in the United States, Great Britain, most European countries, Australia and New Zealand.

Extension of the movement towards improved nutrition should benefit national agricultural systems, the committee contends. It would call for an increased production of "protective" foods, such as fruit, vegetables, milk, eggs and meat, an increased output of various cereals for flour.

"Protective" foods, the report holds, economically are more suited for production of Europe's small scale farms than cereals, meat or sugar. The Times comments that "the committee looks forward to a gradual redistribution of European agriculture to produce more of the protective and perishable goods and less of the staples, a change of importance which, European governments are already attack in the pro-

Mr. J. C. Spencer, Shannonville, has popcorn stems and a half feet high, which is one of the talks of the stalks. Farmers say they have never seen popcorn grown to this height.

A SEAL IS SEEN NEAR CONSECON

What was believed to be the Easthcock seal was sighted in the waters of Lake Ontario by a group of local residents off the shore near Consecon shoreline. Their attention riveted upon a small dark head which broke water at frequent intervals, observers finally were rewarded with a whole shape of the creature as it broke water in search of food. The size and shape of the sporting swimmer, indicated it to be a seal, infrequently sighted in that section of the lake.

LOCAL HARBOR BUSY ON LABOR DAY

The lower harbor presented an unusually busy sight yesterday with the arrival of the coal laden steamer, Dartmouth, the steamer Hamilton, loading canned goods and cheese from the government dock and the Shrubbitt's Supplies discharged boats cutting wide paths in the water. Added to this scene of sailing boats also gave animation to the ordinarily quiet Monday scene.

Repair work on the roof was completed last week.

FINDS MUD TURTLE IN BLOCK OF ICE

Patrons of a soft drink cooler at a downtown tobacco store yesterday had a surprise in their drinks.

Reaching into the interior of the cabinet for a cooling drink, Jack Boyle, local resident was first to observe a small mud turtle frozen solidly within the interior of a block of ice.

Carefully chipped from its icy prison, the turtle was taken home and thawed out. Today it is in a chirp as any to be seen sunning itself in the harbor.

Little Girl Injured When Struck by Bus

While playing on the road in front of her home at 112 Cannifton Road, little Margaret Murray, age two, sustained a fractured left leg after being struck by the Gorryville bus early Saturday evening at 6.30 p.m. Crook attended the injured girl and ordered her removed to the Belleville General Hospital in Martin's ambulance, where the fracture was reduced. According to eye witnesses the little girl was playing on the side of the road and failed to detect the oncoming bus, as she apparently stepped directly into its path. She is the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Murray, 112 Cannifton Road.

Large Crowd Enjoys Sunday Band Concert

Music-lovers of the city, who endorsed the initial hymn-sing given by the Belleville and District Municipal Band a few weeks ago by attending in large numbers received a similar musical treat on Sunday night when Lieut. Fred Hodson and his musicians gave another fine concert. Seated in front of the grandstand on the raised dais used by vaudeville performers during the Belleville Exhibition with a variable program thrilled a crowd which braved the cool breezes of the night to hear this type of music. While a large number sat in the grandstand, the majority remained in the comparative warmth of their cars.

With the exception of the evening mitigating any combined efforts community singing, Lieut. Hodson dispensed with this popular form of entertainment. Bandsman Frank Howard again favored the audience with one of his popular trumpet solos, and received hearty encore applause at the conclusion of his efforts.

That the efforts of the band are appreciated by the general public is shown by the generous turnouts which are greeting this fine musical aggregation in their efforts to please lovers of band music of the city and district.

Police Court Holds Very Brief Session

Perhaps the shortest session of police court ever held in the City of Belleville was witnessed in this local police court chambers, when Magistrate Boller's entire court consisted of two cases which were disposed of in less than a few seconds. The two arraigned before His Worship stepped briefly to the dock and pleaded guilty to individual charges of intoxication, paid their fines and departed, the entire court being heard and concluded in less than one minute.

POLICE BLOTTER

No serious crime was reported in Belleville over the Labor Day holiday, a number of minor offenders were picked up and lodged in the cell block over the week-end, however. P. C. Taylor found a bicycle, that had been left abandoned along the river bank and took the bike to the police station for safe keeping. Dan St. Coffey, Road, complained to the authorities he had damaged the fender of his motor car while backing away from the west porch on Front St. yesterday. Mr. Coffey's car was parked close to a hydrant and while moving away from the curb, the fender of his car caught in the nipple of the "fire plug" damaging the fender.

Fine Salmon Trout Caught Near St. Ola

Not to be outdone by catches of large salmon trout at Temagami and Mesford, Salmon Lake in Hastings County reported a fine specimen of the above fish Labor Day morning.

Mr. Gerald Minton, accompanied by Dr. Geo. Stobbs, hooked and landed a trout that tipped the scales and a half pounds.

The fish put up a real struggle and was hauled into the boat in about twenty-five minutes after it struck the line.

The fishermen had been out only about three minutes when the trout was hooked and after looking over the fine trophy when it was landed the two anglers decided to call it a "day" and returned to the cottage.

The trout measured thirty-four inches long with a girth of twenty inches and was caught on a brass wobbler.

PEACHES HIGHER ON TUES. MARKET

"This fruit is over its peak now," explained a vendor on the city market this morning, commenting on the slight increase of prices which were noted today over the Saturday quotations. "With canning factories in the area not taking practically all of the crop it is hard for us to get good stock." Quotations were made at forty-five and fifty cents per basket late today, a five cent rise over the Saturday prices.

Tomatoes and watermelon, however, showed no change in quantity or prices. The early week market was glutted with this fruit with prices quoted from five cents upward for package, while water melons were offered at from ten cents.

Tomatoes held firm in price in spite of the quantity available, while grapes were offered at fifty cents with basket lots quoted at fifteen and twenty cents. Peaches showed no change in price, selling at seventy-five and eight cents per basket lot.

Sweet corn remained steady at 10 cents per dozen with some vendors asking twenty-five cents per two dozen.

Burbank plums at thirty cents, green gages at forty cents and Italian plums at forty were offered in a variable display to Tuesday morning buyers.

Eggs were offered at Saturday prices with the exception of the twenty-seven cents and mediums at twenty-five. Few chickens were available today at from sixty cents each.

Garden vegetables were plentiful and were offered at prevailing prices.

Jewish New Year Is Being Celebrated By Special Services

Members of the Jewish faith of this city as well as elsewhere throughout the world are this week celebrating Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, which commenced on Sunday evening. It will be continued until Tuesday, with special appropriate services held in the local Synagogue.

Rabbi Gerstel will officiate at the services which will be attended not only by local Jewry but those from the district surrounding the city.

In his special message which will be delivered to the faithful, Rabbi Gerstel will show that Rosh Hashana is a complete cessation of every day business and other occupations. Rosh Hashana supercedes even the Sabbath and is so important a Holy Day that no Jew will fail to rest on this occasion because it is a period set aside not only to afford those of the faith an opportunity to forget their daily tasks but also for them to reflect on past deeds and conduct toward "God and Man".

Over the week end and continuing today prayers will be offered for the welfare of Their Majesties, the King and Queen and other members of the Royal Family, and for the British Empire in the hope of promoting that peace and international good will for which they have always strived.

F. HOUSTON HURT IN CAR CRASH

Car is Struck Broadside by Ct. Catharines Motor at Bridge and Church

CARS BADLY WRECKED

When the automobile he was driving was struck broadside by another motor car, Fred Houston, of this city, narrowly escaped death when his automobile rolled over twice at the intersection of Church and Bridge Streets, early yesterday. Both automobiles implicated in the accident were practically demolished.

Charges of reckless driving were laid against Robt. Boyd, St. Catharines, following the collision, police stated today. It is alleged by Detective Fred Izard, who investigated, that Mr. Boyd was proceeding south on Church Street, and apparently failed to observe the stop sign. As he emerged upon Bridge Street, however, Mr. Boyd saw Mr. Houston's car approaching from the east and swerved his car to the left to avoid an impact, but his car crashed the Houston car in the centre, bowling the latter car over twice. The Houston car came to rest on its wheels.

Passersby came to the rescue of Mr. Houston and assisted in removing him from the wreckage, where he was pinned. Mr. Houston suffered an injured leg, cuts, lacerations and general shock. The cars were practically demolished, the damage to the Houston car being set at $650.00 police stated today.

Ray F. Turley Appointed P. M. At Frankford

Frankford, (Special)— Mr. Ray F. Turley has received the appointment of Postmaster for the village of Frankford, succeeding Mrs. E. E. Ketchenson, who has held the position since her husband's death over two years ago.

Mr. Turley was formerly connected with Mr. J. A. Ford in the city goods business in Frankford. The office has been moved to the building owned by Dr. J. R. Simmons and is situated at the corner of Front and Mill Streets.

John Stokes, Tweed, Is Instantly Killed By High Voltage Wire

Tweed, Sept. 7.— When he grasped a live electric wire, carrying the 44-year-old employee of the Tweed Hydro Electric Commission, was instantly killed here in the course of his duties in that village this morning, despite the heroic efforts of fellow-employees and an experienced team of First Aid men who worked on him for over an hour. A coroner's jury this afternoon decided that Mr. Stokes had died of C. Dales at Tweed, this afternoon.

Stokes, who is employed as a lineman, was working on a pole with wires that were supposed to be carrying but approximately 2,200 volts. Mr. Stokes was secured to the pole by means of his safety belt and was suddenly seen by Alton Poirier, fellow-employee and commissioner, to slump over. With the help of William Woods, Tweed, police magistrate, Mr. Poirier had the injured man and brought him to earth, where he was discovered dead. Stokes had taken hold of a 2,300 volt wire line. His hands were badly burned. Efforts to revive him through the medium of artificial respiration were carried out for the greater part of the morning, without results.

Mr. Stokes was a brother of George H. Stokes, of this city, the former Sheriff of Hastings County.

ISSUES ARE UNCHANGED

"Few know what his plans were before the General Election of 1934. Fewer know what his designs are now. The Premier's duty to the Province of Ontario if not a direct responsibility is a responsibility of the past, at least some indication of his policy on this issue in the future.

"I challenge Mr. Hepburn to tell the people of this Province now the original draft of his unexpected hamendments to assessment are we clumsily drawn as he is to-day unworkable, to fit his play for a by-election? What are the plans intended to give the full and equitable solution to the problem of which he boasted?

"Now, within a month of General Election I do expect the confidence of the Public School supporters in the Province in the last election or the respect of the Separate School supporters will be damaged for Political purposes he owes to them at once a full explanation. Mr. Hepburn owes it to the people of the province a definite statement of policy on this all-important issue. My policy as leader of the Liberal Party—Conservative party is the same today as it was yesterday. I reiterate a square deal for the Public School Supporter and the full maintenance of their play for the Separate School. I will not, I say, neither for political purposes but will see that both are given their full rights and that no one will dance with the letter and spirit of the British North America Act.

Succession Duties

"Another matter which took an important place in the East Hastings Byelection and which Mr. Hepburn now terms an issue is his common obligation of Tax Collector for the Province of Ontario. Collector, Mr. Rowe said.

"Mr. Hepburn said you last year that if you would give him a mandate he would collect over thirty millions of dollars in succession duties owing Ontario. This sum was later lifted to forty and sixty million dollars. The electors of East Hastings are now told that Mr. Rowe misrepresented the facts to them. Mr. Hepburn admitted on the floor of the House that he knew that he had not collected sixty millions of dollars in succession duties, stated but less than seven million dollars of back taxes.

"I demand of him now that he tell you the facts in fairness to you people of Ontario. I demand why Mr. Hepburn to tell you the names of those whom he is claiming defraud the Province of seventy million dollars for the figure has now risen to that amount. He is also to name to those from whom he proposes to collect seventy million dollars. I assume he talks about. In two years the Hepburn Government has collected a total of only twenty-eight million dollars in succession duties, an amount which the total succession collections during the two years as well as back taxes which Mr. Hepburn does so much talking. In the light of this fact it is interesting to note that the Hepburn Government collected over eleven million dollars in one year in succession duties.

"These collections which Mr. Hepburn says would more made possible by regulations passed at Ottawa by the Bennett Government which called for the registration of Successions when called on Stocks Bonds and Share Warrants as a result of this amendment to the federal statutes succession duties. A State which had defrauded the Government of seventy millions in 1933 immediate action was taken by the Government of the day to collect these outstanding accounts to the Province and I invite Mr. Hepburn to deny denial of this statement.

"After October sixth it is my intension to collect every single cent due legally owing to this Province and I do not propose to achieve this conclusion either of my party or government to collect taxation due under our statutes by the noise and hallyhoo that has been so conspicuous in every phase of Mr. Gordon Conant's administration, further than this we also propose to review collections which have been made under Mr. Hepburn himself as Provincial Treasurer and will go into into some of these settlements which have left States so much injured as to result in a total write further point out that the information which I have to-day the ordinary knowledge of his department.

Policy Is Unchanged

"My policy is the same today", declared Mr. Sharp, "and I marvel no doubts it I ask them to review it before I assume the leadership of the Conservative Party Our policy and is the sage as was in the days of the old party, to stand in all fair square deal for the supporters of the Public School and fair play for the Separate Schools.

Referring to the cancellation of Hydro contracts the leader of the Conservative party said, "Hepburn bolated the Province of Ontario to repudiation and sold out the integrity of the province of Ontario for a temporary political gain of Hydro rates.

"You cannot restore the integrity of the province by selling its integrity for a mess of political pottage.

"We have had reduction of Hydro rates before Federal Election.

"You have seen the evidence of power demand. Today we are using an increase of 17.7 bot the Hepburn government allowed for an increase of 17. But Mr. Hepburn did not figure on the depression. Had that not come on we would not have been faced with the problem of unemployment. He might well ever now sit in twenty years time when some sons and my sons will be faced with the unemployment problem they will remember this so-called government.

"He says that there is ample power for years, that we don't need a forty years contract. He is selling power like cigarettes. The Hon. Adam Beck and the old school of real Hydro men would turn over in their graves if they could but view sales the stand taken by the Liberal gang in place of the old Hydro organization.

"Only two years have passed and the premier has renewed contracts for 400,000 h. p. They have used their single ounce of home-powered available in the Ahtihi region and they need 800,000 more.

"That type of vision cannot keep up with progress" declared Mr. Rowe.

"East Hastings will re-emphasize the expression of Dec. 8th on Oct. 14. In that unfair repudiation of contracts that sacrificed the credit of Ontario.

"The lames of today are little different from what they were in 1934" said Mr. Rowe. "Last year you declared the issues, today Mr. Hepburn declares the issues.

"Mr. Hepburn does not want a review of the issues that he himself created in this riding last year that you would stand on the Public Separate School issue. I ask you as Dr. Welsh has asked you, would be have repeated the statement the issue had the bye-election of East Hastings not come about. He is now and he said it over radio the other night that the Separate School question was definitely drafted, unsound and unusable and in saying it. He took the words out of my mouth."

"He repealed the Act because Mr. Hastings gave the answer that Ontario would not stand for this high-handed unlawfulness. He stated here in Madoc that he was for just and fair, but he did not tell you that he was for a kick in the out. He said he would stand or say by it. As Dr. Welsh has said, would be repeated it to the School across about had there not been a bye-election in East Hastings.

"The Globe and Mail called it a triumph of statesmanship. I called it that. It was a triumph of cowardice and of trickery that warranted the appellation of the political murderer of this grand old province.

"Mr. Hepburn has failed to give a clear-cut policy to the public Separate School which he betrayed before this election. If this is a triumph of statesmanship I am content to see what a triumph of defeat means to me.

"If anyone doubts my policy ask anyone to review it before I assume the leadership of the party.

"If that independent magazine, the Globe and Mail, calls the Premier's Separate School act repeal a triumph of statesmanship why should they call it wrong eighteen months ago when they did not give me a line of credit for my stand.

"In answer to a request from a member of the Government I have dwelt at length on the dismissal of returned soldiers from the civil service.

"There were 532 returned soldiers dismissed," declared Mr. Rowe, "and these men were the personification of service. They had been diverted themselves from politics and were still attending to the job at hand.

"Were returned soldiers fired when the Drury Government was in power? No. And the result of the East Hastings bye-election was the condemnation of the vicious patronage which we have now in the Civil Service.

"No man in Canada has a better background of service and discipline than has the returned soldier", said the speaker, "but these men who would die for law and order have been kicked out, ridiculed and insulted to have their places filled by a gang of ward-heelers."

"After Oct. 6th", said the speaker, "I will take out of Ontario this vicious patronage, and men will receive jobs for their efficiency in the various departments rather than for their political allegiance.

"There is no more vicious political plot on the escutcheon of the Hepburn Government than the wholesale discrimination against the returned soldier."

In a brief allusion to the Liquor Control of Ontario, Mr. Rowe stated that if returned to power he would close these "children's saloons and other dives and they would remain closed."

Premier Hepburn, charged the speaker, does not want to review the issues of last Fall. "He is fearful of the momentum of feeling that is rolling in all over Ontario about his issues of last Fall."

"It is not for me as Conservative Leader, to condemn the party or organization you, as laboring men belong to", said Mr. Rowe. "We stand behind the British subject and his right to join any organization he wishes to join as long as he stays within the law and order of Ontario. It is not the prerogative of the Hepburn party to tell you what organization you belong to or what you should support.

"All rite I will, what's the children name for the kiddie's kiddie? I said Pudo said. Acky yacky.

It is not, either, it's okie yoko, I said, and Fum said. O, you mean a ordinery common stunning, I said, no sure. I thought you meant a 3 day stummick ake with a docter. And if you think you're so smart what animal has 2 tales and hangs by one and ways the other end? he said.

had a triumph of statesmanship? Where is their police record? Where are the seeds of Fascism coming from? Will he release men the right to collective bargaining, record the right to choose their own representatives?

"It isn't sound and won't stand the test of time," said the leader, referring to the Hepburn policy. "The Premier," continued Mr. Rowe, "has his solemn obligation to maintain law and order but he cannot do it without betraying one class and insulting the other. There are the same seeds of Fascism as are prevalent in many European countries, and which are part of dictatorship."

Says Timber Lands Given Away

"The day the Premier announced the date of election", charged the speaker, "he gave away four-teen thousand acres of the finest timber lands in Ontario to his millionaire friends. This act was accomplished without the consent of his cabinet. He gave away another tremendous strip of Ontario's timber lands, speed, and unusable and in saying it.

"As you went last fall, so will go Ontario this fall," concluded the Conservative leader.

Candidate Launches Attack

Charging that Premier Hepburn forced the election at the time because there was a serious infantile paralysis epidemic, Dr. Harold Welsh, who received a tremendous ovation, told the crowd he had said: "What interest has the Premier in the people of East Hastings when he closes down the Provincial Laboratory of Hygiene and Public Health which has always rampaged Personally. I am not going to hold your hand at many meetings where the boys and girls are dying. That is not to be supposed."

In attacking the Department of Health, the speaker charged it was the greatest spending department in the whole province. "Under the Department of Health discharged six Provincial Health officers, men who were the front line of defence against disease, and put in their place men because they were good Liberal workers."

Solemn Obligation Violated

Touching upon the repeal of the School Act, Dr. Welsh asked: "Why should Separate School supporters pay for this repeal? What concession have they got? Why have they a Premier with a huge majority who violated his solemn obligation to the people to rush through legislation in true dictatorial fashion he has violated his solemn word, repealed his rubber-stamp ministers to follow suit.

"The debt of the province has increased $1,000 a day since we came into office," declared the speaker. The government is the greatest spending government in history. According to the financial report of 1934 there was a net debt of fifty millions but ninety-two millions for the year 1936. The total income from agriculture, mines, hydro or any of these things but Hepburn himself.

Mayor Arnott Gives a Parade

The election in East and West Hastings will be "just a parade" stated Mayor Arnott of Bell-ville, Conservative nominee for West Hastings. "We have the same feeling in West Hastings as you have here and we are going to work with you for the common good.

"We have a united front and they will know it after Oct. 6th. Mayor Arnott received a thunderous ovation as he sat down.

Brief addresses were made by Major Merrill Price, Dr. Embury and others.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

He stared at her thoughtfully—To Lorna?" She couldn't keep the at the passing shadow that dimmed her brightness. "It is a bit strange, isn't it, that no one ever did come forward to identify or claim poor?" he said. He leaned forward, the cynical little lines deepening around his mouth.

"I don't know," she forced herself to smile.

"If I thought you were hiding anything from me—" His fingers tightened on the table glass. His grey eyes fixed on the colour of her wide set brows, the sweetness of her lips.

"What would you do?" From a light moment of dining in this smart place, the atmosphere between them had grown rather tense.

He studied her—the pure line of her neck and shoulder in the peach linen, soft and tailored into a striking evening gown. "You would mean to me a girl of week-end affair." He spoke lightly, pleasantly, yet there was a hard color to her cheeks. He could do that, hurt her so very safe, and suddenly take it all away from her.

"You didn't really love me," she said in a low voice.

"I don't know," he said slowly. "Oh, come now, dear child; why be so serious? You're having a very lightful time together, aren't we? When or if it ends, well—?" But this was getting question, his hardest, standing face where leggers and reckless whims had ever taken their course.

The gay people, lights and music seemed to be mocking at her music. Why not accept the hour in its entirety, not be content? But, she murmured with a sort of fierce-ness. "You are cruel."

"That's just it," he said unexpectedly. "I don't wish to." He laughed. And suddenly—in the evening clothes. "Shall we dance?" He held her closer, and many eyes followed them as they moved so easily, beautifully out among couples waiving under the starry sky. Jane lifted her head, her lips almost level with his. Her hair lashes fringing the silk of her cheeks.

"I shall presently kiss you in public," he said. Very bad form, of course, but you're very lovely and "I care 'you to." Jane's tight little curls brushed his shoulder.

"No, I am not going to be a Chateau de Madrid." His arm was boyish, as he danced her back to their table. "I don't care for girls I were married, and married people try to act as if they were not. It creates an atmosphere but no democratic. You need a spot of powder on your nose, Cleopatra Greek nose."

But Jane felt no longer in the mood for this skimming on the surface. She felt that he knew her in waves, how passionately she loved Tony. The fear of ever losing him made her heart ache and suddenly wanted to be alone with him, away from other people dancing and dancing. "Let's go back to the hotel," she said.

"The brandy here is excellent, I thought we should linger." He passed her a cigarette. "The first part of a dinner is merely a prelude to the real art of lingering over coffee and liqueurs. We should be stiffened, his gaze fixed beyond her. "Well, let's go," the pretty red tone half turned her around.

"Don't look," he said gaily. "Old friends you ma not care to see." Her lips twisted. "The pack in full cry. They'll spot us in a moment."

"Who—?" Jane whispered, bending forward over the table.

"Lorna," he said grimly. "Elsie Forest, and—yes, there's the debonair young Cutler. About eight of the gang. Quick, if you're going to dear old Tuxedo, sitting behind you."

The cold deadly sense of danger she had hoped never to know again gripped Jane. "What are you going to do?"

"Nothing. Absolutely nothing," Tony shrugged, relighting his Cornado. "Why the excitement? You was annoyed and disturbed. After all, it was a bit awkward—most of us, I suppose, have had a affair—not knowing how they would react after the scene in Turcot. Anthony Kaye in any uncertain temper. And seeing Lorna again stirred him to memories—telling him the Showflung Islands were famous for being under water and uninhabited.

"Are you going to speak to them?"

low. "May I run right over? Really, it's important—"

"All right," Jane said with suddenness. Lorna and Tony were for as she hung to the receiver. If she had refused, she was so very positive Lorna would reach Tony in some other, more tortuous way.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE KAYE EMERALDS

Elsie Forrest, like many mild, easy-going women, could suddenly grow quite stubborn and 'annoyed. She was annoyed now with Lorna Howland. Mrs. Forrest didn't mind being used, as she called it, for she was generous to a fault, but nothing other people a good time. But Lorna had stretched a point or two on this trip. She had appealed to Elsie's good nature, Elsie loved a sailing journey, and there was sufficient room in her large cabin, couldn't she book Lorna in? The Princess Tchelsie was opening a new line from Biarritz, Lorna said, and there might be a chance for her to work it with Mr. Howland's influence. She would pay her own expenses, until a possible business opportunity arose. The Princess Tchelsie worked out.

Mrs. Forrest didn't mind a companion, nor did she mind Bertram Cutler, the play boy from Pond du Lac having sailed. He had pleasant manners, danced rather well, and could be counted on to make a fourth up. But it had taken only a few days to find out that, whatever that rumors of the Howlands' shining finances were true. Lorna was the main of the wheedling purse bean. Furthermore, she admitted had her name changed from Lorna Jane in Biarritz was based on a vague supposition that held no definite promise. Lorna had brought the knee so many people who could order her dismissed from gowning.

"I'm terribly sorry," Lorna said to Elsie Forrest when they were half way across the seas. "I too, at the Ritz-Carlton, and Miss G. Ellis, Mrs Beaser presided. The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer, which was followed by prayer led by Rev. Beaser who also read the Scripture Lesson St. Matthew, Chapter 2. The business period followed and after this Miss M. Alford took charge of the programme.

"Abide With Me", was sung. Mrs. A. Bates read two short pieces "Dropped Stitches", and "Good Advice". Miss Alfred gave a reading "The Master is Coming". A contest was held and Rev. Beaser closed the meeting with prayer after this the bodies served a delicious lunch.

"MADE TO ORDER FOR ME"

"Life Insurance! Where would I get the money to pay for it? That's what I used to think! But this Life Preferred Policy was made to order for me. My family will get $6,000 ($50 a month for 10 years) if I should pass out. And if I live to be 65, as I expect to, I'll get a regular income for life. So I'm protected both ways—I can't lose. This Life Preferred Policy is profit-sharing. Dividends are paid annually."

Is a policy like this worth "25 cents a day to you? If so—and if you are in good health—you can arrange for it with a North American Life representative.

COOLER WEATHER

Cool weather which put in its appearance with the rainfall of Friday evening but turned decidedly lower during Saturday was one of the most welcome atmospheric changes in many months. Every one welcomed the change for reasons of comfort of course, but most of all for the sake of health. The excessively warm and humid weather which marked August had been exhausting to everyone, especially to those in positions of responsibility and hard work while it added to the spread of the infantile epidemic according to medical men. The change, it is hoped will have a definitely beneficial effect upon the spread of the epidemic. Continuance of cool weather for that reason will be all the more welcome.

Last year was experienced the hottest July on record, when the mercury went over one hundred degrees but the spell did not last as did the steady August 1937 spell which continued for weeks accompanied by humidity in which many days was practically at saturation point. True the temperature did not rise to one hundred but the length of the warm spell together with the humidity and the prevalence of the epidemic made August in many ways a month long to be remembered as one of the least pleasant of vacation periods.

Weather which has an average generally has for three years or so set records of excesses, the cold winter of several years ago, the hot summers of 1936-37. These seasons of the past three years made history for generations, and it is hoped such temperatures will not be repeated.

ACCIDENTS

A lessening of fatal accidents on highways is one of the satisfying aspects of the past several weeks. This is as it should be. Accidents of the kind that take many lives make driving a nightmare. It is deeply to be hoped that the day is not far distant when accidents will be practically impossible not only through regulations which do control but also because of a highly enlightened driving public. During the past weeks there have been accidents of a distressing character but the number has not reached the startling proportions of the records of some time earlier in the season. It is to be hoped improvement continues.

TWO CENTRES OF INTEREST

The interest in world affairs has now moved into two centres—the China coast and the Mediterranean Sea, the first with its undeclared war between Japan plunging that she is chastising China and China charging Japan with violations of national rights and with a policy of domination of not only China but the whole continent of Asia. Then there is the torpedoing of British and other vessels making their way through the Mediterranean Sea about their own business.

Both cause concern to those who meditate on peace and the strange situation in the world today. The Spanish question seems but a sideview of the Mediterranean show.

THE DICTATOR'S WAY

In our time arithmetic has lost its meaning, like human life. People are impressed by three billions of money without stopping to inquire what kind of money it is. And yet the Italian lira of which Franco owes Mussolini three billion is only five cents, where as the English pound sterling, of which they may yet spend three billion for rearmament, is five dollars. The three English billions are just one hundred times as much as the three Italian billions, but a great many people nowadays don't stop to figure.

At the same time it must be admitted that a wholesome instinct for reality underlies the general public's indifference to billions. Why bother about the tens of billions of marks in Hitler's bookkeeping, or the scores of billions of rubles in Stalin's bookkeeping, when the long rows of ciphers can be so easily described in simpler terms? Where does the Fuehrer or the Duce or the General Secretary of the Russian Communist party get the billions of money for arms and Ethiopian wars and big factories?

The answer is quite simple. They get their money by making their subjects eat less. The arithmetic is elementary. Say the annual income of the German people is roughly $15,000,000,000 a year. Any time you need some extra money you make the German people cut down 20 per cent on food and dress and housing, and that gives you $3,000,000,000 a year to play with. The same process in Soviet Russia gives Stalin many, many billions of rubles. In those countries they still publish budgets, but it is really a business of making the people pull in their belts.—New York Times.

Beyond is the barren wasteland,
Where no man ever trod
The pure, unspoiled tundra
Kept pure by the hand of God.
People by Nature's chosen
This bare and boundless terrain
There's the law of self-preservation
Where men have not yet left a stain.

O'erhead, the blue dome of heaven
Vast, dotted with millions of stars
Keeps watch o'er the far-reaching bareness
Where the freedom of Life knows no bars.
This is no land for the weakling
For only the fittest survive
The wolves, the cold and the silence
Ever wage their unceasing drive.

What know ye, ye spawn of the cities
Of the battle of Nature and man
Where live and let live is byword
And on kill or be killed there's no ban.
The Eskimo up in God's country
Lives by his brawn and his brain
He's happy up there, cause he knows naught
Of the sinful lust for gain.

The hand of God is unchanging
He planned out these Arctic nights
Where solitude reigns on unbroken
'Neath the wing of the northern lights.

BELLEVILLE IS BLESSED WITH A SPLENDID FILTRATION PLANT, and every passing year emphasises the wisdom of installing this plant in connection with the waterworks system, for of necessity sewage disposal conditions grow worse as population increases and filtered water is absolutely a necessity. From this it must not be supposed that filtration removes the necessity of modern sewage disposal methods—it does not. It is necessary and wise to make bodies of water used for drinking and bathing purposes as safe as possible. The water when it reaches the filtration plant should be as pure as sensible precautions can make it, thus making the work of the filtration plant easier and surer. A cursory survey of the sewage and water system would indicate that a scientific survey is necessary to protect the public health. Of course, when over the sewage question is raised the bogy of higher taxation is raised, has been for twenty years, but the taxes keep on merrily increasing and it is doubtful if there would have been any material increase in taxes if a modern sewage disposal plant had been installed long ago. Fortunately the wise men who have been in charge of the waterworks department in years past prepared for eventualities by building up a tidy surplus instead of lowering the rates / and were able to install a filtration plant without noticeable tax increas. Of course the ratepayers and water users paid for it, but painlessly. Another necessary civic improvement on the agenda is the esplanade, defeated and put back several years by municipal politics. The esplanade is becoming noticeable more necessary every day to relieve traffic congestion, if for nothing else, but there never will be another opportunity to acquire the necessary property so cheaply—the physcological moment was muffed while the municipal politicians fiddled and fooled and made some people believe that two and two made six or sixty. However, real reforms come slowly, but they come surely, and truth is bound to prevail in the end.

BETTER DODGE

A colonel was crossing a parade ground when he passed a new recruit. To the colonel's surprise, the latter took not the slightest notice of him.

The colonel said, "Why don't you salute?" But the recruit stolidly remained silent. "Don't you know who I am? I'm the colonel!" yelled the C. O.

The recruit woke up and said, 'Oh, you are the colonel, are you? Well, you'd better buzz off, for the sergeant-major's bin 'ere three times looking for you!"

Sept. 7th., 1887.

Mr. Robert Sanderson's bakery on Pinnacle Street, near Tickell's furniture factory, was destroyed by fire last night. Owing to low water in the river, water was difficult to get. No. 1 engine stationed above the upper bridge could not get any suction, but No. 2 engine on the fire stand at Walker's foundry threw one powerful stream, which saved Mr. John Boyd's frame stables adjoining the bake shop. The building was owned by the Masonic fraternity.

Barnum's circus in fifty-two coaches arrived here over the G. T. R. from Kingston yesterday morning at three o'clock. Unloading commenced at five o'clock and a large crowd of citizens was present to witness the interesting work. Large crowds attended the afternoon and evening performances despite a certailing rain. The parade passed along Front Street about ten o'clock in the morning and was the best parade seen here for many a day.

The circus proved too strong a counter attraction for school pupils. A small number of pupils reported at the central and high schools yesterday morning, but the teachers decided it would be labor lost to conduct the classes, so allowed the faithful pupils to go.

NEWS and VIEWS by G. M. JAMES Music Day

Last Thursday was Music Day but I have not had an opportunity to write a few lines about it until now, Saturday in the second week.

For most people it is one of the delightful day of the "Ex", because Gerhardt, the smiling man, has charming music wherever you go, on the several bandstands, in the buildings, on specially constructed platforms on many parts of the grounds, and on the spacious steps leading into all the important buildings. Most of the instrumental and vocal music, and dancing is part of the various musical competitions which require all day to complete. Next to Press Day, the second Music Day must, especially the tap dancing by various groups of pretty little school girls is beautiful costumes. One group of ten representing the French girls' military (cadet) costume was a very lovely picture, though all the others were splendid too.

MEN'S TWO MILE SWIM

Last Friday there was a special amateur-swim of two miles for men for a beautiful trophy. Ralph Flannagan, a lad of twenty from Miami, Florida, won the championship and at the same time established a new record of forty-four minutes and eighteen seconds as compared with the previous one of forty-seven minutes and twenty seconds.

The writer learned that all championship swims in the United States are for one mile and that the various distances contested annually at the Toronto Ex are the longest in the country.

I must now add a note of lament, inasmuch as all first prizes in the various swimming contests this year have gone to the United States, and most of the secondary prizes as well. This is a humiliation for Canada which no doubt will be rectified in future events. The interest in the swimming contests is well sustained year by year.

TORONTO'S LIMITATIONS

Beyond a doubt Toronto has many just claims for real greatness, but in all things human this beautiful city has her limitations. It is widely believed and reported that Toronto's crowded street cars have spread the dread contagion of infantile paralysis to unprecedented proportions.

The writer on several former occasions has pointed out that the management and methods of Toronto's street cars are by no means to her credit, and that the day was fast approaching when some drastic action would avoid Toronto because of this fact. Careful investigations reveal that the policy of the Toronto Street Railway Commission is unwise economy, and for this reason the number of cars are far too limited, the cars operated by one man are far too numerous for comfort and efficiency, but above all the conductors and drivers rarely announce streets distinctly and audibly.

POULTRY

The annex of the Coliseum is where you can see three thousand entries of pets and poultry, and for coveting your neighbor's goods and scooling there is nothing like it on earth, though it is not quite as headsplitting as on the Midway. Surely every variety of poultry, including Canadian wild geese and ducks, that came out of the Ark are represented in there because they are so many. It is interesting to see the prize winners of the breeds you know best so that you may be stimulated to improve the quality of your flock. You will discover that the day has come by when it pays to keep a little of everything. You will ultimately select some one breed, and then year by year keep your flock up to the highest standard by introducing well bred male birds. The resulting economies and profit far outweigh the expense.

The children naturally paid most attention to the pets, and they saw more varieties of rabbits, pigeons and other than they ever dreamed to exist. Excited, delighted children are a pleasure to watch.

MIDWAY

After several days preparation, I shall now describe the Midway in detail. The arrangement is much the same as at our own Belleville Fair, a street with booths on each side and noise more before them announcing what is going on inside. Most of the crowds on the Midway go up and down the street, seeing and hearing what they can for nothing, because on former occasions they paid a dime or quarter, and did not receive adequate value. I shall now describe what you see and hear before each of the leading attractions.

MYSTIC ISLE OF THE SOUTH SEAS

"Ladies and gentlemen come closer that you can see and hear. There are forty people inside from Tahiti, an island of mystery of the South Seas." We are going to bring a few of them out here, just a little sample of what is inside, divers, dancers and singers. Hurry, hurry, here they come, a dozen dusky maidens clad in a towel, they will now sing and dance. The show will commence right away, get your ticketa, twenty-five cents each, a quarter of a dollar—this way please, hurry, hurry!"

HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

"This way ladies and gentlemen, here are doubles of the great actresses from Hollywood, here is the double of little Shirley, she wants to say hello to you all and tell you how much she likes Toronto, come right along this is Hollywood where pictures are made, go in and see how it is done, no waiting, ten cents to all, hurry, hurry."

SALLY

(Note: The name Sally is intended to suggest Sally Rand, famous for her fan dance).

Look, look, ladies and gentlemen, this is Moo-Pay-de-Boop who has broken up all the burlesque shows in the United States, there are over a score of others just as smart, and spicy, you see everything, you see everything for a quarter, wonderful dancing girls and music, go right in and relax, the best show on the grounds, all for twenty-five cents, or the quarter of a dollar, the band is playing inside and the show is about to begin, hurry, hurry!"

ERNIE AND LEN

"Inside are two living brothers, complete and perfect, but with only one head, positively alive, born in 1931, two brothers, the rarest sight, you can't realize the wonder until you see it, positively alive, it has baffled doctors and science, get your ticketa here only ten cents, a dime, come right along ladies and gentlemen."

WORLD'S STRANGEST PEOPLE

"Here inside are scores of strange people from foreign lands, an African pigmy, three feet high, stands before you, he is one hundred and four years old, has five wives here with him and numerous children, and smokes forty cigars a day, speak to them Gibbo and tell them how much you admire Toronto's pretty girls, (Gibbo speaks but not a word is understood, and then he puffs away at his big cigar).. Now ladies and gentlemen look at Fin-head, another African pigmy with a head like a coconut, not an inch high above the eyes, he may lack intelligence, but he is very good natured, smile to the people Fin-head. Next behold this beautiful snake charmer, and the treacherous python twined about her perfect figure, she controls them up to a length of forty feet. There are a dozen other wonder features inside similar to these, get your tickets, only fifteen cents, the greatest and best show in the world, come right along, the show is about to begin, no waiting."

GIANT MAN-KILLER

"This is an exhibition of deep sea diving, look at the man here in the complete diving suit, he is going down, going to submerge in a large tank containing fifty thousand gallons of water, you will see how they pump air to him through a rubber hose while he is under the water, hurry, hurry, we are going to send this diver right down, we have in this tank a monster octopus of the deep, a man-killer, eighteen feet long from the bottom of the ocean, the diver will struggle with it and bring it bodily to his head to be destroyed so you can get a good view of this dreaded devil-fish, come right along, only ten cents or a dime, the diver is about to submerge, hurry, hurry!"

ARABIAN NITES

"The show is going on now, admission to one and all only fifteen cents, not a quarter just fifteen cents, no waiting, stay as long as you like, just go in and see those twenty dancing girls, you will like the very much, here before you are two of our pretty girls, dressed in cool sophyr costumes, completely open at the back and not too conservative otherwise, no delay, relax and give way to mirth and laughter, spectacular, spicey dancers, if you have not seen Arabian Nites better go now, and have happy memories ever after, this way, this way, only fifteen cents."

TRAINED CHIMPANZEES

"This way ladies and gentlemen for the largest and best trained chimpanzees in the world, the ones used in Hollywood pictures, the ones you have seen on the screen, and laughed at heartily. Sammy in the cage before you is in a sullen mood, not a bit like his cheerful self, because a boy made a face at him an hour ago, and he has not recovered his lost disposition, his daddy inside weighs two hundred and thirty-five pounds and for eight years was in the pictures at Hollywood, there are others too just as interesting, a nice clean show, clean fun, no bootycookiehoot, if you want that you must go up the street for tastes differ, and there is no accounting for that. Come in and see these clever creatures ride a bicycle, walk a tight wire, smoke a cigar and do many other funny things, all for fifteen cents, the show is just going to begin, come right along everybody."

ESKIMO LAND

"Look here, look here, see this team of four Arctic dogs and their sled, the fastest means of transportation used by the people of the midnight sun. Behind these bronzed men and women bring you in their native dress with guns and knives, a high class attraction for gentlemen, ladies and children, going on all the time. You will see the champion Eskimo skater perform on artificial ice, and many other habits and customs of the Arctic. This is an eight thousand dollar travelling museum with a cast of seventy people, interesting and educational. Get your ticket right here, only twenty-five cents, hurry, hurry, the show is about to begin."

SHANGHAI

(Note: The only lady announcer on the Midway is at this booth, which represents a great deal about China. The announcer is a very pretty Chinese young woman, whose perfect articulation and pronunciation of English could well serve as a model for Canadians.)

"This is Shanghai, go in and see its wonders and beauty, the first time ever shown outside of China. This young lady before you is one of our numerous troop from China, these ten kitchen bowls you see before her will break if they fall, look, she is placing one inside the other, and then places them on her head, she runs and jumps but the bowls are perfectly safe. This is one of our juggling acts, and there are many others done by our young men and women. Follow the young lady into the Shanghai theatre, get your ticketa right here, only twenty-five cents and see the famous Shanghai troup, the first ever to visit Canada. It is the feature of the Canadian National Exhibition, see what a lovely place Shanghai is, ticketa only twenty-five cents."

NOAH'S ARK

You are greeted at this booth by a smelly story standing on a pedestal preening his feathers. A large sign reads, "Admission Free" and crowds are entering.

It is really a small zoo with all savage animals eliminated because the baby elephant, large buffaloy zebras and many others are tied to stakes in enclosures. There are several freak animals also such as the smallest cow and the biggest cow I ever saw, similarly the smallest and biggest horse, but a year old calf with two heads created the greatest interest because such have never lived more than twenty-four hours. I saw this animal, and state that it is in good condition, the heads are joined at the top and have two ears, two horns, four eyes and two mouths, one slightly smaller than the other. It can see with each of the four eyes, breathes through all four nostrils, but eats with only the larger mouth though the other goes through the same motions. This is one of the most interesting sights I ever saw.

This Ark contains hundreds of specimens of dead fish, turtles, lizards and snakes from all over the world many of which I saw alive in Florida. Although the fish and other things have been treated for preservation, the smell is terrific. In this part of the exhibit is a mummy, one of the few ever completely unwrapped, a man who died at forty-eight about three thousand years ago in Egypt. The body as a whole is shrunken to less than one-fourth but the features are good and even might be recognizable. This art of embalming known to the Egyptians has been lost. As you are about to leave the booth another sign confronts you, "Please leave a donation," and everyone complies, but the man at the receiving table looks as unhappy as some attendants we saw in various places in England, as if to say, "Not nearly enough, he gone, I'm frightfully bored."

In my next article, I expect to give a detailed account of the grand stand performance, which like the above has long been in process of preparation.

Best Wishes to All.

"Of course they mean it"

Overheard between innings

First fan: : : : what? Oh, yes . . . I've been reading them. It was a good solid point they made in that last advertisement.

Second fan: I'll admit that . . . but I was just wondering if even now the whole story is being told?

First fan: You mean, are the Brewers just being selfish? Well I'd say of course they are. But I also think that this is a case where private interests and the public good are one and the same thing.

Second fan: How can you figure that?

First fan: This way: it's to the public good to promote moderation, to foster true temperance, to keep a few agitators from trying to block an adequate trial of a soundly written law.

Second fan: Of course, but : : :

First fan: And at the same time, even on the most selfish basis the Brewing Industry must support temperance education . . . because the drunkard and the bootlegger are their most dangerous enemies!

Second fan: But aren't there regular temperance organizations?

First fan: Yes, but the worst of it is that instead of teaching true temperance, which is self-control . . . instead of realizing that properly supervised beverage rooms are the best defence against the excesses everybody wants to avoid . . . the prohibition extremists clamour for changing the rules to force people to be "good". Which is not only un-British and undemocratic . . . but it won't work!

Second fan: At least it seems like a good thing that both sides of the story should be told.

What Local Theatre Man agers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rhythm in the Clouds" and "The Lady Escapes"

One of the pleasantest and most entertaining films of the season "Rhythm in the Clouds," newest offering from the Republic studios which has nothing lacking in the way of divertisement and novelty, comes to the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday as bit No. 1 on another of our grand double bills.

A host of Hollywood's newer luminaries are starred in this lilting production. Patricia Ellis, Warren Hull, Joyce Compton, Suzanne Kaaren and David Carlyle are only a few of the bright lights whose talents make "Rhythm in the Clouds" outstanding, from fade-in to close out.

Miss Ellis is delightful as the penniless song writer who takes a long chance which lands her in the temporarily vacant penthouse apartment of a successful song scribe—ears permeation. All goes well until the owner of the apartment returns home to find that Patricia has sold one of her own compositions under his name—and has won the heart of his next door neighbor, a brite writer.

Warren Hull, who won, acclaim as an actor out Hollywood way before the studio biggies even discovered he could sing, is splendid in the role of the next door neighbor. David Carlyle scores as the man whose apartment Patricia has appropriated, and who straightens out all the complications in a highly successful denouement.

Several new songs are introduced in "Rhythm in the Clouds," including "Gentlemen Get Lonely" and "Two Hearts are Dancing" by Lou Handman and Walter Hirsch, and "Hawaiian Paradise" by Harry Owens, pretty isn't she?, and how! whose Hawaiian airs are popular the world over.

"The Lady Escapes"

Running away from love is all right if you're sure that you're being followed, and Gloria Stuart acts upon this sage advice as the lovely fugitive in "The Lady Escapes," romantic comedy, opening Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre as smash bit No. 2, with Michael Whalen in what he thinks is the role of pursuer.

When their marital life turns out to be a martial life, with the husband holding the wife in his arms only to prevent her from soothing him, the charming couple agree to disagree, but soon find they can't escape from love.

Besides, the vase-throwing spouse finds that she has a naturally affectionate and generous disposition, and refuses to release her husband-target until he finds a second husband for her.

An insanely joyous search for a substitute ensues both in America and abroad, as that International complications of a hilarious nature, which involve George Sanders, Cora Witherspoon and Gerald Oliver-Smith, work up to a hair-trigger climax amidst a Gallic frenzy on the French Riviera.

Today Only

Shown for the last times today, two grand variety bills have been held for the many who missed them on previous programs. Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Marker" is bit No. 1 and "The Gay Desperado" starring Nino Marini, as bit No. 2

AT THE BELLE

"Topper" Offers Ninety Roaring Minutes of Laughter

Constance Bennett and Cary Grant, co-starred for the first time and Roland Young as "Topper", achieve a joint triumph in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature comedy "Topper" on the Belle screen today and Wednesday, matinee daily.

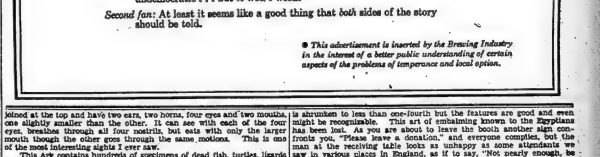
The trio turn in brilliant performances. Miss Bennett, light and gay in the high comedy of "Topper" is more delightful and alluring than in any role she has portrayed in her illustrious career. Just as Claudette Colbert added to her fame in "It Happened One Night" and Carole Lombard scored in "My Man Godfrey," Miss Bennett comes into her own in "Topper."

Cary Grant exhibited the same gay, rollicking manner that characterized his leading man role opposite Grace Moore in "When You're in Love."

The screen play is sensational and refreshingly novel in its motivating theme. Adapted from Thorne-Smith's book by Jack Jevne, Eric Hatch and Eddie Moran, the Kerbys are illmalized as a rich, daredevil couple who after death in an automobile accident, are low plane spirits with the ability to mortally materialize and dematerialize.

The Kerbys resolve to obtain heavenly eternity through the exercise of a "good deed". Cosmo Topper, a staid Wall Street banker, unwittingly provides them with the expert ferceur, Roland Young ...who lives a simple, unpretentious existence under the dignified but domineering ambitions of his wife (Billie Burke), is considered by the Kerbys as a perfect specimen of repression.

How the captivating Cosmo and the rollicking Cary proceed to upset the normal life of the droll Roland and Miss Burke to result in their own hectic ways of living acts the audience into the spontaneous hilarity of hysterics.



The astounding adventures and ribald escapades in which the gay ghosts involve Young bursts all bounds of comedy. In the end they lift Topper from his dour existence, make him a happy human being, and joyously escape eternity from their earthbound existence.

Commendation is merited by the clever direction of Norman Z. McLeod the beautiful photography of Norbert Brodine and the amazing special camera effects of Roy Seawright.

Among those who contribute much to the scoring of features are Alan Mowbray and Eugene Pallette. Hoagy Carmichael's new song hit, "Old Man Moon" adds to the outstanding production that makes Hal Roach's debut into the realm of super film features.

The writer recommends that you see "Topper" for a full evening's entertainment. A very interesting Metrotone Newsreel brings you up to the minute world news flashes, and Animal Comedy presents a revealing color novelty completes a splendid program.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Fears a Young Mother-in-Law

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been engaged for three years, and the time has come when we wish to make a home of our own, and are puzzled about what to do.

My fiance's mother is 42, only seventeen years older than her son. She has been very sweet to me, but I don't want to make my home with her, because I don't believe in living under the same roof with a mother-in-law, and yet I don't want to put her out of her own home. My fiance has been supporting her.

We would like to have your opinion on this.

Puzzled.

You tell me your husband's mother has been very sweet to you. Why do you imagine, then, she would become a fury, when you are installed in her home? Not all mothers-in-law belong to the comic-supplement type. Some are a great acquisition to any household. And why decide against the thing before you have tried it out?

Think a little ahead; would you like to be put out of your home by some future daughter-in-law? Why not at least give the situation a trial, if your husband's mother is not capable of earning her own living?

Which Comes First, the Girl or His Trade?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He has signed a two-years' contract which has called him to a distant state, making it impossible for us to marry before the end of that time. He is the type that will work early and late, and allow a letter to wait until tomorrow, then put it off for a week.

Still, he says he loves me more than life itself, and should we ever break up he would fail in his trade and left the contract go on living. Yet, how can I stand two years without seeing him except perhaps for a week or two? You see I love him so much.

Worried.

Please don't think me unsympathetic, if I remind you of the many happy marriages which have been made after a two years separation, or even a longer time. You will be able to see your fiance twice a year, and that should help to make you reasonably contented.

In the meantime you could be getting things ready for your new home — all those dainty, hand-made things which are so precious to young housewives.

If your fiance is so wrapped up in his work that he neglects you, then try to be patient, and don't retaliate with nagging letters. A man with a good trade, and as vitally interested as you tell me your fiance is, is bound to be successful.

She Keeps Telling Him to Wait

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A year ago, the girl I love broke with a man she had been going with for some time. I know all about the case, tried to console her, and she accepted me as a sort of "second fiddle."

But she makes no attempt to recover from this man's influence. He is married, happily, and she never sees him, but when she goes into town at least gives the situation a whirl. I'm thinking of giving her up. I've read his letters, and still keeps the picture on her bureau.

I'm getting sick and tired of playing "second fiddle" to a girl who doesn't know when she has the boot, and I'm thinking of giving her up. Two or three times I've asked her to consider me, but she comes cheerful.

Edgar.

Don't talk about quitting any more, my dear Edgar, but treat this morbid young lady to a temporary sample of that article. Try staying away, and when she calls you up have another, if imaginary, engagement.

I think when she realises she may lose you, she'll burn the other man's letters, and you may win your own way. This recipe is worth trying anyhow.

Weddings

BROWNSON—MULLETT

Trenton, Sept. 7.—(Special)—A pretty Autumn wedding was solemnized at Holy Rosary Church Hall on Saturday afternoon at 1.30 p.m. when Fr. Bernard Arthur officiating when Muriel Mary C., eldest daughter of John Wright Mullett and the late Mr. Mullett was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Wesley Brownson, youngest son of Mrs S. Brownson and the late Mr. Brownson, of Harman and Trenton. Miss Mary A. Ferguson Hamilton, played the wedding music and the bride was escorted to the register, Mrs. John McConnell of Waterloo, sang "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden".

Given in marriage by her uncle Mr. Charles Payne of Toronto, the bride was gowned in forget-me-not blue georgette over taffeta with matching blue mohair hat and white accessories. She carried a bouquet of talisman roses.

Dorothy Mullett, sister of the bride was bridesmaid, gowned in peach sheer with pink mohair hat and accessories and carried a bouquet of pink sweetheart roses. The bride was supported by his brother, Mr. Wright Brownson of Trenton, who were Mr. Thomas Brownson of Bancroft, brother of the groom, and Mr. Percy Arthur of Trenton.

Following the ceremony a reception for immediate friends and relatives was held at the home of the bride's mother on Front Street. Mrs. Mullett in navy sheer with white accessories and Mrs. Brownson in black satin-faced crepe and lace received the guests at the door. After the couple left on a motor trip to Quebec City and points east. The bride travelled in navy and white sheer wool suit with navy accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Brownson will live on Dundas Street east.

HAY—HUBBLE

A quiet marriage was solemnized on Wednesday, September 1st., at Manie, Ontario, by Rev. Hugh Shaw of Clarence Mial Hay, son of Mrs. Hay and the late Robert Hay and Agnes May Hubble, daughter of Mr. David Hubble, 32 Hillside Street, Belleville.

The witnesses of the ceremony were, Mr. and Mrs. Selkurne Westover, sister and brother-in-law of the bride.

The bride was attired in a becoming green ensemble with cheer with matching accessories and corsage bouquet of roses and maiden hair fern.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for points east, the bride travelling in a rose colored tailored suit with brown French model hat, shoes and bag to match.

On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Redmerville, Ont.

The bride before her marriage was on the staff of the Campbellford public school for a number of years. The groom is a prosperous farmer of Prince Edward County.

The best wishes of a host of friends follow them for a long and happy wedded life.

HANNAFIN—HUNT

St. Charles Church, Read, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, August 28th, when Jean, daughter of Mr. John Hunt and the late Mrs. Hunt, became the bride of Mr. Vincent Hannafin, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Hannafin, the Rev. Father Carey officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore navy blue sheer, and carried a mother of pearl prayer book. She was attended by Miss Rita Hannafin, sister of the groom, wearing navy blue sheer and carrying a bouquet of roses. Mr. William Hunt was groomsman while Messrs. William Hunt and Bernard Bennett acted as ushers. Miss Mary Walsh played the wedding music.

After the ceremony, wedding breakfast was served at the home of the groom. About thirty guests being present. Mr. and Mrs. Hannafin left on a wedding trip to Detroit, the bride travelling in an ensemble of black and white. Upon their return they will reside at Read.

LANGMAN—BAILEY

Marmora, (Special)— At St. Paul's Anglican Church, an interesting wedding took place on Saturday, September 4th, at noon when Annie Douglas, daughter of Mr. James E. Bailey and the late Mrs. Bailey, became the bride of Mr. John Nelson Langman, of Aurora, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Langman, Rev. A. B. Caldwell performed the ceremony.

The church was effectively decorated with gladioli, asters and fall flowers. Mrs. T. Stinson, Dodaland, Sask., aunt of the bride, played the Wedding March. Lohengrin as the bride entered the church on the arm of her father.

She wore a beautiful gown of white satin, worn with tulle veil caught with an orange blossom wreath. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Margaret Reilly, sister of the bride, was matron of honour. She was attired in pale yellow, with halo hat finished with a small veil, and rose coloured accessories. Little Miss Margaret Anne Reilly was flower girl and wore a dainty frock of pink net, with wreath of pink poke bonnet to match. Both carried roses and carnations.

Mr. William Langman, Aurora, Ont., brother of the groom, was groomsman. Mr. Roy Smith and Mr. Donald Bailey were ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was served at Marble Point Lodge, Crowe Lake. Mrs. Langman, mother of the groom, wearing navy flowered chiffon, received with the bride and groom.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Langman left on a wedding trip to Montreal and points east, the bride choosing for travelling a black suit trimmed with Persian lamb with matching accessories.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Langman, Mr. and Mrs. C. Fife, Miss Jean Craig, Miss Helen Langman, Aurora, Mr. Arthur Langman of Aurora, Miss Betty Wayne and Mr. Louis McKevin of Gilmour.

FISHER—CLARK

At St. Thomas' Church on Saturday afternoon at two o'clock the marriage took place of Miss Annie Margaret Clark and Mr. Frederick John Fisher both of this city. Rev. A. L. Armstrong officiated.

The bride, who was attired in a navy blue silk suit was attended by Mrs. Annie Mcilroy of Cobourg, who wore a green frock with matching accessories. Mr. Arthur Fisher of Oshawa, was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher left on a wedding trip to eastern points and on their return will reside on West Bridge Street.

EMERSON—TOWNSEND

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday, September 4th at the United Church Parsonage, Foxboro, by the Rev. P. Horton, when Mildred Marie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Townsend, Halloway, became the bride of Edward Francis Emerson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Emerson of Moira.

The bride, who had been a school teacher in the surrounding district for the past six years, looked charming in a gown of navy sheer over taffeta with navy gloves, hat and shoes. The couple were unattended and the ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

Immediately after the ceremony, the happy couple left amid showers

GOOD MANNERS

NO GIFT NECESSARY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a married woman with single brother living in another town. This brother associates with three girls who are all very good friends. Occasionally he brings the girls to my home for two or three days at a time, on a visit, all at one time, of course. Each of the girls always brings me a little gift.

I am planning to visit their city, and no doubt these girls will want to entertain me. They are all single and live at the Y.W.C.A. . . . and, of course, would do their entertaining there. Doing it all collectively, in one evening.

Would I be obliged to give each one a gift when it will be just an evening party, and if so, what would you suggest? I am dear from these girls only at the times my brother brings them to my home.

2. In a letter of this kind am I signing my name correctly, or should I sign the "Mrs." part on the left side of the paper

Y.

There isn't any reason for your taking gifts to these girls. Of course if you wish to do this, it is thoroughly proper, and very gracious and generous. Ordinarily I should say, avoid being or send you "guest" cards to them and hear from them as you have given to them, but for just an evening party, this gift isn't necessary.

2. Your letter to me is signed correctly — and I cannot tell from what a boy THAT is. So I'w marking it Jones. Sign your letters correctly, and I never cease to be annoyed at their unwillingness to learn how to write a decent hand for a signature. In your signature I'd prefer not to have the dots over the initials isn't incorrect .... it just isn't as good form as the name spelled in full. (For instance, the surname of your maiden name, and the first name of your husband.)

The formal names (Mrs. Frank-lin Dole Smith) may be written, in parentheses, as you wrote it, directly under the informal name (Lilian Smith), or it may be written, as it usually is, under the informal name and for example

RESIGNATION LETTER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to join golf club which I enjoy very much. I must resign from this, because of illness. As soon as I am able, I'm going to the hospital for an operation. I'm not now confined to bed, but I am to rest. I have had a three months' leave of absence, so now I want to send in my resignation. As I cannot spend the time I should in the club, please help me write such a resignation.

Y.

Your letter of resignation might read,

I am writing you, as secretary of our Study Club, to tell you that I find it necessary for me to resign from our club. I can't tell you how sorry I am that I must forego the great pleasure I have in attending our meetings. But I am sure that they will understand, and the doctor says that I must rest for three months if I wish to have an operation. He demands that I give up all activities, and so, to my deep regret, I must ask you to help me to keep my membership in The Study Circle. I hope you will be so kind as to pass on my resignation to the club members at the next meeting? I am sure that they will understand, and do tell them how happy and proud I shall be to be a member of this fine and friendly group.

Please remember me to you and the other club members in the anticipation of seeing you all again very soon.

That Body of Yours

By Joseph W. Barker, M.D.

CALLOUSES

To relieve pain, stop pressure on the sore toe, and remove the callous, use Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads. They are thin, soothing, protective. Sold at all drug and shoe stores.

Dr Scholl's Zino-pads

is needed for flushing away the waste products formed from the various processes going on in the body. Water is made from a chick which Dr. Alexis Carrel has kept alive for nearly twenty years are enabled to grow and multiply only because they are kept in a tank of water containing a little salt which nourishes the tissues and allows the waste products to escape into it. The water is of course changed periodically.

Water also regulates the body temperature, retaining heat in cold weather and causing the heat out of the body in the form of perspiration during hot weather.

There is no hard and fast rule as to how much water or liquid an individual should drink daily. If there is a tendency to cold, a rise in temperature, an attack of diarrhoea or vomiting, severe bleeding or other condition causing a loss of water from the body, more water should be taken to replace it. Water is also very helpful at the beginning and during an illness in carrying wastes from the body more rapidly. A little added to the water enables the tissues to hold more water.

Overweight individuals do not need as much water as those of average weight as fat tissue holds more water within it than do other tissues.

YOUR BODY NEEDS PLENTY OF WATER

Generally speaking most of us should drink about four to six glasses of water daily in addition to the water in foods and in beverages such as tea and coffee.

Some idea of the great need of water in the body can be gathered if we remember that every cell especially like tiny fish and must have water to nourish it and to receive and carry away its wastes.

Fortunately Nature had this in mind because every foodstuff, no matter how dry in appearance or taste, contains some water—generally as low as 8 per cent and lettuce as high as 95 per cent. Thus even if one drank no water whatever he could get sufficient in foods such as tomatoes, string beans, cabbage, carrots, apples, oranges, and other fruits. Lean beef contains almost 80 per cent of water.

"Water is necessary to life for two main reasons—(1) because the chemical changes required to sustain life can take place only when the resulting substances are dissolved in water, and (2) because water

Monsoon Aids Growth Of Fine Ceylon Tea

Montreal, September.—Alternating wet and dry periods and a change in the monsoon, are responsible for the high quality of tea grown in Ceylon. Tea is grown on mountain slopes that are alternately wet and dry, depending on the direction of the prevailing wind. Heavy rainfall must get into the soil and cool shade to produce the finest tea. Ceylon has both.

In the higher altitudes of Ceylon the usual order of things is reversed. There is not a case of "drop in fever"—the tea itself does the dropping in. Grown, in some cases, at an elevation of 7,000 feet, the fresh plucked tea leaves are lowered in cable cars to factories on the lower slopes.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 7.—(CP)—The newest bogey to disturb investors on the Toronto Stock Market today, and all groups added under a sizeable run of anxious selling under the influence of foreign disturbances. The big metals of the list were equally heavy. A long list of golds dropped sharply, with base swinging below $4 for a loss of more than $1.

Stocks in the mine also slow through the early session but accelerated its pace in late afternoon with the big Metals showing the way. Noranda slipped to 33 for a loss of 2 1-4 points and Smelters at 71 was off 7 1-2. Hudson Bay dropped back about $3 and Nickel about $5. Falconbridge and Sherritt boarded re-sessions of 40 to 65 cents each. Aldermac, Normetal, Pend Oreille, Wells-Auriant and Rouyn-Merger weakened 20 to 25 cents each. Eldorado, around 2.30 was down 40 cents.

Among the Big Golds Dome dropped about 1 1-3 and smaller losses were posted for Lake Shore, McIntyre, Hollinger and Buffalo-Ankerite at 2.30. Secondary group losses of 15 to 35 cents came out for Central Patricia, Little Long Lac, Macassa, Pamour, Teck Hughes, Wright-Hargreaves Central Patricia, Kirkland Lake Modern, Read-Auhlier, Oro Plata, Airways Beverley, Sudbury Basin, Sullivan, Premier, Perron and MacLeod-Cockshutt.

Brazilian dropped about 4 points and other utilities including Montreal Power, Gatineau, Steel of Canada, Steamships and C.P.R. sold down. Distillers were weakened. Second-three-point decline and Walkers eased about 1 1-2 points. Other leverages were heavy.

Implements declined. Massey-Harris F56, weakened about five points and the Common a point. Cockshutt slipped a fraction. Except for a 3-16 rise about two points for Fanny Farmer, recessions were narrower in the Foods.

428 Violent Deaths During U. S. Weekend

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP)—At least 428 persons died violently in the United States during the Labor Day week-end. As in previous years motor traffic again was the chief cause of accidental death. A survey by The Associated Press showed 302 auto traffic deaths in 44 States. There were 271 during the corresponding period last year.

Board Room Gossip

MARKET COMMENT

With the long-awaited, soon-to-be-day period at hand, brokers' chats of many months have at last got on total. Predictions have been numerous during the weeks that the real recovery of prices and expanded trading in security issues in September, but the market has a singular way of designing its own pattern and these always tell the actual "state of mind" existing among traders and investors.

It will be recalled that last year, it was not until October that the real advance in industrial securities began to take place. In contrast to this year, however, when board rooms have been rather dull places during July and August, the trading public in 1936 was much occupied over the mining market and this kind of activities kept the brokers busy until an industrial market of real proportions developed in the Autumn. Basic developments are not lagging for a substantial improvement in both the mines and industrials, and granting a more favourable international situation, we are likely to see a change for the better real soon.

The market should constitute bullish ground for the existing attitude of Quebec government finances, as revealed by Hon. Antonio Paton, Provincial Treasurer. A continuation of the trend toward budget balancing and debt reduction practices will go a long way in the direction of establishing renewed confidence of business men, which eventually leads to greater employment and higher payrolls.

HELD ON CHARGE ARMED ROBBERY

Clarence Thompson, Kaladar, Arrested For Alleged Robbery of Taxi Driver

Clarence Thompson, 21, of Kaladar, charged with seventeen miles north of his home by Provincial Constables Smith of Bellville and Constable Gordon of Napanee, tonight made three charges against him, the first of which was laid by Sunday Thompson who lodged in the Lennox County Jail Monday charging him with armed robbery.

Thompson is alleged by police to have held up Ross Wells, taxi driver of Kingston, at the point of a revolver, Saturday night and stolen his car and $1.40 in change, leaving Wells bound on a lonely sideroad three miles east of Westbrook.

Police recovered the car, belonging to the taxi firm which employs Wells, hidden in a bush a short distance from where Thompson was found. A 38-calibre Smith & Wesson revolver, with the numbers filed off, the gun allegedly used in the hold-up, was found in a pocket of the car and a search of a garage near Napanee, which was broken into Sunday night, was also found in the car.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP)— Clarence Thompson, 24, of Kaladar, today pleaded guilty to robbing Ross Wells, local taxi driver, of $1.40, a cigarette lighter and a car while armed. He was remanded until Friday for sentence.

DiMaggio Hits Circuit Blow No. 40, Greenberg Has 33; Giants Three Games in Front

Lee Grissom Hurls One-Hitter And Loses While Phebus Wins

GIANTS ON ROAD

Yanks Win Two on Holiday, Feller Wins Ten In-dians

Just about everything that can happen in baseball happened to the 365,000 major league fans who saw Labor Day's 16 games.

Lefty Lee Grissom of the Reds pitched a one hitter and lost. Ray Prebus, of course you don't know who he is, hurled a one-hitter and won. Joe DiMaggio slapped homer No. 40; Hank Greenberg powdered No. 32.

And when it was all over the Giants had won two and the Cubs had split. The Yankees were cast an 18-game trip to hostile battlefields tomorrow with a three game lead. The Cubs, for the present at least, are sunk.

Supported by the stalwart arms of Cliff Melton and Hal Schumacher the Giants trimmed the Phillies, 6-2 and 9-3 as honest John McCarthy hit two home runs; Harry Danning got another.

In Chicago the last place Reds came close to Cubs' scalps not twice. They won the opener 7-3 behind Paul Derringer; Clarence Shoffner chalked up the eighth when Paul Cavarretta's pop fly dropped for sacrifice, a wild pitch and a long fly plus some shoddy infield play handed the Chicagoans two runs and the ball game, 4-3-1.

Giants in Front

The Giants leave home with 1 ½ three game bulge in the standings. Giants won 76, lost 48, games to play Cubs, won 76, lost 52, games behind 3, games to play 36.

The Pirates and Cardinals, only other clubs even faintly in the race, split. The Cards won one behind Bob Weiland, 4-1 and Arky Vaughan's homer took the second for the Bucs, 5-4. The Dodgers won behind Luke Hamlin 2-1 in 10 innings and then bowed before Lou Fette as he won his 19th victory.

Young Mr. Phebus, a 26-year old righthander from Cherryvale, Calif. by way of Albany, brought his talent to the attention of the American League by blanking the Red Sox with, one hit after the Sox, behind the venerable Lefty Grove, had won the opener 6-2. Phebus fanned four and walked seven.

Feller Wins

The Yankees had little trouble with the Philadelphia Athletics, taking two, 6-3 and 3-1. Signor DiMaggio and Ivy Paul Andrews, who pitched a three-hit game, figured prominently in the proceedings. The Bronx Bombers kept pace with their competition (heh, heh) as the Tigers shook down the Browns, 10-2 with Greenberg and Pete Fox leading the way.

Bob Feller fanned nine, allowed four hits and tripled to give the Cleveland Indians a 2-1 edge as Lyons balled the Tribe in the morning game for the White Sox by the same score.

Local Juniors are Pushed Out of Baseball Picture; Lose 14 - 3 to Toronto Kids

Kiwanis Kids Handed Bad Lacing at Hands of To-ronto St. Cyps.

MINGO TOO GOOD

Belleville Kids Only Collect Seven Hits, Lose in Straight Games

Behind the superb chucking of one "Lefty" Mingo, who is one of the best junior pitching prospects seen around these parts for some time, Toronto St. Cyprians, junior baseballers, administered a Kiwanis Kids from any further participation in the O.B.A.A. playdowns by a 14-3 count. The win marked the second straight victory for the Queen City champions they having defeated the Soule boys 4-3 in a hectic eleven innings game by a 4-3 score.

The boy Mingo had just about everything a smart hurler needs. A fast ball with plenty of hop, a sharp breaking curve and a drop that was a honey and the local cub sockersmiths eating out of his hand. Seven scattered hits was the best the Woodley crew could garner and only on one occasion did they get the upper hand and mesh runs. He struck out fourteen.

"Lefty" Mingo had the drop curve pitching chore for the local, hurled seven innings of ball and deserved a better fate. Although he had a yen for nicking enemy pitching Weeks found it tough on the pinchits and had his mates not kicked the pellet around and had

Apple Sauce

By MARY POWER

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

The last peal of thunder reverberated faintly and Iris sighed reliefully. During a two days' steady downpour she had been cooped up in the big house with Mimi, the maid, for company, and the two young collies, Nip and Tuck.

She had taken down and skimmed through many volumes from the well-stocked shelves in grandfather Douay's splendid old library. This morning a much-thumbed diary of her late grandmother's lefped while away the dull drab hours.

Several pages were devoted to grandfather Douay's favorite recipes. Evidently the old fellow had gourmandistic tendencies for such quaint things as "Taffety Taste," "Raspberry Ripple," "Mint Julep," and "Rosemary Sauce" were recorded. Douay's Favorite Applesauce, flavored with Mint and Cayenne Pepper," bore this cryptic message: "Through inadvertence the pepper was added but Douay smacks his lips and like Oliver Twist, cries for 'more.... Must be the cayenne! . . . So the recipe stands. It is woman's prerogative," wrote the wily Caroline Douay, "to employ every known article to keep enamored the man she truly loves." Iris giggled. Eternally feminine—her esteemed grandma.

She closed the book and, jumping up, opened wide a window. The fog was lifting and she noted that the storm had played havoc with neighbor Garrey's orchard. Dwight's precious apples, great, luscious things, literally carpeting the ground. Dwight, she knew, was depending on the apple trade to help finance an operation on a troublesome hip, grim reminder of active days before the war in 1918.

It was Iris' cohxing that had kept Dwight carrying on at the old farm when, after the mother's death, he had been tempted to sell out. Iris had suggested building a roadside cabin, and in addition to the sale of fruit, specialising in duck sandwiches, which had since made him famous about the countryside.

Skirting the orchard, she ran up the path toward the big brown house. Dwight, she knew, had planned to harvest his fruit today. He was standing on the porch smoking disconsolately, but his face lighted up at her approach.

"I'm out of luck, that's all," dryly. "A cool thousand."

"Couldn't you sell them as seconds?" brightly.

He shook his head. "Winefalls? Twouldn't pay to gather them."

"But," persisted Iris, "couldn't we make pies or dumplings, or apple butter? Oh, I know, exclusively, 'grandma Douay's applesauce, served with your duck sandwiches!"

"Applesauce"? Dwight laughed. "I'm closing shop Saturday—"

"Yonder come the pickers," interrupted Iris, crisply. "Put them to work immediately, Phone Mimi to hustle up here and to bring an armful of mint from my garden.

"I'll find your mother's spoons." Followed a bustling scamp pole and pans.

Knots of applesauce — most tempting-looking. Fragrant! Iris suggested giving each customer a sample with his duck sandwich. Artful schist!—so like her grandmother Douay. For the patrons, like the grisly old Douay himself, liked its snappiness, and, smacking their lips begged for more. All afternoon there was a steady stream of customers to partake of it. Nightfall found her flushed and radiant.

By Saturday they were on the last of the crop. Five hundred gallons ordered by a noted chef in town! And Jackson, the big apple grower from up-state coming! Iris was jubilant. If Jackson wanted grandmother Douay's recipe he'd pay—handsomely!

"We are $2,000 to the good," Dwight had confided that morning. Iris was still sparkling as the two mulled. "And a woman, Dwight, enough.

"I'll ask for the recipe," beaming. "Stamped at my curbside ain't screwed! Apples all down and, I'm crazy. Got a sample handy?"

"Certainly," indicating a generous sample. "We've sold thousands of gallons, and still filling orders. It was my grandmother Douay's recipe, literally. Taste it."

He tasted. "What'll you sell the recipe for?"

"A thousand dollars," promptly.

"Absolutely—sold! Scribble it," accidentally.

She was shedding Dwight's acidity voluminous apron when Dwight appeared. She waved aloft Jackson's thousand.

Dwight was nonplussed. Qoolh her. Your grandmother Douay was a wonderful woman. They say she MADE your grandfather.

"Absolutely," folding the apron in two, Iris went behind the door to hand it up. "You see, she loved grandfather." Her voice slightly muffled. "And a woman, Dwight, enough.

COMBAT RHEUMATISM

That is the way millions of sufferers will do—much—for the man who truly loves."

He strode forward.

"Iris!"

"Dwight!" mockingly. Yet a bit shy and wistful withal.

That was all. But that was enough.

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT

When Tarzan felt these suspicious strips in the floor, he started to retreat to the room he had just quitted. Too late! Cords sprang up around him. They pulled at him and tripped him, so that he fell. Then he felt them closing and tightening about him.

The mighty Jungle Lord struggled to escape, but it was no use. He was completely enmeshed in a web of ravenic strands. The simply but effective trap, he presumed, was operated by a rope from the next room, and probably had been sprung by the wily Woora himself.

This room, he surmised, was devoted solely to the purposes of the net, forming the magician's final protection against an enemy who sought his life. Whoever was caught in the net was rendered entirely helpless, and could be easily murdered at Woora's will.

The door of the third room opened. There stood Woora, a crude lamp in his hand. His death's head face was contorted in a snarling grin. He surveyed the helpless ape-man and squeaked. "You court-an earlier and more horrible death than we planned for you!"

Milk to the total quantity of 375,534,000 gallons was carried by rail in Great Britain during 1936.

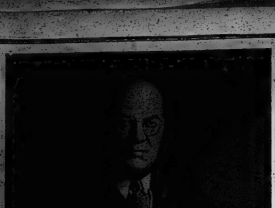
TEN LOSE LIVES IN THREE DAY

Highways Rather Free of Fatalities Despite Congestion.

By The Canadian Press

Ten persons met accidental deaths in Ontario during the long holiday week-end with highway mishaps taking a big toll on Labor Day, despite crowded highways, was comparatively free of fatal crashes.

The week-end's most serious motor accident occurred early Sunday on Capreol highway, nine miles north of Sudbury, when four persons died. Two truck drivers and one plunged into the ditch.



Victims: Miss Cecile Quesnel, 18; Fernand Lepage, 32; David Cherrette, 30 and Dennis Pitre, 19, all of Capreol. Six other persons were injured and are in hospital at Sudbury.

Fisherman Fatal

What a fight one struck the rear of a sedan near Orderich last night. Mrs. William Doherty, 38, Goderich, was killed. Her sister, Mary Lightly, suffered serious injuries. Harold Livermore, 38, Clinton, driver of the light car, was hurt slightly.

Frank A. Fobjakiakin of Toronto died at Lindsay from injuries suffered when struck by a truck and Joseph MacDonald, 69, Toronto, was killed when hit by a radial car at Dixie's Hollow, near Toronto. Roger Langevin, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Langevin of Sudbury, died from injuries received when struck by a truck.

At St. Catharines John Lawlor, 40, died from a fractured skull he received in a 30-foot fall while working at McKinnon Industries Ltd., plant. Hakeh Armstrong, young son of Mr. and Mrs. John Armstrong of Hamilton, died at Hamilton after falling 50 feet from a ladder at the city asphalt plant.

FATE OF FLIERS STILL UNKNOWN

Fears Entertained For Safety of Three Detroit Residents

Point Peles, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP)—Lake Erie waters were patrolled today by craft whose crews sought to learn the fate of a red biplane's occupants after a crash off Point Pelee, 40 miles southeast of Windsor. United States aviation officials feared the plane carried with three persons who left Detroit for Cleveland yesterday morning.

James Monroe was at the controls of the plane which left Detroit and is still unreported. With him were Harry Corley, plane owner and Jerry Teffeau, all Detroit residents. Four boats covered the waters off Point Pelee in an effort to ascertain if they were the victims of the crash, witnessed by a member of the Point Pelee life saving crew.

The Point Pelee life saver said the plane, bound south, crashed into the lake about 9.40 a.m., E.D.T., yesterday. Robert Grant, Park Superintendent, sought trace of the plane by car until late afternoon. His son Lawrence, said three plane bodies and a pair of goggles were found floating in the lake.

Point Pelee, Ont., Sept. 7.—(CP)—Coast Guardsmen patrolled an attempt today to raise a biplane which fell into Lake Erie a half mile south of here yesterday.

The wreckage was located yesterday but rough seas made it impossible to raise the plane, members of the Point Pelee Life Saving crew saw the plane fall but several hours passed before the wreck was located.

"SHAVED" PEACHES FOR PARTICULAR FOLK

Believe it or not, "shaved" peaches may now be bought. William Wade Heritage of Richwood, W.J., is the enterprising peach grower who has answered a common complaint about peaches, by an ingenious device that "shaves" the fuzz from the fruit. Heritage has a machine attached to his sorting machine which strips the peaches of their fuzz, dropping the fruit into baskets, the upper photograph, Harold Heritage, son of the farm owner, feeds the peaches on the belt that carries them through the brushes, and into the basket, without fuss. Below, Albert Ridgway selects the peaches for packing. The idea has since gone through the 'shaving' machine.

UNEMPLOYED ARE RARE IN NORTH

Says Premier Hepburn at Opening of New Highway

Timiskaming, Que., Sept. 7.—(CP)—Hardly an unemployed man is to be found in Northern Ontario said Premier Mitchell Hepburn as he started an election tour of the North Country today.

The Premier who begins his tour with a speech at Kapuskasing, took Labor Day to officially open the new highway connecting the city of North Bay, Ont., with the town of Timiskaming. The road provides the first highway contact for this Northern Quebec pulp-manufacturing town with the outside world.

Running for 40-odd miles through dense forests, it extends from North Bay to the Ottawa River and Timiskaming. Before the summer is ended a Quebec Government road will link Timiskaming with the mining centres of Ville Marie and Noranda.

Progress of Industry

Progress of pulpwood and lumber industries in Northern Ontario made it possible to give employment to the people, said Mr. Hepburn. These industries required careful attention, reforestation being needed among other things. He pledged attention of the Ontario Government to the matter.

The International Labor Movement in Ontario was saved a few months ago by his actions, said Mr. Hepburn. The Premier said his advice to labor men is to keep on fighting in the old-fashioned British way and not to jump on the band-wagon of every panacea that comes along."

Labor organizations, he said, had taken 50 to 100 years to build up the respect of the public they enjoyed. It was in the interests of labor to retain the respect of the Canadian public and not that of some foreign public, said the Premier.

LABOR HOLDS MANY PARADES

Dozen Disputes Settled to One Strike, Says Hon. N. Rogers

(By The Canadian Press)

Canadian labor demonstrated its vigor with Labor Day celebrations in almost every centre of population across the Dominion yesterday.

Parades, athletic events and speeches were the order for trade unionists from one end of the country to the other, while the rest of the population mainly relaxed.

Hon. Norman Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor, sounded the keynote of countless Labor Day addresses when he urged a better public understanding of the constructive side of trade unions.

There was found to be some conflict between unions and employers dealing with wages and hours, since they were functioning within a competitive system, Mr. Rogers told labor leaders at the Canadian National Exhibition. That conflict, he said, invariably was featured prominently in newspapers.

Peace Hasn't Color of War

dl..NNoN wy..Sraund . .ILTIR

"War is unending, peace is not," he said. "Strikes are news; peaceful settlements are not. Peace hasn't the color or fire of war and strife. Perhaps not deliberately but during the recent years there has been suggested that unions are perpetual sources of misunderstanding.

"If do not believe that to be a correct impression. For every single dispute which resulted in strike, at least a dozen have been settled peacefully and satisfactorily."

Referring to its largest labor parade in a decade, with about 10,000 participating, Montreal had a 5,000 march. At London, Ontario, 2,500 paraded to Queen's Park. Hamilton had its Labor Day celebration's field day. Cornwall, scene of one of the most serious general strikes when 1,200 textile workers were out for weeks held its first Labor Day celebration in years with 1,500 parading.

Hepburn Warned

Premier Mitchell Hepburn was warned by J. W. Buckley, secretary of the Toronto district Labor Council, in an address in the C.N.E. grounds, that he was "on the threat of licensing unions or he would have the fight of his biggest fight of his life." Mr. Buckley warned all politicians to "keep their hands off the Trade Union movement."

P. T. Scandrett, representing the British Trade Union Congress, proposed a 50 per cent Government in Britain within 10 years.

MADOC JCT.

Madoc Jct.—On Friday evening Sept. 3rd, a large number of friends and neighbors gathered the home of Mr. and Mrs. George McMullen to honor the newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Reide. Dorothy Mumford, who had just returned home from their wedding trip.

Mrs. Douglas Stapley was then called on to read the following address to Mr. and Mrs. Reide—

Dear Dorothy and Bertie,

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening, after hearing of your recent marriage, to extend to you both our heartiest good wishes for a truly happy voyage upon the sea of matrimonial life. You, Dorothy, have always been a willing worker in our Sunday School and Young People's Society and we could not let this opportunity pass without expressing to you our appreciation of your sterling worth and our sincere wishes for a happy wedded life. A poem entitled "A Word From Old Married Folk" was then read.

On behalf of the Sunday School, friends and neighbors, we ask you and Bertie to accept these gifts.

Signed on behalf of:

Mrs. Bruce Stapley.

Mrs. Warren Barlow

Mrs. Douglas Stapley

Mr. Oliver Stapley

Two large decorated baskets filled with all kinds of beautiful and useful gifts were then brought forward and presented to Mr. and Mrs. Reide.

In a few well chosen remarks both Mr. and Mrs. Reide thanked their friends for the gifts and good wishes and invited all to visit them when they get settled in their new home.

Just then the gathering was treated to a real old time charivari by a number of boys.

After this lunch was served and after a social half hour the evening broke up by singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

TORONTO, Sept. 7.—(CP)—An army of workmen cleared the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition today after the biggest attendance of the year as they swarmed through the Parks and Buildings for Labor Day. Officials reported 178,000 persons clicked through the turnstiles, 26,000 less than last week.

Guests of the directors heard Hon. Norman McL. Rogers, Dominion Minister of Labor, ask for better understanding between labor and capital as a basis for industrial peace. The Labor Government under proper guidance is a "bulwark of democracy", he said.

SPANISH WARSHIPS BATTLE IN MEDITERRANEAN

British, French Warships Ordered to Battle Scene, Supposedly to Patrol Sea

Insurgent Cruiser And 7 Government Ships Fight

GUNFIRE HEARD

Result of Clash Not Ascertained at Algiers

London, Sept. 8 (AP)—Three British destroyers and three French warships sped today to the scene of a Mediterranean naval clash between Spanish Insurgent and Spanish Government ships.

The British destroyers were ordered to the scene, off Tenes, west of Algiers, by the naval command at Gibraltar.

The admiralty in London did not explain the move, but other sources said the ships were ordered to patrol the area "so as to be near possible trouble."

Two French torpedo boats and the French destroyer L'Alphienne put out from Algiers to the vicinity of the engagement.

Loyalist Ship Damaged.

Algiers, Sept. 8 (CP-AP)—A sea scrap between the Insurgent cruiser Canarias and seven Spanish government naval units was reported today from Tenes, on the Algerian coast 130 miles west here.

Gunfire was heard in Tenes but seizure of the clash could not be ascertained.

At Bilbao the Insurgents declared their ship had been damaged in the government cruiser Libertad.

54 DEATHS IN CANADA

Leibel Device Invented by 4th Year Student is Tested

Infantile paralysis which struck Central, Western and Eastern Ontario districts early in June spread through Eastern and Western Canada today to leave a death toll of at least 54 throughout the Dominion. Ontario hardest hit by the disease, had a case list of more than 1,200 while there were 93 in the west and 19 in Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

Steps to check the spread in the eastern province by New Brunswick officials when children were barred from theatres, exhibitions and other places of amusement. In many Ontario centres such rulings already have been enforced while schools have delayed opening of fall terms until the danger has passed.

Seventeen New Cases.

In Toronto, where seventeen new cases were reported yesterday, 396 persons have been afflicted. There have been 23 deaths in the Toronto district. A hopeful sign of a break in the epidemic was seen by Toronto officials when the number of persons appearing at clinics for diagnosis showed a sharp decline and return of cool weather is expected to further help the fight which pervades ordeal for doctors and nurses during the warm spell.

In Western Ontario the London district bore the brunt of the disease with 200 cases. Sporting events there have been cancelled, school closed indefinitely and every safety precaution with their children. A 10-year-old girl and a 60-year-old man died in London yesterday while in Toronto three children died.

300 Chinese Refugees Blown Up by Jap Bombs

Five Railroad Cars Packed With Non - Combatants Blown From Tracks at Singkiang

By JAMES A. MILLS

Shanghai, Sept. 8 (AP)—At least 300 Chinese non-combatants were killed and 400 injured today in one of the worst disasters caused by Japanese sky bombs in the three months of fighting in China.

Five railroad cars packed with Chinese refugees, were blown from their tracks by Japanese bombers at Singkiang Station, 100 miles from Shanghai. Fifteen hundred Chinese were jammed into every inch of the train when the bombs burst.

Doctor Shattered.

Two densely crowded second-class coaches and three third-class cars piled high with refugees, were blasted from the wrecked roadbed and turned over. Many of the occupants not killed by the explosives were crushed to death in the wreckage.

The bombs fell without warning as the train was standing in Singkiang Station, on the line to Nanking. Bodies of the dead were scattered in all directions, some catapulted many feet from the wreck.

Help Reaches Te Scene.

A Chinese spokesman said the bombs tore up long sections of track and damaged a railroad over-pass and water tower.

Red Cross officials left Shanghai to reinforce crews of doctors and nurses already on the scene from the Nanking Chinese Hospital.

The Shanghai office of the Chinese Red Cross Society warned all foreign officials here of the danger to their shipping from Chinese attacks.

The ministry declared Chinese planes and other coastal defences would launch reprisals against Japanese warships in counteract the Japanese blockade of China's south and central coast.

Planes Are Sunk.

Six Chinese civilian sailors were killed and three injured when Japanese bombing planes dropped explosives on the steamer Hwa Tung anchored at Mingbong, 30 miles up the Whangpoo River from Shanghai.

Two of the planes crash were sunk. All, including several French and German ownership, had been tied up at Mingbong since the outbreak of hostilities because the waterfront anchorage was believed safe from attack.

Submarine Halts Another Vessel Near Italian Island in Aegean

London, Sept. 8.— (CP)— Any belief in London the mystery vessels which have terrorized Mediterranean trade routes had ceased their activities was shattered by a torpedo attack on the British Tanker Barrie.

The 2,000-ton vessel was attacked last night by "an unknown battleship" off the coast of North Africa, an agent of Lloyds, the Maritime Underwriting firm, reported from Tunis. The Harpa was in ballast, the agent said, en route to Tunis, the message said, when a torpedo slithered towards her waterline

The torpedo missed its mark and the frightened crew drove the Harpa into La Goulette, not far from Tunis.

In another corner of the Mediterranean, near the fortified Italian island of Rhodes in the southeastern part of the Aegean Sea, the British tanker Woodford reported she was halted by a submarine.

After the challenge yesterday, the vessel was permitted to proceed, an oil company announced.

Both Germany and Italy May Refuse to Attend Sub Parley with Russia

Russian Note Today Repeats Accusation Against Italy

NOTE IS VERY TERSE

Russia Wants to Know Why Germany is Invited

Rome, Sept. 8 (AP)—Soviet Russia told Italy today that the Fascist answer to charges that Italian submarines had sunk two Russian ships in the Mediterranean was unsatisfactory and repeated the grave accusation made in her original note.

The second Soviet note in the Mediterranean crisis growing out of the Spanish Civil War was handed to Count Gleason Ciano, Premier Mussolini's Foreign Minister and son-in-law.

The new communication was considerably briefer than the first and contained a more caustic phrase than the original demand the "intolerable" situation be ended and the Soviet be paid reparations for the two lost vessels.

Italy Not Active.

Italy had rejected the Russian charge and refused to accept the demand made.

Diplomatic circles indicated there was considerable doubt of either the Italian or German participation in the conference called by Great Britain and France to meet Friday to devise means of stamping out the "Piratical" attacks on commercial shipping in the Mediterranean.

If Rebels Attacks

Mussolini's mouthpiece, the newspaper Il Popolo D'Italia, said in a dispatch from London that Italy would find it impossible to attend the conference at Nyon, Switzerland. "If Russia attends," Diplomatic circles considered the dispatch was a practical declaration on Italian policy despite its supposed London origin.

Russia, in accepting the British and French invitation to Nyon, charges against Italy, indignantly asked why Germany—although a Mediterranean seacoast—had been invited, and urged the invitation of the powerful Nazi Reich government.

These Soviet moves, coupled with today's note, made it theoretically likely, diplomats believed that neither Italy nor Germany would accept.

NEW CHEMICAL MAKES FABRICS WATER REPELLANT

Water Can Pass Through Treated Cloth Without Wetting it

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—Spilling the morning coffee in the lap does not even wet clothing treated with a new chemical made from coal and fat, which was exhibited at the American Chemical Society here today.

Straight whiskey is different; it soaks in. But anything made of water runs off—like falling on a duck's back. The new chemical is an attempt to find the all-round water "repellant", something which can be used on all fabrics, that will neither wash out nor be affected by dry cleaning.

The new stuff does all these, said Dr. Peter Chemistry who exhibited it. It is a new laboratory product, not ready for the market they said. It has been used on cotton, wool, silk and rayon.

All of these fabrics become softer to the touch when treated with the coal-fat chemical. It does not coat the fibres, but penetrates inside the fibres. As a result the goods that stand the chemical treatment does not soak into the threads as it goes by.

On a hot day pockets could be filled with ice, and the person inside would feel the perspiration without getting wet.

Wool splashed on these treated fabrics readily slides off like water, with little spotting.

Biarritz, France, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Senora Pancha Gonzalez Roberts of Argentina arose from the Biarritz top flight casino table today with only one of "reverse player" Amleto Battisti's money in her purse.

"I played to win again, me," said Battisti, the Uruguayan. He emerged from the Sunday session with only cake and coffee money.

He had started the afternoon $ 1,000,000 and 8,000,000 francs ($282,000 to $362,000) and with his plan to win back the 41,000,000 he lost at the big table in 1929 had gone haywire.

LARGE BASS CAUGHT BY ROBERT HART

Robert Hart, this city, is finished among the list of other fishermen who can boast of the big ones successfully landed. Fishing off Telegraph Island one day last week end, Mr. Hart hooked a fine specimen of small-mouth bass measuring just 17 inches from nose to tail tip, and five inches in width. No weighing scales were available at the time.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The Flow of wind! How does wind blow? Try letting fly a piece of tissue paper from the top of a precipice. You will find the paper maintaining the most astounding travels. It dives, it flys high, it loops the loop. It slows down, and a moment later picks up speed and soars again. In a flat country it will travel along one course. But even there, its flight will show equilateral that is the speed varying from fast to slow in quick succession. In some cases the variation is as much as 100 per cent from the average speed. For example, in the case of a 40-mile wind, the momentary speeds may be as high as 80 and as low as 20 miles per hour.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 8 (CP)—Pressure is high in the region of the Great Lakes, while a moderate disturbance centred to the immediate northward of Hudson Bay, has a trough of low extending southwestward across the Prairie Provinces to the Northwest States. Another low is the centre off the North Labrador Coast. Thunderstowers have occurred in Northern Manitoba and cherein also showers in Northern Quebec though in other districts the weather has been fair.

Lake Superior—Light to moderate variable winds; fair; cool tonight. Thursday—Moderate winds, mostly southerly, partly cloudy, followed by scattered thunderstowers in western districts.

Manitoba—Southwest to west winds; partly cloudy with a few scattered thunderstowers. Thursday—Fair with not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair tonight and Thursday; not much change in temperature.

Former Victims of Paralysis Gladly Donate Blood to Aid Fight Against Dread Disease

Some years ago an automobile utility General Hospital to make sped furiously down a highway to a hospital twenty-five miles away in a desperate race against time to procure the precious serum which would save the life of a young girl stricken with paralysis.

In her home in Wellington the mother and friends of the victim, Miss Emira Robin began to worry. Then, on the highway in enroute to a Kingston hospital a motor cycle officer saw the car and for life. The serum was procured in time to save the life of the teen-aged girl, but not her limbs.

A few days later Donald Baker, young boy living a scant mile from the Noble house, contacted the same dire illness. A speeding flying automobile defeated the hospital for six weeks the boy gradually recovered and today is one of the two complete cures in Canada.

This afternoon both these former victims, one in a wheel chair and the other a picture of health will give their blood at the Belle-some of the sufferers of the province in the present epidemic. Mrs. Ernest Bowerman, Centre Bayberton, of Jacksonville, Florida, who was stricken with infantile paralysis here at Wellington and who is now the mother of a fine boy, still bears about in a wheel chair, she spent several months at Warm Springs, Georgia, at the Roosevelt Foundation sponsored by President Roosevelt, "anything, she stated, "to relieve those who are victims of the present epidemic. Donald is on one of the happiest persons alive, I would not want to see anyone with the same handicap as mine, and if giving my blood will do any good, I am only too pleased to do it."

An additional number of former victims of the disease contacted by city and district will also give their blood to the clinic which is to start o'clock today. "We are taking blood from anyone who has had the disease, no matter where they come from." Dr. G. S. Cronk, City Medical Health Officer stated today.

CLAIMS LABOR WITH LIBERALS

Premier Hepburn Says Rowe Opposed Repeal of Section 98

Cochrane, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—Unless a Liberal government is returned labor could enjoy the right to organize for collective bargaining and the right to strike, Premier Conservative Leader Earl Rowe had his way labor would soon enjoy the right of free assembly, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said here last night.

Mr. Rowe posed as a friend of labor, but as a member of the Conservative party with a member of the parliament he had steadily opposed repeal of section 98 of the Criminal Code, Mr. Hepburn said. The section, now repealed, prohibited unlawful assembly.

"I want to tell you the fair-minded labor men are with us in our battle against invasion of John L. Lewis and his men from the United States," Mr. Hepburn said. "We can settle our own problems in Canada."

Two Addresses Delivered.

The premier carried his appeal for re-election into Northern Ontario for the first time yesterday with addresses at Kapuskasing and Cochrane. Tonight he speaks at Porcupine and tomorrow at Kirkland Lake and New Liskeard.

Provincial Conservative officials of the Ontario Government successfully overcame the labor problem of the north, the premier told a Liberal convention at Kapuskasing that selected Joseph Hailer as Liberal candidate in Cochrane North for the October 5 Ontario elections.

ROWE OUTLINES PARTY PLATFORM

Asks Hepburn to Deny Liquor Issue Is Finance Campaign

By CP Staff Writer

Barrie, Ont., Sept. 8.—(CP)—In a speech prepared for delivery to conservative policy, Hon. Earl Rowe last night placed before electors the platform of the party if placed in power at the Ontario elections Oct. 6.

Mr. Rowe, leader of the party, announcement was a demand Premier Mitchell Hepburn deny his Liberal campaign was helped from liquor sources.

At his own nomination meeting in the Simcoe Centre riding, the Conservative leader in detail the platform planks after challenging Premier Hepburn to deny the campaign was financed by a gallonage tax levied on liquor sales. Mr. Rowe called "bedevilled" the liquor administration and "a disgrace to Ontario." The party would return the principle of control to sale and distribution of liquor.

Power Treaty Favored With U. S.

He announced the Conservatives would co-operate with the Dominion government in obtaining the treaty with the United States "for the development of power sites on the International Rapids" and in ensuring an adequate supply of power for the industrial development of Ontario.

Two special government departments would be set up, one to attend to Northern Ontario's problems and the other to encourage the tourist industry. Law and order would have to be maintained by labor organizations but the worker would be free to join any association he chose.

Alcoholism in U. S. Called 'Great Chronic Emergency'

Special Hospital Wards And Education Urged to Fight Problem

IS CALLED DISEASE

Boston, Sept. 8 (AP)—Concluding that alcoholism in the United States is a "great chronic emergency", a medical study today suggested special hospital wards, and general education, to combat the problem.

Fifty thousand cases of alcoholism, admitted to the Boston City Hospital among its patients since 1906, formed the basis of the study. One of the findings was that "only the more cases were admitted to the hospital during prohibition than ever before, the number has increased still further since repeal.

Major Problems of Science.

The findings, the authors of the study say, indicate alcoholism is a disease requiring treatment as a major scientific problem."

Findings of the study were released in the New England Journal of Medicine. Dr. Merrill Moore, associate in psychiatry, Harvard Medical School, and Miss Mildred O. Gray, research fellow in neurology, Harvard Medical School, supervised the work.

The authors have not reached a final conclusion on remedies for the problem but, they say, indications point to a plan of medical and hospital designed solely for alcoholic patients. They also advocate an educational campaign.

Foundationally, say the authors of the study, alcoholism may be increasing because "people today are possibly not built to stand the type of life they are having to live, and alcohol is the easiest escape to go to wrong with the human nervous system and the mind."

Among the facts the journal listed from the study:

Deaths from alcoholism are increasing out of proportion to the increase in alcoholic admissions.

In the years since repeal of prohibition, the annual deaths from alcoholism at the hospital doubled.

The majority of alcoholic patients treated are males, who outnumber females seven to one. Men are treated in largest numbers between the ages of 36 to 40, women between 41 and 45.

Hailed As Heroes

The walls burst asunder with a terrific explosion and the troops returned to their regiments and then hailed as heroes by the city alongside their comrades who hailed them heroes.

Japanese officials and the engineers' daring had made the capture possible and saved the day for the Japanese.

Shanghai, September 8 (AP)—Strategic City of Paoshan, 12 miles north of Shanghai, was wrested from its Chinese defenders early this today after Japanese engineers had blasted a way through its 40-foot high walls with bombs strapped to their backs.

A Japanese officer who witnessed the historic blasting said the Northern Shanghai front, said the Japanese troops "performed nothing so much as monkeys as

City and District News

PLEA FOR HELP IN CANNING

Telephone calls almost hourly carry the plea for assistance in handling the large tomato crop from members of the Red Cross Unit at the local Employment Office. This morning urgent calls came for help for seven people and Mrs. Nod Bland pleaded for canning assistance.

Other appeals ask for two male cooks for out of town work. Day men are needed to help in cleaning of the city hall with factories and farmers utilizing practically every available source of labour is evident.

CLINTON ROSE MOVES TO CITY

Clinton Rose of Napanee who was recently appointed supervisor of canning factories in this district, has left Napanee with his family for this city where he will in future reside. Mr. Rose is an enthusiastic member of the Masonic craft, belonging to Union Lodge No. 8 of Napanee. Mr. Rose is a member of the Napanee Chapter No. 119, Order of the Eastern Star in which Order she has been privileged to hold office.

LIVE BAIT SCARCE

Streams and creeks of the northern section of the county are being scoured at the present time by commercial men in search of the city as the live bait question becomes more acute, and the demand rises due to the increasing demands by tourists and local anglers. Though grasshoppers and frog bait have been used freely during the past few weeks as have dragonflies biting again, chub and sucker minnows have become the popular form of bait for the larger fish.

FAILURE TO BOARD CHEESE QUESTIONED

The fact that a number of cheese factories on the Kingston Cheese Board have not been boarding their cheese of late caused Wm. McCreary, manager here, of this city to raise the question at the regular meeting of the Board as to whose factories are not boarding their cheese in the regular manner. As a result, Steele Sproule, president of the Kingston Board and M. S. McCreary, secretary, were appointed to investigate the matter and report at the next meeting.

H. CLARKE GETS SALMON TROUT WITH WORM BAIT

Mr. Howard Clarke while fishing for bass at Long Lake, Prince Hill, last Sunday had a rather unusual experience. Mr. Clarke was fishing in about fourteen feet of water using dew worms for bait. Presently he felt a heavy load on his line and after a brief struggle succeeded in landing a fine three and a half pound salmon trout.

Trout are not generally caught in this manner at this time of the year, it takes a worm on a June Bug spinner and Mr. Clarke's catch is unusual by reason of that fact.

As Cochrane the premier said he expected soon to be engaged with reapportionment for the new federal and the Conservative leader made a "desperate effort" to find ground for criticism. Mr. Rowe had accused him of causing the infantile paralysis epidemic during the past years for the most free in Northern Ontario although it was not confined to that territory, the premier said.

An "inaccurate statement" had been published by Mr. Rowe criticising the government financial record, Mr. Hepburn said. "At the end of it he said: 'You can trust Rowe,' am in my 84th year." TRAFFIC CASE IN TRENTON COURT

Sentence Suspended on Driver From Toronto

Trenton, Sept. 8.— (Special) — John McIntee, Toronto appeared on Trenton police court yesterday before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., charged with operating a car in a manner to cause grievous bodily harm to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Earles of Sidney Township, and Master Jerry Jackson of Ferrisburgh. The charge was the result of an accident which occurred in Trenton on July 4th, when Mrs. Gilbert Earles and Master Jerry Jackson were severely injured, and Mr. McIntee escaped without a scratch.

McIntee pleaded guilty to the charge and was given one year's suspended sentence, his driver's license was cancelled for one year and the costs of court amounting to $18.00. He was represented in court with Mr. and Mrs. Earles. Chas. A. Payne, K.C., appeared on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Earles and H. J. Smith for Mr. McRea.

Motorist is Held By Provincial Police

Arrested on a charge of toe theft of a tire, tube and rim, a man who police say is Willis Barnes, Niagara Falls, was taken into custody on Highway No. 2 at Cobourg Creek yesterday.

Barnes was arrested by Provincial Constable Everett Smith following the finding of a tire, tube and rim, the property of Leonard Reid, Sidney, hidden in a clump of bushes near the road. It is alleged Barnes was changing a tire from the parked car.

Barnes denied any knowledge of the tire and rim found in the bushes, but was found in the act of changing a tire from the car and was arrested and charged. He is being held in custody, police report this morning.

Wrong Name Used In Accident Report

In reporting the accident which occurred Monday morning at the corner of Front and Station streets wherein an automobile driven by Mr. John F. Houston of this city, was struck by another car, the name of the driver operating which was inadvertently used instead of Mr. John Houston. Mr. Fred Houston, who is the owner of the automobile quite today revealed the fact that the collision occurred when the injuries developed from the accident and Mr. John Houston, who is also suffering from injuries from shock, bruises and stiffness, is able to attend office duties today. Those who witnessed the accident said that it occurred a minute after the automobile had turned over several times Mr. Houston was able to leave the car and was not injured, apparently not seriously injured.

W. M. S. Accepts Its Allocation

Belleville District Objective is $17,000 Out of $77,000 For Conference

The Bay of Quinte Conference of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada convened at Bloomfield Line Lecture College, Whitby, with the President Mrs. R. O. Johnston, Napanee in the chair. Mrs. J. Gillies brought echoes from Dominion Board and each secretary presented her department. The delegates to conference 1937 will be the president of the Presbyterial where the conference is held. Mrs. W. J. McPherson and others are nominating committee for two years. The spring executive will meet at Kingston in April, 1938.

The allocation of $77,000 for 1938 was presented as follows: Belleville $17,000; Cobourg $6,000; Kingston $12,500; Lindsay $8,000; Oshawa $11,300; Peterboro $9,500; Renfrew $12,700.

Mrs. W. L. Smythe, B.A., Peterboro was Dean of the school for leaders and gave devotional lectures on "The church and the Kingdom." Classes were taught by Mrs. Theo. Tricky, Mrs. C. R. Hamilton, Miss Helen Day, Mrs. E. J. Pratt, Mrs. J. L. Callan, Mrs. H. T. Thompson, Miss Olive Hamilton.

Special addresses were given by Miss Linda Murray, "A tour of our Mission Fields"; Rev. J. A. Armstrong, D.D., "The church and Missions"; Mrs. D. M. Rose "India and its people"; Mrs. N. J. White and Mrs. R. M. Seymour "Education through drama." Rev. W. F. Banister, "Missionary Education for Young People;" Miss Evelyn Mitchell "Intimate Pictures of Our Work"; Miss Pearl Chiang B.A. "Greetings from China" and Dr. Gladys Cumningham, B.A. "Why Missions."

Over 130 delegates were in attendance, the new study books and Missionary problems were discussed and all received a vast amount of knowledge and inspiration.

Charles L. Walters Chosen High Secretary of I. O. F.

Mr. Frank Miller is Appointed High Orator

I. O. F. CONVENTION

At the last biennial convention of the Eastern Ontario High Court of the Independent Order of Foresters held on Labor Day in the Orange Hall, Peterboro, one of Belleville's prominent citizens in the person of Mr. Charles L. Walters was significantly honored with an unanimous election to the position of High Secretary. This means that Belleville will now be the main executive seat for many important fraternal operations of the I. O. F. in this area.

Another popular appointment was that of the local Chief Ranger and district deputy of the lodge, Mr. Frank Miller to that of High Orator. Mr. Fred H. Henry acted as one of the sentinners for the occasion. Others of the delegation from this city were Mr. C. O. Herity, Past High Chief Ranger, Mr. Fryer B. Metzger, Past High Councillman, Mr. F. Miller and Mr. Sam J. Fields, Recording Secretary of Court Moira No. 33.

Dr. Parlows of Ottawa, had the opposition in his election to the H.C.R. degree succeeding the retiring chief Add. C. F. Trowbridge, Kingston, both of whom have at various times appeared here in official capacities.

Monday evening in the spacious banquet hall of the Russ House the closing session was held. After a very sumptuous repast had been served in an exquisite manner the usual toast list was covered. Inspirational addresses by the new officers were delivered by Mr. J. E. Hayes of the organizing department and by Mr. Thos. Thompson, Assistant Supreme Chief Ranger. Mr. Hayes was formerly active hereabouts as head of the Royal Templars of Temperance before entering the service of the fraternities was consummated a few years ago. Mr. Robertson again in his excellent style stressed the value of fraternity, the functions of social training, the importance of obligations and vows repeatedly undertaken into at the altar ceremonies, as a factor in the preservation of world peace and the maintenance of the spirit of good will toward the prevention of war especially on the North American continent in contrast to that of Europe with its many racial hatreds and prejudices. Referring to the I.O.F. he pictured its protection to widows and orphans, its business enterprises in connection with the Orphanage at Oakville, Ont., the Old People's Home, the Cancer Clinic and Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Chilliwack.

Greetings of a welcome nature and kindly appreciation of entertainment were extended by Aldermen Dutton and Mahee of Peterboro, by the retiring Mayor and Mayor Macdonald. Brockville was selected as the next place of meeting in response to a pressing invitation. The High convention proved to be most gratifying to all concerned.

CAR ACCESSORIES REPORTED STOLEN

Licence Plates, Tire, Tube And Rim Are Missing

The theft of automobile accessories was quite prevalent in Belleville and district, Sunday night, Hillcrest Av., reported the theft of his licence plates, number 1938 to the police early today. The plates were secured to Mr. Wright's motor car when he left them there, when he went home this morning. The car had been parked in front of Mr. Wright's home.

Henry Johnston, 67 East Dundas street, reported the theft of a tire, tube and rim from a car in the driveway along side of his home last night, but when he attempted to use the vehicle this morning, a tire, tube and rim were missing. Also a tire, tube and rim from the rear were gone. The parties responsible for the theft of the tube and tire merely jacked up the car and brazenly walked off with the "rubber". They didn't overlook the "extra spare tube," lamented Mr. Johnston as he reported the theft today.

Local police were asked to assist in the recovery of a 1927 model Chevrolet car reported stolen from Oshawa early last evening. The vehicle was brown in color and carried Ontario licence plates number 66H1. Whether or not the Oshawa car thieves are responsible for the theft of Mr. Wright's licence plates, in order to change licences and avoid suspicion and arrest, is puzzling police today.

A bicycle found abandoned in Belleville yesterday is still in the custody of the police and awaiting its rightful owner.

ORDERS POSTMORTEM IN TWEED FATALITY

The inquest looking into the death of John P. Stokes, Tweed Hydro Electric employee, who was electrocuted in Tweed earlygyesterday, opened in that village before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson. Following the taking of indentifying evidence, Dr. Robertson ordered a postmortem, the hearing then being adjourned until Sept. 13th.

Obituary

GARY M. GRAVES

Gary Morris Graves, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Graves, this city was born at Hamilton, Ont., on Sept. 6th, 1937, and died in Kingston General Hospital on Friday last, Sept. 3rd.

The funeral, Sept. 4th, at 4 o'clock p.m. from the family home, 204 Station street, Belleville, was in charge of the Rev. Canon Greene, assisted by the Vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

The interment was private.

The sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement is extended.

MRS. KAYE A. JONES (Calgary)

Mrs. Kate Ann Jones, widow of James Foster Jones, at one time of Belleville, passed away recently, Sept. 7th, at Calgary, Alberta, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Charles W. Jones, who is Manager of the Dominion Bank, this city.

The late Mrs. Jones had reached the advanced age of 87 years. She was born in Belleville, Ont., and for many years resided in Belleville and were well-known and highly esteemed by many friends who will regret to learn of her death. Her husband the late James Foster Jones died the past five years Mrs. Jones had made her home with her son at Calgary.

Surviving her are one son, Mr. Charles W. Jones, Manager of the Dominion Bank, Calgary; three daughters, Mrs. Frank J. Goodfellow, Montreal; Mrs. Richard Carolina; one sister, Mrs. Ellen Bates, Toronto.

Interment will be made at Belleville. The funeral announcement is being issued by Brighton today.

BELLEVILLE BAND TO PLAY AT BRIGHTON

Belleville Municipal Band under the leadership of Lieut. Rod Johnston will journey to Brighton tomorrow night where they will give a concert in the park and for the newly-formed Brighton Band.

Composed practically of new members, with the exception of a few veterans the new Brighton Band is in the process of organization. Members of the local organization and their musical leader are giving their services in aiding their fellow musicians to create this form of municipal entertainment.

but not before they have passed Montreal and Winnipeg Medical men to cease giving publicity to proprietary cures. This gave rise to the belief the epidemic was subsiding.

Latest device in helping the sufferers is the Leibel respirator, the result of the labors of Bernard Leibel, fourth-year medical student at Mich. University of Toronto. Dr. R. T. Mcchlin, Ontario Deputy Minister of Health, said last night there would be no further orders for "iron lungs" until the Leibel device has been tested.

Tests Made Today.

Leibel and his associates at the Banting Institute consider the respirator an improvement on the Drinker type of respirator which operates the lungs when the patient becomes too weak to do so. The medical student produced the new respirator while using a heart pump, suddenly realizing this might be used as a weapon in respiratory paralysis cases.

Six Second Invitations.

Russia, Egypt, Greece, Rumania, and Bulgaria have accepted invitations to attend. Acceptances from Turkey, Yugoslavia and Albania were expected today. Italy and Germany have not yet replied.

The conference will meet in a display of fireworks. Russia permits it be operated by electricity or by a crank.

British Cabinet Meets.

London, Sept. 8 (CP)—Their holidays interrupted, members of the cabinet met today to consider plans in the Mediterranean. They had before them the plan which Foreign Secretary Eden, as chief British delegate, proposes to submit to the Nyon conference.

The newspaper Popolo d'Italia of Mussolini's party usually voices Premier Mussolini's opinions—declares Italy would not attend unless Russia is excluded.

The Populaire of Paris, of which Leon Blum was Premier, said today, joins the hectic chorus. The newspaper charges that "Stalin is only telling Italy what all the world knows, namely, that it was Italian submarines that torpedoed merchant ships in the Mediterranean and Barbarellas."

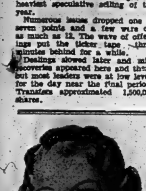
CHINESE BEGIN COUNTER-CHARGE

Abandon Defensive While Japanese Struggle For Advance

Shanghai, Sept. 7 (AP)—The Chinese army abandoned the defensive today and counter-charged at Japanese lines fringing the Yangtze and Whangpoo Rivers on the northern Shanghai battle front.



Flames across all northwestern Shanghai lighted the path tonight of a fierce Japanese effort to batter down Chinese resistance that has brought their Shanghai offensive to a standstill.

Dealings slowed down and mild recoveries appeared here and there, but most leaders were at low levels for the day near the final period. Transfers approximated 1,500,000 shares.

Madoc and District

Madoc, Sept. 8—The September meeting of St. Peter's Presbyterian W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. W. E. Maddocks with a splendid attendance of members and visitors. The meeting was in charge of Mrs. A. West and Mrs. Johnson. A hymn was sung followed by a Bible reading on "Titles of Honor" by Mrs. F. E. Jenkins. Mrs. R. Watson led in prayer. The President, Mrs. McCaffrey took charge of the business period. Miss Maddocks read the minutes of last meeting and also the roll call. She read a letter of appreciation from Mrs. W. Ellis, of Peterboro, for the gift given to her by the society. Mention was made of the great loss in the removal of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wells to Peterboro. The treasurer reported $2.85 collection for July. There were thirteen visits made to sick and shut-ins.

Mrs. Johnson gave a fine resume of the high lights of the missionary council in Toronto and Mrs. McCaffrey gave a report of the Presbyterian Missionary Society of the World who met in Montreal in June at the same time as the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. Much interesting information was given on the trip to European countries. Rev. W. A. Hamilton gave a short appreciation of the value of the Missionary Society and closed the meeting with prayer. The assistant hostesses were Mrs. M. Allen and Miss Wright.

Trinity United Church W.M.S. held their September meeting in the school room of the church on Thursday, Sept. 2nd. Mrs. E. Hamm, president in charge opened the meeting with hymn 377 and led in prayer. The theme for the meeting was "The Call to Worship", with a Bible lesson taken by Mrs. H. McMechan. The Devotional Leaflet, "The Unchanging Christ" was read by Miss Wood. The business period was conducted by Mrs. Hamm. Reports from the Christian Stewardship department were ably given by Mrs. M. Fox and Pastor Department by Mrs. A. McMechan. Mrs. Hamm explained the new book of study for the year, "The New Church Faces the New World." It was decided to pack a bale of clothing for Mission in the West and mentioned sick friends were asked to bring their donations to the church. The president closed the meeting with prayer.

Miss Thornton Love, of Belleville, spent a few days in Madoc during the week.

Miss Vivian [illegible] left on Tuesday for Peterboro, where she will attend the [illegible] Business College.

The spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Heath was the scene of a happy gathering when forty guests of Springbrook and Stirling and Rawdon Women's Associations attended an "At Home" sponsored by Bethel Ladies' Aid.

Mrs. Harold Elliott, President of Bethel presided and the service opened with a hymn. Mrs. J. E. Beckel offered prayer. Mrs. Elliott graciously welcomed the guests and Mrs. Florence Bateman, president of Springbrook W.A. replied Mrs. Clifford Clancy read a Temperance reading. Mabel and Bobby Elliott contributed a vocal number. Mrs. Ernest Mallory gave a humorous selection. Mrs. Sid Mason delighted with a solo.

Mrs. J. A. Lott, Pranford, Honorary District President and District Representative was the guest speaker and in her address she stressed the need of a spiritual atmosphere of W.A. workers and brought the Conference Study book alive itself if the spiritual side came first she urged the ladies to read the Bible and let their ability as Christ did His ability to heal well and work.

At the close of this fine address the assembly joined in singing a hymn for her message. Mrs. John Heagle, Wellman's, sang a solo, Mrs. A. W. Harding, Springbrook, accompanied with one of Dr. Gunn's, "Homely Hosiery." Mrs. Frank Jeffery, Stirling, sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Mrs. Heagle closed with Auld Lang Syne. A delicious lunch of salads, cake and coffee was served and over eleven dollars was realized.

"TIRED" ALL THE TIME

She felt miserable—had backache—was nervous—was always tired—in spells. She thought it was her kidneys, said a friend. Instead of Dodd's Kidney Pills. At once she took Dodd's. The "tired all the time" feeling was replaced by energy, vigor and restful sleep. Headache, backache, tiredness and other kidney troubles disappeared.

Hepburn's BROKEN Promises

Honourable Mitchell F. Hepburn's record of broken promises is the greatest betrayal of the Electorate in the history of Ontario. Here is only a partial list of his promises easily made and easily broken:

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 1

"I definitely am going to cut the cost of administration by fifty per cent.," Toronto, April 25th, 1934.

To pay for his reckless expenditures, Mr. Hepburn found it necessary to collect in taxes for the year 1937 $92,221,809.00, which was an increase of $40,838,905.51.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 2

"If we are elected we will pay the debt when it is," Sarnia, May 14th, 1934.

Mr. Hepburn's own budget speech gave the public debt at $656,588,000.00 plus the $33,596,077.71 he took from the Hydro treasury and the $25,000,000.00 now being spent in gigantic pre-election road-building program, makes the actual Ontario debt $715,209,699.28. This is an increase under Hepburn's regime, of $100,817,371.56.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 3

"We will pay as we go," Kingston, May 24th, 1934.

The figures above show that every working day since he assumed office, Premier Hepburn fell more than $100,000 short of keeping this promise.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 4

"A string of cold storage warehouses across Ontario would go far to solve agricultural problems," Barrie, May 25th, 1934.

Not a single warehouse was ever built or projected.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 5

"Relief for the farmer was promised here today by Mitchel F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader," Toronto Telegram report, Sharbot Lake, May 23rd, 1934.

Following the election, Mr. Hepburn told the farmers they "must stand on their own feet". They he wiped out livestock bonuses, grants to aid farmers and stopped loans to farmers.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 6

"If we are going to have an industry (agriculture) that is sound, we must widen our markets," Westport, June 4th, 1934.

Following his election, Premier Hepburn closed Ontario House in London, England, which had created markets thereby increasing Ontario farmers' income by $10,000,000. He also closed the Marketing Agencies at Montreal, Winnipeg and in the Maritimes.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 7

"A special session of the Legislature to deal with farm relief problems immediately after the election," Windsor, June 15th, 1934.

No special session of the legislature was called.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 8

"We are going to have a minimum wage for men," Windsor, May 4th, 1934.

Three years — and nothing yet.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 9

"He promised a parade of dismissed civil servants from Queen's Park that would pale any Toronto twelfth of July march."—Globe report, Toronto, February, 16th, 1934.

In his first 21 months a total of 1,947 civil servants were dismissed by Mr. Hepburn. They included clerks, messengers and cleaning women. But in the same period 1,930 Hepburn henchmen were hired to step into their jobs. In his present vote-catching campaign, Mr. Hepburn has materially increased the civil service staff.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 10

"If he (Hepburn) and a Liberal Government be given answer next Tuesday, one of his first acts will be to call a meeting of the legislature to deal with unemployment" Windsor, June 16th, 1934.

No special meeting of the legislature was called and no constructive program has been applied to the reduction of unemployment.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 11

"I won't let them interject a religious issue into this campaign." Hepburn statement, June 13th, 1934.

Within a few months of his election to office, Premier Hepburn broke faith with both the Separate and Public School supporters by passing a clumsily-drafted and unworkable piece of school legislation which he subsequently repealed.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 12

"The Tory administration is not giving fair preferences to the returned man at all," Beamsville, April 23rd, 1934.

On attaining office, Mr. Hepburn dismissed 552 war veterans and replaced them with Hepburn followers.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 13

"If the Liberal Party is placed in power a vast colonization policy in Northern Ontario will be put into effect to take care of the unemployment problem," Ottawa, June 19th, 1934.

None has been put into effect or projected.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 14

"We won't have to charge six cents a gallon gasoline tax," Perth, May 10th, 1934.

"Wouldn't it be a relief if the gasoline tax were cut from six cents to two cents," Vankleek Hill, June 5th, 1934.

No reduction has been made in the gasoline tax.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 15

Mr. Hepburn declared there would be "forced conversion of Government loans in order to lighten the burden of interest charges," Ingersoll, April 5th, 1934.

No forced conversion of loans has been made.

HEPBURN'S Broken Promise No. 16

Mr. Hepburn, protesting employment of lawyer friends of the Government, said: "There were plenty of Provincial salaried legal men available," Renfrew, Toronto Globe, June 8th, 1934.

Within eight months of the election, Arthur G. Slaght, Liberal lawyer, alone received $32,125 of Ontario taxpayers' money. Other payments made to lawyer friends of the Government in this same short period of time were as follows: Leslie Duncan, $16,571; N. F. Newton, $5,395; J. C. McRuer, $4,147 and J. C. M. German, $1,848.

HEPBURN HAS BETRAYED EVERYONE!

This is only a partial list of Honourable Mitchell F. Hepburn's promises made and broken. Mr. Hepburn has broken faith with labour and capital — farmer and city dweller — employed — Protestant and Roman Catholic — returned man and civil servant —

The Great Effacer

By NANCY RHODES

An advertising woman apt phrases came easily to the tip of Hannah Hewitt's facile pen. Long experience brought to her mind a happy, a quotation or a paragraph. So, as she sat in the shining mahogany and plate glass office provided by Limbaver and Sons—the most complete department store in Massachusetts,—for their advertising manager, her firm while hand scribbled a phrase on the clean blotter before her.

"Vengeance is mine," she wrote, "Vengeance is mine, Miss Hannah Hewitt."

Strange that she should feel so free from all emotion, when, just beyond the polished mahogany door walled the man who had ruined—well, perhaps not ruined, but certainly thwarted her life. She had no doubt that the man had come to look for a job as copy writer. Well, let him wait. The stock of seeing her behind this door would be the keener for his having stared tensely for five minutes at the closed door.

Let him wait as she had waited that morning 10—or was it 15 years ago? Time had a way of skimming by as one grew older. It seemed but a short time since she and John Schumaker had been young in love, and engaged. John had wanted to marry her before she had known him a month. Impetuous, headstrong John. Couldn't live today and let the future worry along by itself.

But Hannah had shown him that it would be folly to get married before he had another raise in salary and had sailed a thousand dollars away in the bank. John had protested passionately at first but had finally agreed.

If John had been steadier things wouldn't have been so bad. But there was no denying John didn't go routine. One might as well ask the sun not to rise as to punch a time clock. He threw up his job one day in a fit of pique and was forced to accept another at a slightly lower salary after a month or two of idleness. Next morning he had had sailed for Hawaii, leaving a note for Hannah which declared he had gone stale and that the money spent on change of scenery and climate was well invested, for he would come back pained for the biggest year of his career as star copy writer of his office.

John came back changed. Hannah was frightened. There was nothing she could put a finger on and say: "It is here. Time is the culprit." He was no longer does or says this or that."

Hannah awakened on her wedding morning with a sharp fear in her heart. Small unpleasant incidents flashed before her mind — times when John had tried to tell her something and she had held him off in panicky knowledge that what he was about to say would hurt her. Even before the clock ticked relentlessly past the hour when he was supposed to call for her she knew he would not come. "Send Mr. Schumaker in now," she said to the girl who answered the buzzer.

He came in almost timidly. A tall blonde man whose shoulders drooped in a beaten way. His blue near-sighted eyes blinked in surprise as he recognized Hannah. A dull red crept under his sallow skin.

To her amazement Hannah felt herself getting to her feet, her hand gripping his cordially. "I'm not even angry," she thought wonderingly.

"This is mighty decent of you, Hannah, after everything," said John Schumaker.

"Let's lay that ghost, John," Hannah heard herself saying calmly.

He shrugged and made a gesture with upturned palms.

"I'm looking for a job. Got to have one. Wife with four kids can't afford to be too finicky."

"How old are your children?" she asked in an awkward silence.

He was off. It was as though someone had lighted a lamp behind his undiscriminated features. There was a flicker of pride as he drew a snapshot he carried in his pocket. And Carol was the child's wonderful girl. Nothing worried him. She could laugh even his unemployment off.

"It was a rotten trick." He switched suddenly and Hannah knew that he referred to the desertion of her on that day so long ago. "But you'd never been happy with me. I'd driven you crazy. could see it. I was doing things to me that flares now and then. You would have been unhappy —"

Hannah nodded wordlessly, knowing that he spoke the truth. They sat silently for a few minutes, then Hannah took a card from a pigeonhole and wrote rapidly across the back.

"Take this over to Watkins of Black and Black's. They need a copy writer. Tell them I've got the job."

After he had gone she sat staring unseeingly before her while the pencil traveled over Friday's sale dummy.

"Then heals everything. Everything . . ." she wrote. The great effacer. The great effacer."

And she felt suddenly very old and tired. . . .

PERIOD OF COMPLETE QUIET

At the beginning of the school term it is interesting to parents and teachers to hear the words of Dr. Robert A. Fraser, chief medical director of the New York Life Insurance Company who advocates one hour of complete quiet in the home after supper as necessary to accomplish much towards helping a child to master his school work as almost anything the family can do.

"It is unreasonable," says Dr. Fraser, "to expect that a child can concentrate on his lessons in the midst of the ordinary distractions common to most homes. Not only are school grades likely to suffer, but the child's nervous and physical condition can be affected. Whether we realize it or not, the radio, laughter, conversation, singing, any and all of these constitute disturbances that are almost insurmountable for the average child when he has school-work to do."

Fathers and mothers should cooperate with the child, Dr. Fraser feels, and see to it that a quiet hour is strictly and regularly enforced. Let it begin about a half an hour after the evening meal, after the dishes and other household tasks are out of the way, and then for the space of one hour the radio should be quiet, there should be no conversation between members of the family, no singing or piano playing, no sound of any kind that the family can avoid. Under such conditions the child will be able to concentrate on his schoolwork and get the greatest benefit from the time spent on his books.

A child should study in a room by himself, when possible, and Dr. Fraser recommends giving the child a desk of his own, where he can keep his belongings with the understanding that no one will molest them. The desk need not be an expensive affair. Even a couple of packing cases, with simple alterations and a little paint, can be made to serve. Equip the desk with good light and a suitable chair, and have the child use it for all his studying and homework.

"Most parents," says Dr. Fraser, "make a mistake in offering too much help with the child's homework. Don't try to be a teacher. The chances are you will be doing more harm than good. Methods of teaching have changed markedly in the past twenty years, in both elementary and high schools, and in all likelihood the parent will not understand what system is being used with his child and will attempt to explain the subject as it was taught to himself.

"The result is inevitable. Either the child is bewildered and unable to understand, or there is a clash of wills between parent and child over which method to use. Either way, the outcome is detrimental."

SUCCESS

The case of the $35 a week man and the man who is paid $100 a week is made out in the New York Times in a review of a study by Dr. F. L. Wells of the Psychological Laboratory, Boston. Dr. Wells says that the latter is in most cases really worth more than the first man. Dr. Wells finds the difference in this, that the higher paid group has more imagination.

The Times says that Dr. Wells will admit that often persons in B group are often found in Group A, and vice versa because of "external factors" and that there may also be internal factors. The editor says—"Doubtless there are many men who just don't want to take the trouble to be what the world calls successful. Men may differ as to what constitutes success. We need not be so simple-minded as to say that money does not matter. Money does matter. It can be used to purchase leisure, freedom from petty vexations, privacy, ease of mind. But money, like every other commodity, usually has to be bought and paid for. There must be some men like Thoreau in every generation who don't believe it is worth what it costs. Thoreau lived well, according to his lights, on something less than fifty cents a week, though he certainly had more than a hundred dollars' worth of imagination.

"It may be suggested that the more genuinely civilized a society is the more kinds of success it will recognize. It will, of course, recognize its eminent thinkers and doers—it has to. But it may also recognize its success of individuals who determine what is for them most worth while in life, whether it is raising bees or reading books or fishing, and then arrange matters so that they can give most of their time to doing what they most like to do. That takes gumption, even though its financial returns may lie in the lower brackets. And it is not necessarily harmful to society. A community in which nearly every one was doing what he rather liked to do might be quite satisfactory and its fruits highly imaginative. Will not some new Karl Marx write a treatise on "Lack of Capital" and point the way toward a revolution more peaceful than those now brewing in the world's black and red pots?

THE PASSING MINUTE

Leave thes enigmas of philosophy,
The Where and Wherefore to men tripled-cursed
By thievish time, mirage, and their own thirst,
That way is marked with bones for all to see!

Our simple obligation is to be
Until, astoundingly, we are dispersed
To spiral in the wind; and at that worst
The air will hold the shape of you and me.

Forget, therefore the hour the moments build,
A little circle dark against the sun,—
For nothing will avail you! One by one
The moments will escape and we be killed:
But you may circumvent the passing minute.
Enter it carelessly, and live within it.

WHERE THE POLITICIANS CEASE FROM TROUBLING AND THE WEARY ARE AT REST—may very well be a popular song in Washington, seat of United States government just now. Seemsif government of the people for the people, by the people, must have perished with Abraham Lincoln for government at Washington now seems a battle of politicians for the spoils, and little more. Here's what the observer for Time magazine has to say of the political battleground as he sees it:

"Last week, when after 229 days the 75th Congress finally adjourned it had indeed proved efficient, but in ways that no one had anticipated. Far from churning out a record quantity of important legislation it had turned out almost none. Far from advancing the President's program it had all but stopped it in its tracks. But if the 75th Congress positive achievements were somewhat negative, its negative achievements were sensationally positive. Last week, casting up the balance, politicians unanimously agreed that whatever Congress had done in 1937, what it had not done was infinitely more important, so important that some believed the President would call a special session in the fall.

HUSBANDS WERE DISCUSSED AT A WOMEN'S MEETING AT WARKWORTH recently. The roll call was varied by each member on responding being required to state "one characteristic I desire in a husband." A good time was had by all, but the admirable qualities of husbands, if any, were not appreciably increased by the symposium, and there is ground for suspicion that for husbands generally the meeting was not a success for after hearing each woman present recite what she desired most in a husband the dear wives went home in a mood which no one husband could ever hope to satisfy, for in the mind's eye of each wife present at the meeting was formed a composite husband possessing all the virtues and desirabilities envisioned by a group of women bent upon producing a perfect man, a man without guile, who smilingly did all the chores, stayed home nights and never sassed back, and all that—in their minds. Summing up the desires expressed by the women at Warkworth the husband they would love the best would be "the cheerful home-loving husband." Sounds fine, but we remember an old-fashioned wife who was said to have remarked to a sympathizing neighbor: "Shucks if the husband did not run wild once in a while the women would have no one to mother and cuddle and forgive, on the mother hen principle." Next meeting should be devoted to revealing the most undesirable things detested in a husband. The merry wives of Warkworth have started something—let the husbands of the land beware.

Today is the anniversary of the taking of Sebastopol and the surrender of Canada to England by the French.

It is expected that there will be witnessed at the Agricultural Park tomorrow afternoon one of the greatest struggles that ever took place on the baseball field. The hotel keepers and a scrub team will go nine rounds for a decision. Both teams have been selected with great care and no one will be allowed to play who has seen a baseball since he left school. The penalties for catching fly balls, making base hits, and stealing bases are heavy. The following will compose the teams: Scrubs — George Fax, Charles Clarke, F. M. McKown, F. Lewis, J. Harry, W. Goldsmith. Tom Nash, George H. Grills and Newton Conley, Henry Foster, spare man. The Hotel team—Capt. Smith, James Mackie, W. Stump, F. Curry, W. A. Taylor, J. P. Baird, Charles Hunter, Lee Ketcheson, Bob Foy, George Johnson spare man.

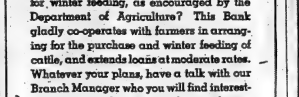
Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was in his private chair smoking and I was on the floor thinking, and pop said, Why all this deep thought?

My conscience is hurting me, I said, and pop said, Well, that sounds serious, maybe you better try rubbing it with a little honest confession. What have you been up to? he said.

I had a fite with Shorty Judge, I said, and pop said, He's smaller than you and the strong should never oppress the weet.



Well jimminy, pop, am I suppose to stand there and leave him pull me a egg fried egg? I said, and pop said, Why not? You know very well you are not a fried egg of any age, so you should consider it beneath your dignity to even notice the assertion. You're such a big dog calmly ignore a little dog that's yapping at it, whereupon the little dog becomes abashed and quiets down, or at least it quiets down. And it's the same way with big nations and little nations. If the big nations would let the little nations yap a little, there would be a lot more peace in the world and possibly a few less taxes. So dont oppress little nations, I mean little boys, he said.

Well, holy smokes, pop, I didn't, I said. I started to but Shorty asked me why I didn't hit somebody my own side, so I changed my mind and didn't even push his face, but Skinny Martin pushed my face this morning and he's a head bigger than me, so I pulls as well as pushed Shorty's but I didn't, so that's why my conscience hurts, I said, and pop said, Yee gods, If you hear of anybody that wants to buy a seat in the Ligg of Nations, tell them mine's for sale.

Add he got in back of the sporting page and blew smoke over.

NEWS and VIEWS

—Empire Exhibits—

Since my last article, I have visited the various Empire Exhibits in the "Governments" building, and gleaned therefrom much important information.

BRITISH SECTION

Two famous tea companies, well known in Belleville and throughout the world, gave visitors a cup of delicious tea and a package large enough to make ten cups as samples, for ten cents. One of these companies is the famous restaurant purveyors of England, Lyons, which a thousand branches and profits of over a million dollars a year. We ate almost exclusively at their restaurants, especially the one on Oxford Street where there is a fine orchestra.

The display here of English china and delf is unsurpassed in the world, as far as we have seen them in the largest cities where we have travelled. The fruits of hundreds of years of study, science and service are clearly apparent. From every standpoint, art, quality and craftsmanship, the exhibit is very beautiful. The Lion and Unicorn of Cube that it requires centuries, to bring out the latent possibilities in all merchandise. Canada will be wise to follow this teaching.

The English toffees and biscuits are here too in great abundance, and are further illustrations of what skill, patience and perseverance can accomplish in any line of human endeavour. It is this steady development day by day, year by year, and century by century that gives zest to human life. Some young people of Canada in-day are trying out mushroom progress, with the inevitable results.

Scotland's leading exhibits consist chiefly of those clan plaids, which have no equal or parallel throughout the world. Their variety and exceptional textile beauty are impressive. The writer is very fond of the exquisite Cameron and McIntosh plaids, and would like to wear them all the time, even sleep in pyjamas made of those materials.

INDIA

India the land of mysticism and age-old tradition is well and worthily represented at the "Ex." Its natives not for centuries but for ages have been taught to perform certain delicate operations with their hands; silk, brass and other materials with the result that their products are simply marvellous. As nearly as I can find out, the methods of manufacture by hand, and as each article consists largely of hand work, are handed down together, it can be readily understood what an immense demand is made on their patience, in many cases, little tables made of their famous teak wood are inlaid with thousands of pieces of lovely ivory giving an effect which must, factory production can never attain. Similar results will be found in their rugs of various sizes, made from native wool and cocoanut fibre, in their scarfs, shawls, table covers and bed spreads made of native silk, and in their jewellery and jardiniers. After seeing these wonderful things, you will ever after have much respect and a high regard for India.

NEW ZEALAND

My interest in New Zealand, one of Ontario's chief competitors in the world's markets for cheese and butter, was much aroused by what I saw and heard at their exhibit here. A young lady from New Zealand was in charge of the exhibit and from her I learned a great deal.

"Five years ago I saw your exhibit of apples in London, England, and I was much disappointed," I began rather pointedly.

"What that triumphant smile which women have always, ready, when they know they can floor mere man, she replied promptly, "Yes I understand; they were small and poor in colour, but you see they were not exactly what London wants, and that we send!"

"Then you have large, well coloured apples?" I continued much more meekly.

"Plenty, as many as you have in Ontario and just as desirable, (I like to talk to a woman who knows, what she is talking about and who can champion a commendable cause.) London people want more apples to the pound, because all fruit is sold retail there, and what they have a prejudice against much color because they think it detracts from the flavor."

"And what do you do with the large apples?"

"We grade all our fruit into first, second and thirds, and sell where each grade is in demand. Chapman's peach is the best peach in the world. We sent Canada a trial shipment too from our last crop."

"Since our seasons are opposite, and since your apples ripen during our winter, and our apples ripen during your winter, we could exchange cargoes and both countries would always have fresh apples," I suggested.

"We are working on that plan, and believe it will be highly beneficial to the advantage of both countries," she replied.

I found that New Zealand can sell for less than we have in Ontario in the same way that we do. I saw besides others samples of the following in cans:—apricots, peaches, apples, all the berries and plums that we know except the blueberry which is unknown in antipodes. They can tomatoes but not the juice. However this is to be done soon.

As wool is one of New Zealand's chief export commodities, you will see bundles of it graded from one to eight. Their manufacturers are famous in color and design for floor rugs and suits rugs of all kinds.

I found that New Zealand had two choice foods, exclusively her own. Tobereo, which grows on a native small bush, is a delicious fruit which grows on a vine, resembles a plum in shape, is dark purple in color, and has such a thick skin that the fruit must be scraped out with a spoon. The juice and pulp of the fruit then finds a variety of delicious uses such cies as cakes, ices and ice-cream.

One native kauri gum having carving of native woods, and produce fine specimens of small boats, paddles, totem-poles and other things characteristic of aboriginal people.

AUSTRALIA

The exhibit from Australia was very interesting too and also somewhat similar to that of New Zealand with reference to its wool, articles made from wood, and its lovely fruits. Their dried raisins and currants were a feature as well as their fine display of Australian animals, all mounted in life-like pastures. These included the kangaroo, ostrich, and many others unknown in Ontario. The exhibit from the United States and Great Britain, Australia bugs most of her goods from Canada. Australia is described here as a land of sunshine with an average of seven hours a day for every day of the year. This reminded us of what we had found in Southern California. It should be added that the famous Eucalyptus oil (medicinal) comes from Australia.

SOUTH AFRICA

This exhibit displayed large, beautiful ostrich feathers, which and to relate are not much used by women to-day. Persian skins, seal skins, and wool are much in the evidence. The canned and dried fruits are much like those already described with the exception that more emphasis is placed on all the ordinary dried fruits, perhaps due to climatic conditions, and export conditions. Raisins and kidneys are plentiful.

The display of cut and uncut diamonds is the centre of interest. A raw uncut diamond, just as it comes from the ground, is dirty white in color and has uneven sides and edges. The cutting and polishing makes the crude stone f ulting of great brilliance and beauty. Along with the diamond display were the gold and iron ores and the various coins of South Africa.

The various Empire exhibits that have been briefly described give a good idea of the industries of the individual parts, and also emphasize the great educational features of this Canadian National Exhibition.

MUCH GLOOM

The attendance at the "Ex" has fallen behind so many thousands due to epidemic and heat that all boosters of Fair are horribly depressed, especially the Board of Directors, and the business magnates of Toronto. After fifty years of wonderful success and achievement, why all this worry? All things human have their ups and downs, but it is the strange over a number of years that matters, and if there is a more favored city than Toronto in this old world, the writer has not discovered it. Cheer up Toronto!

ART GALLERY

I was much pleased with what I saw of Canadian Art at the Exhibition Art Gallery, especially as I contended last I saw there with the Art of the Ages in the famous galleries of London, Edinburgh, and Paris during my world tour visits five years ago. I shall briefly indicate my impressions as follows:

1. The great variety of subjects, and the methods of treatment were equally the best.

2. Canada is supremely favored for artistic purposes in its scenery, climatic and atmospheric conditions, customs, and high ideals. The artist finds the possibilities for originality unbounded in Canada.

3. The elusive elements that test the greatness of all artists are well exhibited in many Canadian pictures now on display at the "Ex." Atmosphere play its part, light and shade is often as fine as it could be on canvas, and very delightful, texture is good, and the play of sun and flesh for example are perfectly evident, moods of life and nature are excellent, and above all character, that most elusive element of all, is unmistakable.

4. The eyes followed me wherever I went in an uncanny manner, as they do in the better galleries.

5. In at least two cases, a young girl and a young woman, I held my breath seeing them move or speak, for that is the most notable experience also before the famous Duchess picture by Reynolds in the National Art Gallery, Trafalgar Square, London.

6. About one picture in every ten portrays woman, variously dressed and undressed, in many of her moods serious or whimsical. This is the consistent record of all art galleries, and the writer has ever seek for beauty, why should they not often turn to the Creator's most wonderful example of beauty, a woman.

Canada's climate has a variation of from 96 in the summer to 30 below in the winter, a total range of 126 degrees. Such a range is unique in the world. This gives a variety of possibilities in nature and humanity for the artist almost unbelievable. Add to this the variety and interest of Canada's land and water areas, and it is no wonder the verdict that Canada will become the Artist's paradise, and that many of her sons and daughters "will leave their footprint on the Sands of Time."

PRESS DAY

Friday was Press Day and over two hundred newspaper men and publishers from all over Ontario were the guests of the Canadian National Exhibition. At the complimentary Directors' luncheon, the writer was among the select few called out for a speech at the head table, where the officials and the guest speaker sat.

Mr. P. D. Ross, editor of the Ottawa Journal was the guest speaker and told the younger members of the profession how to write bated on over half a century's experience.

Mr. Ross was perfectly familiar with all that was best in poetry and prose, and often quoted from Shakespeare, Tennyson, Milton and others to prove his arguments.

The best writers used the short word, the short sentence and the relatively short paragraph. For half his speech he quoted Saxon words, the sage to prove that the greatest writers use one syllable words, to the extent of not less than eighty per cent, two syllable words about fifteen per cent. and the remaining five per cent. for long words.

The short Anglo-Saxon words express the spirit, our hopes, joys and fears, best. The long word derived from Greek and Latin is required by learn.

CAMBRIA

All matters for publication should be as brief as possible, and so written that it can be easily understood.

Just before the supper hour in the Directors' dining hall the members of the Press saw the famous Cambria fly over the grounds for half an hour or so, and then land on the lake before them.

The Cambria is one of a fleet of twenty-eight, built by Imperial Airways (Britain) for trade between Canada and England. It has a speed of 165 miles an hour, a weight of eighteen tons and a cost of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. This is its second trip to Canada, and it came from Montreal to the "Ex" on Friday for exhibition purposes.

Is it not strange that when we try to do our best, we slip and mess things up terribly? That is just what happened to the glamorous proud Cambria. As she touched the water, she swayed down too much on one side with the result that a wing went into the water, and was seriously damaged. Thousands of spectators were so amazed at what had happened that not a word was spoken for a few seconds. Then the crippled Cambria was towed away to the harbor for repairs.

Best Wishes to All.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Exclusive" with Four Star Cast in Exciting Melodrama

A brilliant cast, an excellent story and superb direction, well spiced with action, comedy and tense drama, combine to make of "Exclusive" the feature motion picture coming to the Belle tomorrow (Thursday) and Friday, manager Wally, one of the real hits of the week.

Using a battle between two rival newspapers as its background, the story concerns the sacrifice a father is forced to make when he must choose between strict adherence to the newspaper code or betrayal of his own daughter. The cast is headed by Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer and Charlie Ruggles and includes Lloyd Nolan, Fay Holden, Ralph Morgan and a score of other noted players.

In the story Ruggles is cast as the father and Miss Farmer as the daughter. MacMurray, Ruggles' side-kick, is in love with Miss Farmer. Nolan, corrupt politician, opens a rival newspaper which he intends to use as a blackmail sheet and to gloss over his own depredations. Holden and Morgan are other noted players.

Ruggles is determined to keep all news items from the city's finances. He offers Ruggles and MacMurray more money to work for him but they refuse. Miss Farmer, however, accepts a position on the corrupt newspaper.

The powerful climax is reached when the girl and father and daughter clash. Miss Farmer's knock-racking activities cause many of the town's leading citizens to take his life and it is Ruggles' task to write the story of his daughter's methods for his own paper.

"Exclusive" is from the stage hit "Roaring Girl" by John F. Moffitt, former motion picture critic of the Kansas City "Star." It was directed by Allan Hall, noted for his ability to keep a story moving and the way he does it with "Exclusive" is a tribute to his profession.

A Fraidpretties

Three excellent varied featurettes have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including a Walter Lantz cartoon, "Fire Alarm" cerial Hero, Mark Warnow's Gold Medal Broadcast, "Blue Ribbon Music," in this outstanding screen gem are featured thirty-four artists classic "Whispering," a novel jazz version of Mendelssohn's famous "Minuet" and the current favorite "Swing High, Swing Low." In addition to the hits by the "Symphonettes" the radio's newest girl harmony trio are heard in "Sweet Jackie Rose," while Buddy Clark, another radio favorite, sings the song "Get, but You're Swell." Another of those popular Science reels in color, showing modern inventions will be exhibited on the same program.

"Topper," is Funny

"Topper," which came to the Belle Theatre yesterday, was hilariously received by a packed audience at one of the first showings of the month.

Based on the superb whimsy of the screen play, adapted from Thorne Smith's novel of the same name, "Topper" the brilliant talent of the principals provides uproarious fun and fast-moving action from the opening scene until the final fade-out. Constance Bennett, Cary Grant and Roland Young head an imposing cast. A very interesting newsreel and a humorous screen oddity in color "Unusual Occupations," completes a splendid program that will be repeated again tonight for the last times.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Rhythm in the Clouds" and "The Lady Escapes"

Nowadays one finds rhythm everywhere, even in the schools! One of the gayest, liveliest musicals ever to come out of the Republic studios, famed for their gay, lively musicals, is "Rhythm in the Clouds," which is now playing the Capitol as grand hit No. 1. The tunes are fresh and killing, the story great fun throughout, and the principals are a bunch of Hollywood youngsters whose youth and pep will carry them far.

Patricia Ellis scores in the leading feminine role, as a down-and-out song writer who has the spice of humor and imagination—that the proper dash of audacity—to move in a successful song writer's apartment in his absence and pass herself off as his fiancee. Immediately there begins a radiator and steam pipe war between Judy and her next door neighbor, a song writer who's played with dash and vigor by Warren Hull, which continues unabated for some time even though the two combatants never see each other.

Judy succeeds in the course of her compositions under the unwilling host's name. The piece proves successful and Hull is engaged to write the lyrics. This leads to a meeting between the two which starts out like an advanced case of love at first sight, but the girl soon learns that it is Hull who has been tapping on the common wall that separates them, there is a class which echoes and rebounds throughout several feet of highly diverting farce.

No sooner is this mishap patched up, when the two owner of Judy's apartment returns, and not only demands that she move out bag and baggage but issues an eviction for fraud in using his name to her song.

Hull's marriage to a satisfactory and entertaining conclusion through the efforts of William Newell, a comedian of the first water, who, without a doubt, are wining for him legions of fans.

"The Lady Escapes"

Treating lightly the light housebreaking of two modern lovers, who hold hands mainly to keep their fists from flying, "The Lady Escapes," mirthful matrimonial bit, come to the Capitol today as grand hit No. 2.

A pair of rough-and-tumble sweethearts who just can't have enough of each other, Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen are featured in a wild, hilarious romance in which finally culminates in an attempt to find a second husband for Gloria before Michael gets Reno-vated.

The chase leads across the Atlantic, with Gloria, who is really chasing Michael, secretly pretending pursuit of George Sanders, a French playwright. Michael, not knowing that actually he is the pursued, is chasing his wife, and the ensuing chase leads to complications that only he can cure. Williamson and Gerald Oliver-Smith, make for a generally joyous occasion for man or maid, married or unmarried.

The feature is the first film for his wife a second husband is soon ended. However, he is not long in finding a way to remain her first and only, and the film ends on a note of hilarity and laughter that is the result of all the hilarious machinations of the script writers.

Muskogee, Okla., Sept. 3 (CP) —"I've never done this before," said 17-year-old Charley Smith as he took out a license to marry Mrs. Alice Brown, 75.

"I'm old enough to be at least 10 times as old as the bride—it's too much trouble, all this running around."

FARM

Other problems confronting the country today are first there are many young men who would like to go farming if they had sufficient capital to start. Pioneer methods are not being followed in this machine age. Then the standard of living has increased during the past twenty five years. Thirdly there is a lack of inclination on the part of the public about this all important duty to turn to agriculture. It is difficult for them to adopt the old pioneer spirit.

Outlook as a Nation

"Fortunately we are geographically removed from the war centres of Europe and Asia. War at any time is a repulsive subject, but it is our national duty to become familiar with its aspects because, firstly, we are an integral part of the British Empire and, secondly because we are an exporting nation and vastly interested in commerce."

"It seems too bad that we cannot apply the same fine principles to business that were exemplified in the spirit of the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces."

"Let us hope that the legislature of Ontario will profit from these momentous problems confronting them, will remember the Fathers of Confederation. May they remember and use the spirit of the fine record of the Canadian Corps whose exploits are a shining light in the history of Canada and they, when doing pioneering legislature, keep the thought in view, that there is plenty of room for pioneering not only in the wild but in business and the professions."

The speaker was formally introduced to the club by Rowanian F. C. MacLaurin. Official thanks of the club was tendered by Jack Trudeau and conveyed to the speaker by President Reid Logan. During the course of the luncheon, Mr. Ralph Harris, a new member was initiated and introduced to the members.

On Friday evening, Sept. 3rd, Miss Eva Brown and Mrs. Ross Hollins were hostesses at a cup-and-saucer shower held at "Shadan", Oak Lake, in honour of Miss Helen Mallory. After playing an amusing game and pouring over several contests, the guests sat back and watched Miss Mallory follow a trail of slips of paper to find pretty cups hidden in dark corners. The final cup contained a verse composed by Mrs. Hollins, expressing very neatly the best wishes of all the girls for the happiness of the bride-to-be. A dainty lunch brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

On Monday afternoon, Sept. 6th, about eighteen girls were guests of Miss Marjorie Hagerman and Miss Marion Tucker at a kitchen shower given in honour of Miss Mallory at Miss Tucker's home. The afternoon was spent in playing games and singing. Miss Hagerman and others voiced their wishes for Miss Mallory's happiness, and the latter proceeded to unwrap her gifts which were piled on a table prettily decorated with pink and white streamers and a charming doll-bride. The gifts were useful kitchen articles in the bride-to-be's favourite colour, and in each parcel she found a recipe. In a few well chosen words Miss Mallory thanked the girls and urged them to come and see how well their presents would fit into her new kitchen. The hostesses then served ice-cream and small cakes, iced after a color motif of matching the guests' dresses.

Weddings

SQUIRE—TURTELLE

A very quiet wedding took place at Christ Church Cathedral on Thursday, September 7th, at seven o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Turtelle, when their only daughter, Winifred, became the bride of Valentine Sydney Squire, second son of Rev. T. H. Squire and the late Mrs. Squire of Dorset, England.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Lorne Burr, brother-in-law of the groom, in the presence of only immediate friends.

The bride was attired in brown figured crepe and wore a corsage of white heather and lilies for the groom's parents.

Wedding music was played by Miss Carol Burr, sister of the groom, and during the signing of the register, Mr. Burr sang "I Love You Truly".

The happy couple were unattended.

The rooms were decorated with pink and white streamers, autumn flowers and evergreens.

Following the ceremony, lunch was served, those assisting were Misses Norma Fairman and Carol Burr. The table was centred with the wedding cake, which had been iced on a plate belonging to the bride's great grandmother.

The bride's travelling suit was set off with brown attractive hat and accessories. After the trip the bride and groom will reside at the groom's farm at Burr's.

For many years the bride has been a popular music teacher, and has also taken an active part in the Sunday School and Church work at Croton.

Kincaid Family Holds Re-union

Mr. and Mrs. William Kincaid and their daughter, Mrs. Russell McKay of Oakland, Michigan, were entertained by their niece Mrs. E. Bond of Wingham, have been spending the past few days with Mr. Walter Kincaid, Mrs. Kincaid is a nephew of the late William Kincaid of Madoc township, being a son of the late John Kincaid, Sidney brother, John, formerly of Wingham. He left here over sixty years ago and for fifty years was in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway as contractor and bridge builder.

East Monday, on hearing a former Madoc man say that there were Kincaids still living around Madoc, Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid decided to make a flying visit and see those other members of the family. They arrived on Thursday at the home of Mr. James Kincaid where arrangements were made to have the visitors see as many of the connection as possible in the short time they had allowed themselves for the trip. Among those called or called upon were seven first cousins, Mr. James Kincaid, Mr. Archie Kincaid, Mrs. A. V. Tumelty and Mrs. D. Gumsolus, sons and daughter of the late Thomas Kincaid of Madoc Township, Mrs. T. Moorcroft of Madoc Township and Mrs. G. Palmer and Miss Ruth Wilson, daughters of the late Mrs. Christina Kincaid Wilson. Mrs. Palmer and Miss Wilson had been childhood playmates with Mrs. Madge Kincaid and had not seen him since his family had moved away.

On Sunday afternoon Mrs. James Kincaid arranged for as many as possible of the connection to meet together at Ocone Park before Mr. and Mrs. Kincaid motored home Monday morning. About thirty were in attendance. Later they were shown through the mill of the Canada Tale Company at Madoc.

Fall Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in the late Fall. After the church ceremony we are to have a reception at home for my friends and relatives. The ceremony will take place about five o'clock.

1.—Is this time about right, or should I have it earlier?

2.—What would be the proper dress, hat and so forth, for this occasion? I do not want to wear the bridal outfit. What color would be appropriate?

3.—What should the groom wear?

4.—Should I send cards . . . . as I intend to make a visit to all invited?

H.

1.—A little earlier hour than five is considered more convenient for the ceremony when there is to be a reception. Four o'clock would be just as convenient for you to choose for—third hour of the ceremony hour? This means that the reception can probably begin at five. This gives a good margin of time for your reception before your guests must depart for their dinner-hour.

2.—Choose a color that is especially becoming to you, one that you enjoy wearing. Then you might plan to wear an ensemble, perhaps one of the fashionable ones with a matching skirt and jacket, and a blouse of a lighter tone. A velvet suit of dark blue or garnet or burgundy or dark green would be lovely. Or, if you don't want velvet, a suit of an interestingly-textured crepe . . . . or one of soft tweed will be appropriate and useful for a long time. Your hat might be of an afternoon type of fashionable felt perhaps if you choose to have a veil.

3.—If your costume tends toward a formal afternoon costume, the groom is appropriately clad in formal day clothes . . . . dark striped trousers, cut away coat and appropriate accessories, or he might wear a business suit.

4.—I do not very much your plan of going to see each of your guests

Present Gifts To Bride-Elect

A very pleasant time was spent at the home of Mrs. G. H. Rose, Hallaway, Monday afternoon, August 30, when Mrs. Rose, assisted by Mrs. Elmer Wilson and Mrs. Arthur Reid, entertained about twenty-five young ladies of the community in honour of Miss Marie Trewartha, bride-to-be. During the afternoon the girls enjoyed a miscellaneous shower with Miss Dorothy Reid as hostess, Mrs. Arthur Reid, groom and Mrs. Rodney Hoagle, the minister. After proceedings causing much merriment, the gifts were placed and the dress was read by Mrs. Elmer Wilson. The gifts of kitchen utensils were many and were hailed with the baby carriage decorated with blue ribbons and bows and filled with presented by Mrs. Don Rose. Marie thanked the young people for their lovely gifts and voiced all to visit her when she was settled in her new home. After the gifts had been unwrapped and admired, a delicious lunch was served, consisting of sandwiches, tarts and lemonade. The following is the address:

Hallaway

Dear Marie:

Wedding bells ring out the happy announcement of your marriage and warm us that you are about to step upon a new and happy ship of life.

We, your comrades at Hallaway feel we cannot miss the opportunity of reviving with you on this occasion and thus we present this address to you to spend a few social hours with Ted.

The value of your companionship among us can be no better expressed than by this little poem. "It's hard to tell what makes a friend,

It isn't looks or style.

Or anything that you can't explain.

That makes them seem worth while.

It isn't anything they say

Or anything they do.

But what it is that makes a friend

We have found it all in you."

Not only have you extended your hand in friendship to us all, but your services have been willingly and willingly given in any of our Young People endeavours.

It is a pleasant thought to know that you and your husband are starting your home among us. We shall still be able to have our jolly times together and share in each other's efforts toward making life worth while.

We ask you to accept, Marie, these small gifts as a slight token of our regard, and hope as you go about your daily tasks, may they fill your kitchen with the best of wishes prosperity, health and everlasting happiness.

Signed on behalf of your Hallaway girl friends.

SUGGEST ALTERNATIVE TO AVOID RESENTMENT

By LISA GRENELLE

Mrs. Greene and Mrs. White wished to be alone together. They had some important matters to talk over, matters not suitable for children's ears. But Ronny and Algernon were very much present and has every intention of remaining so.

"Why don't you two go out and play?" Mrs. Greene suggested impatiently.

There was no response.

"Go on away, Ronny! Do you hear me? I mean it!"

Ronny looked at his mother's angry face, and left, looking sulky and resentful.

"Algernon, Mrs. White said pleasantly, "do you know something? Pat hasn't had much fresh air today!"

Algernon considered. "Will he die if he doesn't get any?" he asked.

"He'll be unhappy, and not well."

"I guess I better take him out, then." Algernon decided, and left slightly reluctant, but not feeling resentful or unwanted, as had Ronny.

Children Curious

Children aren't so different from grown-ups. They don't like to feel unwanted. It hurts them, stirs them resentful and antagonistic. It also arouses their curiosity. What are their mothers, or their mothers and fathers, going to say to this, that is so private? Is it about them, something awful about them? Is mother going to tell about that escapade into the ice-box, or about the raiding of Mrs. Gunby's vegetable garden? Behind their backs, are their parents going to decide to have Janie's tonsils out, or send Jimmie away for a while to camp?

So she child feels. Or he broods upon what delightful grown-up wickedness is the topic of the conversation from which he is so carefully excluded.

But surely adult members of the family must be allowed some privacy. They must have some opportunity to talk freely without being subjected to childish comments, without having to guard against a premature enlightening of young consciousness concerning the facts of life.

Right to Privacy

Even parents have a right to privacy, and should not be forced always to guard their tongues. But through habit and suggestion it is usually possible to exclude the children without offending them.

There is Mrs. White's method of suggesting some agreeable or necessary alternate activity. There is the habit of "quiet hours," in which arrangements are made for children to be individually occupied—hours for sewing and play—so that the parents may be free to read their own adult lives, free from all child interference.

Then there is the lesson through example. Make a point of leaving Janie and Jimmie alone to play with their friends, of refraining from adult interference, unless danger threatens. Then explain to the children that just as they like to see their friends alone, so do young people, and for the same reason.

BLOOD PRESSURE RESPONSE TO COLD HELPS TELL CONDITION OF TUBERCULOUS PATIENT

Anyone who has regularly visited the clinic for treatment of tuberculosis sanatorium learns the names of patients in the waiting rooms and wards, and can see the progress toward recovery or otherwise from week to week.

Of course the physician can see the record of each patient—the range of temperature, the amount of coughing, the amount of daily sputum, the number of times he breathes in a minute and finally the X-ray film which shows whether or the tuberculosis process is spreading, healing, or stands still.

From the above he is able to tell just how ill the patient is, just what to expect—three months, six months, or a year to recovery, or it may be just a matter of months before he passes away, notwithstanding all that can be done by way of food, fresh air, rest, or collapsing the lung by artificial air or by surgery to give it rest.

What should help the patient to fight and fanally to hope, despite all the other signs, symptoms, and tests, is recorded by Dr. Edwin C. Kennedy of Mountain Sanatorium, Hamilton, Canada, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. Dr. Kennedy states that the blood pressure—low or high—is useful give the physician a correct idea of the progress of the patient.

"It is generally believed that tuberculous patients with high blood pressure have very little tuberculosis, or, in any case, tend to heal the disease much more quickly than people with normal or low blood pressure."

The response of the blood pressure to cold bath taken every few months, will show whether or not the patient is improving.

Dr. Kennedy uses the same method used on 80 patients to obtain the blood pressure response to cold ...putting hand and wrist of one side in near-freezing water for 25 seconds—while blood pressure is taken on other arm.

If the blood pressure response is poor—does not increase a definite amount—the patient is not improving; if the response is good the patient is putting up a winning fight against tuberculosis.

ROWE OUTLINES

Law And Order The Object

"I am not concerned what labor organization you belong to as long as you maintain law and order," declared Mr. Rowe.

Mr. Rowe said he would establish a non-political provincial commission to attempt reaching a simplification of provincial and municipal administration. Another objective would be to relieve the taxpayers' burden.

He pledged co-operation with the Royal Commission to study Dominion-Provincial affairs and co-operation with the Dominion administration. Other points in the platform:

A determination to collect all succession duties "justly owing" the province.

Hydro would be free from "political influence."

One School Question

The public schools would be defended and rights of the Separate schools protected, he pledged.

Ontario House in London would be re-opened and agriculture stimulated.

The province's forest, water and mineral wealth would be conserved and the Conservatives would insist upon a non-political civil service commission under which qualifications for appointment would be fair, service "will be merit and ability rather than political influence."

In his rejection of the Premier's proposal for a new liquor board to be elected by the people, Judge Judge assisted by an elected Liberal candidate, Mr. Rowe declared. He said: "I know where there is gallonage charge being levied.

Investigate Toronto Players' Eligibility

No Protest Entered by Kiwanis, But O.B.A.A. Checkup Requested

There is no foundation to the rumours currently reported around Belleville to the effect that the section football championship has officially protested two Toronto Beefeater junior players, through an investigation looking into the qualifications of eligibility of players drafted and subsequently, Coach Woodley announced today.

"According to the list of eligible players and the eligibility sheet issued from the office of the secretary of the O.B.A.A., William Snyder, Hamilton, the names of players Briden and Walsh were not included in the list and this I considered us from Hamilton. Our club wrote the secretary Snyder to check his O.B.A.A. list again and determine whether or not Briden and Walsh are eligible, pointed out Mr. Woodley.

According to Toronto newspaper reports both Briden and Walsh played in the F.A.B.A. finals versus the Columbus Boys when the St. Cyprians won the championship. If Briden and Walsh were not signed to O.B.A.A. certificates before July 1st this year, they are not eligible, however.

Says Politics Used

When the Liberals took over the government relief liquor was controlled by a former judge and two Liberal commissioners, said the Conservative leader. However, Mr. Hepburn "kicked them out and put into office a politician, who has been closely associated with Hepburn in the Simcoe Centre voting. He left his Dominion Controllership to accept this, which he represented in the Hon. Peter Heenan, Liberal M.P. for Northumberland in the stronghold of Dr. Simpson.

Livestock

Toronto, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Slow trading ruled the Toronto Livestock Market today. Bids on killing cattle were lower, while supplies of sales on the cattle division generally showed a fair decline. Receipts were already at 48 to 49.50 for choice yearlings. Previous close on off truck deliveries was 49 to 49.50. Both sheep and lambs were steady. Receipts were 1,200 cattle, 1,000 calves, 600 hogs, 680 sheep and lambs.

Good butcher cattle on the market sold at $7 to $7.25 with common to fair 5.50 to 6.50. Heifers went at 5.75 Butcher cows brought $3 to $4.25 with a few fancy at 4.50.

Fed calves, choice quality, went at 10.50 to $11, with medium down-wards to 9. Stores were fairly active with prices of $4 to $5.50 for stockers and $5.50 to $6.50 for feeders. On the calf division choice veals sold at $9 to $9.50 with a few tops reached $10. Heavy Western calves sold from $4.50 to $7. Grass calves offered at $5 per cwt. Good ewes and wether lambs sold at $13.75 to $14. Common lambs brought $8.50. Bucks went at $7.75 and culls at $6 to $7. Sheep were steady at $6 to $7 with a few according to quality.

Montreal, Sept. 8.—(CP)—Only prices were quoted on the early livestock dealings while hogs also strengthened. Sheep and lambs were quiet, unchanged with a few cattle offered at steady prices.

Receipts: 100 cattle; calves 201; sheep and lambs 272; hogs 405.

Good grass lambs made $9 while common light vealers and drinkers sold around $5. Grassers went from $4 to $5.50.

Good ewes and wethers made $8.50 while culls and bucks sold at $6.50. Sheep went from $2 to $4.50.

Bacon hogs, fed and watered, sold at $14 while selects went at their $1 premium with usual cuts on off grades. Sows sold from $6.50 to $8.

REORGANIZE N.Z. AIR FLEET

Wellington, Sept. 8.—(CP-Reuters)—The New Zealand Government has decided to reorganize and place on a proper footing the territorial air force, which consists of a headquarters and four squadrons.

It is starting this year with a Wellington squadron of twelve Hawker Hinds. The Hinds are two-seater army co-operation machines.

MARKET COMMENT

Weakness in Industrials of U. S. Steel, Brazilian, Nickel and other issues has been reflected at the opening in New York and Montreal after the long Labour Day week-end. The trend during the years has the setting for confident buying, materials been at bed. After more than a full year of civil war in Spain threatening to involve the European Powers, ace in the form of predatory dictatorial control, shipping disasters in the Mediterranean. In the Far East a full-fledged undeclared war is being waged between Japan and China and delicate "international" existing conditions are multiplying at a disconforting rate.

The investing and trading public can find little comfort in the evasive and unsatisfactory reply of Japan to Great Britain's moral note following the wounding of the British Ambassador to China, allegedly by Japanese fliers. Most disturbing of all is the Soviet's bitter protest directed at Italy, charging that country with the clandestine piracy in the Mediterranean near Spain. Some hope is held that the League of Nations and the Council and Assembly of the League of Nations will meet to a clarification of the tense international situation. Added to the unhappy turn of events participation by Italy and Germany in the proposed 12-power naval anti-piracy parley is still questionable.

Concern is being seriously expressed in the United States over their business outlook. The unfairly recent past, of instalment buying, from the Dominion Bureau are said to be urging a stricter regulation of "buying on time." The suggestion also has the purpose of the maximum period for instalment buying extended to 24 months, with larger down payments. Small automobile concerns in a top heavy credit situation are too well-known to permit the matter to be cut of hand. One other factor cited by retailers is that electric utilities are regulating their charges so much as long as five years for consumers to pay for the electric range purchase. Action for achieving a sounder credit-base in this respect is expected shortly.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Sept. 8.—Trading volume on the local wholesale produce market was somewhat disappointing yesterday with top grade egg prices in easier tone while other lines showed generally steady.

In the open wholesale egg market local offerings exceeded that any other factor was responsible for an easier tone to top grade supplies, which were quoted unsettled at 33-3 to 33 7-8 cents pound, and collected at 34 2-8 to 34 7-8 cents delivered. Other eggs were unsettled nominally at 33-3 to 33 7-8 cents pound, and collected at 34 2-8 to 34 7-8 cents delivered. Other eggs were unsettled nominally

CANADIAN OPEN

Large Field of Golfers to Contest Canadian Open This Year

(By Elmer Dutmas)

Toronto, Sept. 8—(CP)—No fiscal records were scarcely an event at this budding stage to create great international excitement, the United States-Canada professional golfers team match was regarded today as a contest with a future. The old hands-across-the-border feeling was present among the pros.

Yesterday, for the first big American professional stars, an outfit as strong as that which won the Ryder Cup from Great Britain this summer, defeated a team not right selected by the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association. The score was eight matches to four.

"We had real competition here—I think this event should become an annual one," said the burly Dudley, himself a victim of the golf produced by Bobby Alston of Ottawa, Canada's star golfer who was defeated in half of the home team's victories.

Prelude to Open

As a prelude to the 72-hole Canadian open championship which starts its run tomorrow over St. Andrews, where the team match was played, the U.S.-Canada contest was a success.

Bob Cruickshank of Windsor, Ont., honored by being named the No. 1 Canadian player, holding over-confident Ralph Guldahl, U.S. open champion, 4 and 2, in their 18-hole singles engagement. Alston downed Dudley 3 and 1 and Little Ernie Wakeam of Ottawa, Canada's biggest upset of all by beating Jimmy Hines, one up.

There were highlights of the home stand in the morning. After all was lost in the afternoon, Alston and Bobby Burns of Montreal, came home with a one-up triumph over Tony Manero and Jimmy Thomson for the only Canadian win in best-ball foursomes. Alston was the guiding genius here, his birdies on the 14th and 16th providing the margin.

Little the Defender

Of the American group, Sam Snead, Harry Cooper and Horton Smith were each twice winners. Cooper had the toughest singles assignment and handled it easily, seeing down the Canadian P.G.A. Champion, Stanley Horne of Ottawa, 5 and 3. Ernest Little of Hamilton of Quebec, 6 and 5 and Smith defeated Burns, 5 and 4.

Sneaky Snead's speedy and fine putting established the Rookie sensation from White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. as a warm favorite for the open title which Lawson Little will defend.

In the open, at least 152 professionals will start, will play 18 holes Thursday and a second 18 Friday. The low-scoring 80 will finish with 36 hole-Saturday.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

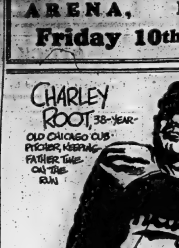
New York, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Louis-Farr fight may wind up with an investigation after all ..... A well-known Broadway columnist wrote he timed the round (via radio) and the seventh ran 3½ minutes ... He has been invited to tell his story to the Boxing Commission ..... St. Louis Browns will turn on the Azca next season ..... Ditto the Cardinals ..... Philadelphia dickering for Lorenzo Pack and Tony Galento late this month. Lew Riggs of the Reds jumped his batting average 44 points in one afternoon by polling two homers and a pair of singles.

Ted Broadribb, manager of Tommy Farr, is threatening to sue because of a Toronto story quoting him as saying he and Farr are getting out of the United States as soon as possible. If not sooner, because the Americans are trying to take all their dough ..... "We've never been better handled anywhere," Ted said ..... Tom Yawkey has given up on his Red Sox and gone hunting in Wyoming.



One of the stars of the Leopolds team in the Shawnee County League up in Wisconsin is Wally Shaboon, one-armed centre-fielder ..... He plays with the strap of his glove unfastened and after each catch quickly removes the glove to throw the ball back to the infield ..... His powerful throwing arm more than offsets the second or so lost in clicking the glove ..... At the bat Wally whales the ball at a .475 clip.

KI-Y CRESTS ARE PRESENTED

Members of City Championship Teams Feted at "Y"

Presentation of sweater crests emblematic of the championships of the Midget, Bantam and Juvenile Softball Groups of the Y.M.C.A.-Ki-Y League was made to members of the victorious teams at the "Y" last night with Godfrey Scott, Fred Hicken, new physical director and Jack McVeigh, representing the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, officiating.

In a brief address Mr. Joe Short of the Y, who presided, congratulated the boys on their splendid showing during the past season, and stressed the advantages obtained through the medium of sport.

Mr. Short also spoke on the coming Y.M.C.A. campaign, drive for new members and the new programs which would feature the coming fall and winter season.

Tentative plans for the formation of two juvenile teams in connection with the Ki-Y programme for next year were being made, Mr. McVeigh told the gathering.

"In this way we will establish teams from which we can draw material for the junior squads which the Kiwanis Club will sponsor in the coming season," Mr. McVeigh pointed out.

Members of the teams who received crests were;

Bantam Series

Knickerbockers—Donald Barrett, Robert Bunton, Jack Wardaugh, Maurice Callaghan, Allan Meagher, Bill Prak, Ted Smith, Maurice Billy Holway, Vernon Goyer, Don Rollins, Bob Rankin, Robert Lyall, Clarke.

Midget Series

Bluebirds—Bert Barriage, Howard Green, Walter Carson, Ernest Tompkins, Clive Bolton, Gordon Morgan, Fred Archer, Frederick Whittard, Tom Burley, Grant Thompson, Douglas Adams.

Juvenile Series

Bisons—Barry Christie, Douglas Martin, Arthur Mansfield, Bill Stone, Donald Reynolds, Norman Yarrow, Kennith Graham, Ross Clare, Mark Storms, Joe Samain, Ronald Warren.

PRESENT-DAY TENNIS STARS SCOFFED AT

'Dinse a Dozen' Says Veteran Molla Mallory Comparing Feminine Nettsters

(By Gayle Talbot)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Forest Hills, N.Y., Sept. 8—(AP)—Some of the girls playing in the United States Singles Tennis Championships look to the untrained eye like pretty good players, and critics comes as a shock and a disappointment to learn on high authority that they are selling platers compared in the glantesses of yesteryear.

Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, one of greatest of the old guard, says so positively. Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, the Pole; Anita Lizana, the Chilean; Alice Marble, Helen Jacobs, Kay Stammers and all the other pretties romping around in their shorts these days are about a dime a dozen in Molla's book.

The famous Norsewoman, who won the United States Women's championship six times from 1916 to 1926, gave her critical judgment yesterday while watching Helen Jacobs struggle and suffer through three sets in defeating Dorothy Bundgram, a chubby English girl who isn't even ranked in her own country.

"How would Suzanne Lenglen have done against the girls playing in this tournament?" she was asked. "Do you see any Suzannes about? "See any Suzannes!"

She exploded. "Why Suzanne could have cleaned out this lot without ever using her backhand. Why, I could have cleaned them out myself.

"We had great players in my day. They dressed, and take Mary Browne, Elizabeth Ryan, Kitty McKane Godfree and myself. And Helen Wills at the tail end. I honestly don't think any of these girls could have competed with us, even if pictures of us in our long skirts do look funny now."

Farr Breaks With Broadribb

New York, Sept. 8—OP)—Tommy Farr, the Welsh heavyweight, who gained his big name by making 15 rounds with Joe Louis will pursue his ring career in the future minus the advice of Ted Broadribb, his manager.

Broadribb announced Farr and Broadribb broke legally yesterday when Broadribb turned over his managerial rights to Bahe Cuhan of Newark. In the new contract Broadribb gets 25 per cent. of Farr's earnings, but Cuhan holds the power of attorney to act for Broadribb. For this Cuhan will receive 50 per cent. of Broadribb's share of the take or 13 1-2 per cent of Farr's earnings.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Calling

Just about a week ago the Belleville district had no less than five teams in the various provincial playdowns in baseball and softball. Today there is only one left, so fast is the process of elimination when the wheels begin to grind. The lone remaining club in the bunch is the Point Anne "Cementmen" who play the second game of their third round intermediate O.A.S.A. series with Long Branch today. The men of Sexton won the first game 11-1 last Saturday. Incidentally we understand the "Cementmen" may play their remaining games in the provincial softball park at the Belleville Exhibition Park diamond. While on the subject of softball it might be well to mention the fact that President Bill Todd is rounding up the city league outfielders for the purpose of talking over the question of organizing the city league championships.

As will be remembered the city senior championships were abandoned by the Cementmen of Point Anne, the Aajmas, Juniors and the Cecils Jacks in order to enter the O.A.S.A. playdowns. Now with the Aajmas and Cecils Jacks disposed of the picture President Todd feels those two clubs could contribute to the league semi-finals most any night now, while Point Anne is in the throes of the O.A.S.A. playdowns. Now with the Aajmas, Kids and Cecils Jacks finished a best two-in-three series perhaps the "Cementmen" will have the city title.

Now that we are having ideal September weather and not sweltering, this is the time to get local football candidates holding back and attending the nightly practices under Coach Archie Duffield. The "feets ball" season opens officially Saturday from today's list the R.O.A.P. "Flyers" as the locals' opponents. There is no time to be lost from now until that date. Coach Duffield will have the intestend to publish some of the more important playing rules of the ball and chain game so that those upon them sufficiently to give the sport fans who may not exactly understand the game, some little insight into the fine points connected with rabid football fans (?), who knows. Football in the local group this year will be played on Saturday afternoons, which should prove a big drawing card, especially through the turnstiles.

Understand the Royal Canadian Signals have challenged the Kingston Garrison football club, owing to the fact the latter club has numerous players from the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery and other units of the permanent troops in Kingston.

Bill Spence, who was George Pepper's right hand man when the Canadian motorcycle champion was touring the country, has made his record run at Daytona Beach, along with Stanley Hutchins. Spence arrived in Belleville over the week end high with enthusiasm. Interviewed in the second annual 200 mile motorcycle championship race in Daytona Beach, Spence said he left California two weeks ago and met Mr. Walker in Detroit. We are pleased to say Spence is well known. I had different people ask me where Belleville was and all about the race here. That race made Belleville's name a byword and Spence the Belleville Comet" commented Mr. Spence as he stated Bleake Thompson, who finished second last year, had also highly praised and advertised Belleville's swing last year's race. "We sincerely hope the race will be revived another year, but I would suggest building is outside of the city limits. If never did like last year's course, concluded Mr. Spence, who also informed us that George Pepper is not employed in London, England last making a name for himself on English dirt tracks as a rider of note.

Would you give "two bits" to see Joe Louis in action? Obviously the answer would be—"sure, what's the catch." Well there is a slight little bitch to our original question, but you can see the world's heavyweight champion in action for the small sum of five bits and the "Brown Bombers" softball team are appearing at the Toronto Canadian National Exhibition on Friday night. Joe has fun both playing and coaching the "Brown Bombers"—a team that is in great demand throughout the country, so for two bits you may see Joe Louis in softball action and unless one of the opposing Toronto nines start fisticuffs, however, it is unlikely that Louis will be seen in pugilistic action.

Did you know that Jimmy Wilde former flyweight champion of the world predicted Tommy Farr would slay the route with Joe Louis long before his fight with the champ? Wilde continended Farr was one of the best ring statisticians to be presented by the Old Country in many years. "Tiny style makes him hard to hit and he'll fool Cuhan best of them," predicted Wilde, and oh how true little Jimmie's words turned out to be.

It's Oshawa and Kingston for the O.B.S.L. finals again this year with the "crucial" series opening in the Limestone city this afternoon. The second game will be played in Oshawa tomorrow, the third in Kingston Saturday, the fourth in Oshawa on Monday and the possible fifth in Kingston next Wednesday, Secretary Norman Thompson informs us. The Oshawa nine met up with more serious opposition in the local semi-finals than they expected, the pesky Pries nearly upsetting the old dope bucket. Big Ernie Kitchen buried some great ball for the Pries last week, while Biddle came to the rescue of Oshawa starting pitchers on three consecutive occasions. The relief hurling is really what aloed out in the Peterboro-Oshawa series.

Some seem to think the Oshawa-Kingston series will be decided by the relative strength of the two clubs' second-string hurlers. Kingston has Tony Pecarich, Chief Jack Williams and Tammy Jamieson, while Oshawa has Biddle, Turner and Ogden, so take your choice.

SCRAMBLE FOR PLAY-OFF BERTH IN 'INT' LOOP

Neither Orioles or Chiefs Relish Third Position, Fear Newark

(By the Associated Press)

It looks like the percentages are against the three International League clubs battling away for the two remaining playoff berths.

The three-cornered fight going on among Baltimore, Syracuse and Buffalo for the third and fourth positions in the post-season series is certain to find one of the teams out at the end of the regular season with one of the two other clubs finishing third—faced with almost as certain elimination by the champion Newark Bears in the first round of the Governors' Cup series.

It isn't a very pleasant outlook for the Orioles and Chiefs who are two games in front of the fifth place Bisons. Both teams can't afford to give an inch to the Bisons, and though Messrs. Crouse and Schalk, managers of the Orioles and Bisons, respectively, would rather finish fourth, than third and face the Bears, they've got to keep their clubs hustling or find themselves out of the playoffs altogether.

The Chiefs brought the situation to a head last night when they nosed out the Bears 7-6 while the Orioles went down 1-0 to Jersey City.So put the teams in a virtual tie for third place.

Harry (Spike) Craft, slated for promotion to the Cincinnati Reds at the end of the season, brought the Chiefs their victory when he belted out a homer with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning.

Old Ollie Carnegie kept the Bisons in the running when he connected for two homers and drove in six runs to lead the herd to a 11-8 victory over Toronto.

Young Cesar Judd won a pitchers' duel from the veteran Harry Smythe when the Rochester Red Wings trimmed the Montreal Royals 3-2.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

For everything in Tony's and Jane's manner that night, of dignity, and reserve, and pride, was at rest to believe that indeed Lorna had made a great mistake. And the Kaye name, so highly to be cherished even by a Howland.

"My father can't send me anything." Lorna was raging. "And I can't borrow any more from you, Elsie. Then she'll have to go back head and wept. Here she was, and what could she do?

Elsie Forrest felt increasingly uncomfortable. "Well, my dear, I really don't know what to suggest. I can't have you stranded in Paris. Why don't you marry that lovesick lad? He seems to have money."

"Marry Bertie?" Lorna didn't even pretend she hadn't thought of it. "He's a smashing lad Elsie dear. That was the conclusion she had come to about Bertram. Rather a sheep sport, when you came down to it, though his gestures had the appearance of magnificence.

He isn't dreaming of such a thing, is he? Besides why should I?" she said to him, "I'm not going to make Mrs. Forrest feel like a heart-hearted wretch.

But she answered Lorna on quite a sharp note. "Well, my child, I can't solve your affairs. You might have been wiser if you'd stayed in Tuxedo.

Tony didn't want to see her. That was the bitter blow to Lorna. Not so surprising when she considered the Kaye temper and pride which had mortally offended. But she had been, so sure the old attraction would hold between her in the Chateau de, Madrid dining together, this girl and Bertram and Tony, had been like a whip to her own vanity and confidence. Had Bertram found Tony was the false lead? Well there was no doubt of one thing—Tony had married now. Lorna rather shrewdly guessed that she, herself, by her own actions had rendered this step necessary. She might have foreseen that her attack that night would have just such consequences. Nothing left for her to do but to grovel, as she mentally put it, until she could untangle the threads. And there still many threads to untangle.

One of the vital purposes of her visit to Jane was to find out whether Tony knew of her affair with Henri in Paris. But first of all, in view of her present position, she must try the whole thing. Make her peace, if she could, with this girl she horsedtugy hated.

So it was a humble and chastened Lorna—on the surface—who was ushered into the luxurious salon of the Kayes in the Hotel Ortion where every place and object was to remind her of what she had lost.

"It was kind of you to let me come." A Lorna apparently subdued who advanced with very appearance of timid friendliness.

But Jane was no longer the frightened, uncertain girl she had been at Kaynekone. "I really don't know why you wanted to see me," she said coolly. In the summer morning light, the sheen of her clustered curls and the deep smooth blue of her eyes seemed part of a perfect grooming that her blue linen gown carried out. Lorna stood, her head a little bent, a snip of a hat tilted against the burnished wave of her hair. Jane was for her to speak. She don't like this any more than you do" she said. "You know perfectly well every word that I said is true. You weren't married to Tony then. But I made a beautiful mess of things for myself. That's why I'm here now. I've got to get myself out, and get you out, Tony to forgive me."

There was no thrill to Jane's triumph. "Why should we?"

Lorna stopped, smart, and even though she had decided to be meek, she couldn't quite control her voice. "I'll tell you why," she said defiantly. "Because I'm dependent on Elsie Forrest for the moment in Paris. And Elsie insists that if you and Tony won't forgive me or see me, I've got to get out. I'm stopping with her at the Meurice. Simple, isn't it?"

Suddenly Lorna's full red lips twisted, and she flung herself toward her. "You're worn all down the line," she cried. "You can afford to be generous. You must realize what this means. Unless Tony and you—forgive me, neither, everyone is going to take sides. It's for Tony's sake as well as mine," she added impulsively.

"I'm beginning to understand." Jane looked at her, not unkindly, even with a sense of pity. The vivid little face that could be so arrogant was crumpled with emotion. "You made a great mistake that night in Tuxedo. And you want me to patch it up for you."

"Only you can," Lorna admitted. "I'll be honest and confess that I came over to try and get Tony back. Well, I can't. But now I am. I lied to Elsie about a job I said the Princes Tebaldo had got for me. I got Bertram Cotter to come along, because I thought he had money. And I'm completely strapped, broke, done for. I'm at the end of my tether. If father did me if I sailed, I'd have to do it on my own book. How can you possibly?"

"Yes, I am," Jane said and she turned toward the balcony under which the Place de la Concorde lay flattened beneath the lights of late July. "But I can't answer for Tony, you know." And why, she asked herself passionately, should she lift a finger for Lorna.

Lorna said: "You don't—tell him about Henri and me, did you?"

"I promised you I wouldn't." Jane looked at her with faint disdain. "I don't have to now—you see." And that was her victory. No, she didn't have to rub Lorna's face back of it all. Tony's gray eyes seemed to be looking at her. And it wasn't as easy as all that, either.

"I think you and I had better stand together." And for the moment Lorna's voice was rather direct. "We both have things to hide."

"To hide?" But Jane's voice gave her away. Yes, there was that picture of the Comte in Paulin's, too striking a portrait of the girl in shabby black. And Bertram Cotter when he drank, could talk.

"You don't like the word, hide." Lorna spoke sweetly, feeling that she had struck a vulnerable spot. "Well, what about it?" And she held out her hand.

Jane walked before taking that hand. Like taking a snake's tail, she thought. Never, before were Elsie Forrest's words more true. She did see that Tony is limited. Her loyalty to him rose up in her like a challenge. If she was afraid of Lorna, then she wasn't sure of her own security with this pasty little Lorna. And Lorna just needed help. No doubt of that.

Jane's hand went out slowly. "I'll do what I can," she said.

"That's pretty decent of you." Lorna looked upward as their hands slipped apart. Her worried, selfish heart reluctantly saluted the girl facing her. "I told you once I didn't care for Tony," she said impulsively. "I mean—not as you do. But he is the only man I really truly marry."

Jane nodded. "I know that. Only you can't have Bertram, and you can't marry him."

And Lorna had to keep that in mind.

Lorna, from the depths of her relief laughed. "I accept that as a challenge."

It was a challenge that Jane picked up as a dare in an arena. And when Lorna had gone she thought over an interview that gave her every chance to be what Lorna had called decent. And she wondered if she could afford to be just that—decent. As always, when in doubt, she went to touch the heart-shaped moonstone ring of her father's—all she had kept of the past. And it was as if old Tom Carey had spoken, to her. "Do what's right, Janie. You'll always know what's right—by the feeling in you."

But it was with mingled feelings that Jane met Tony when he came back late. In the morning to fetch her for the lunch with Elsie Forrest.

He came into the salon with a boyish rush. "My special messenger arrived with this, this morning." He whisked from behind his back a large, flat box, and smilingly held it out.

This was no time to mention Lorna. Jane wonderingly opened it, and gasped. Green fires sparkled from white velvet; fires that seemed to leap out at her. The Kaye emerald, sacred to the Kaye wives. And Tony had got for them. He stood over her, his long, dark face alight.

"Tony! But I thought— You said—" she could get no farther.

Her careful little lines in his face were ironed out. "Did you believe that nonsense about my ever letting you go, my dear? I cabled last week."

Jane put the box on the table and made for his arms. "It isn't emeralds I—anything. But oh, Tony—Tony—!"

He lifted black brows over the gold of her hair. "What then?"

"It's Lorna." Jane's voice was mortified against his coat. "She's been here this morning. And now I'm so happy—you can forgive her, can't we, darling? I mean she really needs us. I'll tell you why later."

Tony pushed her back, staring down at her. "You ask me to see Lorna again," he said slowly, and those cynical little lines were back in his face.

CHAPTER XXIII.

BERTRAM COTTER'S DEMANDS

"I confess I don't understand you, Tony said bruskly. "That you should ask anything further to do with Lorna amazes me." There was still suspicion in his gray eyes as he turned restlessly away.

"I don't want anything more to do with her," Jane admitted very simply. She looked at him, her lovely head flung back, the gold of her curls crisp in the morning sun pouring from the balcony. Outlined against Paris skies of late July, she stood poised with an effect of gallant youth.

"Well, then!" But there were shadows on Tony's face, dark. Jane. And Lorna seemed to move again ghostly through his mind.

If Lorna's precipitately stranded in Paris," Jane said. "At Tony's incredulous exclamation, she went on: "She's with Elsie Forrest at the Meurice, and she was quite frank about the situation. Tony, Elsie feels, is loyalty to you, that if you—if you haven't forgiven that dreadful night at Tuxedo, why—it's a question of choosing between us. She's behaved herself. I would have married her. I don't know whether I want to see Lorna again, Tony."

Her heart warmed her once more. Why keep alive the dangerous past! But suddenly it seemed to Jane that nothing was worth having or keeping unless complete trust. Yes, she had gone a long way from the "romantic child" of the garage in Fond du Lac who had gambled with fate. She said—"You've always told me you didn't believe in love, Tony. I realize you were forced to marry me. Well, I care for you more than anything on earth. But if there's a woman anywhere, I've got to be afraid of because of you, then our life together must be whole and free." She looked out over the Place de la Concorde shimmering under a pale sky. "I think I'm growing up," she said with a catch in her voice.

Tony pulled her to him almost roughly. His face, leaning on hers. And for the moment nothing else counted.

Woona gazed with satisfaction at the net-imprisoned Tarzan. "Two slow imp pet, the panther,—the one creature I really loved. You came here to destroy me, and the great emerald—perhaps both. For these things you shall die not one death, but many!"

The hideous old magician chuckled. "You are no ordinary prisoner, and I shall do you the honor of finding some novel and lingering method of killing you." He turned then into the adjoining room where he busied himself with lighting the charcoal in a brazier.

Then he fetched a long metal rod with a shapened point and wooden handle. He inserted the point among the hot coals; then he turned his attention to the cage. "I shall show you that Woona can be kind even to an enemy. I shall have pity.

A mocking grin overspread his evil face. "It would be most depressing and agonizing for you to watch the unpleasant preparations I must make for your torture and death. Therefore, I shall spare you that unnecessary suffering by—burning out your eyes!"

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Pittsburgh, Sept. 8 (AP)—Henry Cook wasn't so dumb—or, for that matter dear.

Cook, Detective Samuel Graham, who arrested him on a charge of selling dogs without a license, said Cook posed as a mute to increase sales of razor blades and shoestrings. Left in a cell for several hours, he startled attendants by shouting:

"Bring me a drink of water."

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—Alph Eleanor Adams of Windsor yesterday was married to Pat Martin, Windsor, M.P., Essex East. On their return from Bermuda, where they will spend their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Martin will live in Windsor.

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—Attempts of two aldermen in city council here last night to suspend the bylaw governing the rental of the new bathing beach at all political parties could have free use at the bathing during the Provincial election campaign was frustrated. When the suspension resolution was voted down 8 to 2 only Ald. Clarence Hebert and Ald. John Watler, sponsors of the motion, voted for it.

Toronto, Sept. 8 (CP) — J. D. Patterson of Patterson Hill captured the senior and grand championships for Aberdeen Angus females in judging of livestock yesterday at the Canadian National Exhibition. Prairie Pride of Pat Head, Patterson's two-year-old heifer, won the awards.

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—A Detroit resident had a bylaw banning "cows, goats, swine, or other animals except horses and mules within the city limits, be passed, was referred back to the Public Works Committee at a council meeting last night.

The recommendation followed an investigation by city engineer Desmarais. It was found there were 86 cows and 14 goats in ward one.

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—Corn stalks more than 12 feet tall are reported by George H. Reinhart here.

Stratford, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—A easter bear, middle-it test high, with leaves three feet across, is growing in the garden of W. H. Youngblood, at Hickson near here.

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—A freak tomato, closely resembling a swimming duck, has been grown by Mrs. A. Edwards.

Cornwall, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—A coal was found in Lake Ontario near here recently. Local residents watched a small, dark head bobbing up and down. When its body broke water it was identified.

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 8 (CP)—Six pigs were killed when lightning struck the steel-roofed barn of George Blanke. Erin Township farmer.

Oak Park, Ill., Sept. 8 (AP)—Grave complications today imperiled Stanley McGinnis, the "sleeping beauty" who has lain in a coma for 11-2 years.

"She is a very sick girl," reported her sister, Mrs. Claire Hansen. Nine causes of concern were an abscessed tooth, appendicitis—an inflammation of the veins that has resulted in a painful swelling, and the deterioration of the patient's left leg. Specialists called in consultation decided her tooth and appendix must be removed Friday.

'Spain the Crossroads'; Goebbels Tells Nazis New Europe is in Making

Germany Ready to Fight to Last Breath Against Communism'

'BOLSHEVISM A CANKER'

Says Germany Not Trying to Nazify Spain or Seize Territory

Nuremberg, Sept. 9—(AP)— Nazi Germany's Propaganda Minister, Paul Joseph Goebbels declared before the National Socialists' party congress today a new Europe is being formed "at which the will flights to the last breath" against Communism.

Goebbels brought all his powers of invective into play in warning Europe and the dismembering that "Spain is the world's crossroads."

"What happens today in Spain may repeat itself tomorrow in any country," he said.

Tolerate No "Red" Fever in West

Then he shouted that the establishment of "a Communist power" in Western Europe "cannot be tolerated."

"Some leading American democratic political personages," Goebbels added, "sympathize with the Spanish government.

"If it is not accordingly and despicable," he cried, "to travel with this terrible world danger, then it is a case of crass stupidity to which one might spur the prayer, 'Forgive, God, forgive them, for they know not what they do.'"

The Propaganda Minister reached crescendo of vituperation when he described Bolshevism as a horrible canker, "eating its way into the healthy flesh of nations."

Denies Ulterior Motives

"Our warmest sympathies are with General Franco," he declared, "but it would be a mistake to think that Germany was trying to Nazify Spain or seize Spanish territory through her support of the Weather by magic! A great deal of magic to bring rain or to stop it is based on the imitative principle. Fraser relates that the southern Negeria the chief of the tribe produces rain by drinking water in which is mixed a magic potion. But to stop rain, he abstains from drinking water for several days. This did not work a hardship on him, for he could not drink an unlimited amount or palm wine.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept.–9 (CP)—A deep disturbance centred over the north portion of Hudson Bay, has a trough of low pressure south-southwestward across Northwest Ontario while pressure is high from the Lower Lake eastward to the Maritimes. Showers and thunder have occurred in Northern Ontario and scattered showers in East Manitoba, though in other districts the weather has been fair with a tendency to rising temperatures over Ontario.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh winds, shifting to northwest; partly cloudy; scattered thunder-showers in east portion. Friday—Moderate to fresh northwest winds; partly cloudy with stationary or a little lower temperature.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan—Fair today and Friday; not much change in temperature.

FEWER PARALYSIS CASES STIR HOPE WORST IS PAST

Cool Weather Believed to Have Helped to Curb Spread

COBOURG AREA CASES

As the number of infantile paralysis cases dwindled, medical authorities today expressed belief cooler weather helped curb the spread of the disease which struck both east and west early in June. Since its return the epidemic has claimed 56 lives and afflicted more than 1,400 persons throughout the Dominion.

Ontario with more than 1,250 cases presents the most serious situation. Toronto district where 23 persons died and London area where seven succumbed to the disease have been attacked most severely by the germ.

Western Canada has recorded 64 cases and 6 deaths. Only one of 70 have been stricken in the east where 14 cases and 2 deaths have been reported.

Calgary was another centre point to take precautions when town latrines decided to close schools.

Two New Cases in London.

London yesterday reported two new cases. When a five-year-old boy was stricken at Merrillton, the school was attending closed and other schools also may be shut.

Two new cases were admitted to Hamilton General Hospital last night when it also was reported the condition of a Milton woman, in an "iron lung" for nearly a week, was still unchanged. The woman was placed in the device when she became too weak to breathe normally. Number of cases in the Hamilton district was raised to two when a Vernonville boy became ill and was given a serum injection.

Augusta Doctor Stricken.

Brockville, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP)— Fifth case of infantile paralysis to occur in Augusta township was that of Fr. W. O. Williams, a physician practising at North Augusta. He is 42 years old and was not known to have had contact with any other case in the township.

The other four cases in the township, all of them children, are making progress toward recovery.

Democracy Challenged As Never in History

Victoria, Sept. 9 (CP) — "Never since democracy became a form of government has it been so seriously challenged as it is at this moment," Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, leader of the Conservative party, told a large Conservative meeting here last night. "In Europe you have forms of dictatorship that are unbelievable and continued.

"In the Far East you have war and all its horrors which is a threat against the peace of the world.

Thugs Hold Up, Beat, Rob Chinese Houseman on Highway

Allan Chan Has Teeth Knocked Out in Attack Near London

BITES ATTACKER

London, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP) — Stopped by two men as he drove his automobile into London west of here last night, Allan Chan, Chinese houseman for Dr. C. N. Abbott, London, was beaten and robbed of $2.50.

Left by the side of his car as the thugs fled, Chan, dazed, attempted to drive to the city for aid. His eyes swollen and blood streaming from his mouth where two teeth had been knocked out, he was unable to steer the car and it went in a ditch. A passing motorist came to his aid.

Police were unable to say if the robbery was the work of bandits who have carried out eight raids on motorists in the Toronto and Hamilton districts in the last few weeks.

One of the men waved for him to stop and give him a light for a cigarette he displayed, Chan told police. The Chinese put-up a fight before the two overpowered and told police he bit deeply into a finger of one of his attackers.

EDEN FACES TASK MAKING SEA SAFE FOR SHIPPING

Conference of Powers to End Pirate Sub Menace to go on

MOVE TO GENEVA?

Plan is to Have All Nations Keep Submarines Within Bounds

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 9—(CP Cable) — Foreign Secretary Eden and Admiralty of The Fleet, Lord Chatfield, First Sea Lord, fly to Paris this afternoon, returning to Nyon, Tonight they dine with Premier Chautemps and have preliminary talks with the French government.

Despite the absence of Germany, Italy from the conference, Nyon plan is to go ahead. It is felt here that there is a big job ahead which must be done if the high seas are to be made safe for merchant shipping.

Nyon to Geneva

But Nyon—that quiet little place on Lake Geneva—is likely again to pass from the limelight. Nyon was in deference to Italian susceptibilities. With Italy now in talks no likely to move to Geneva.

Yet with absence of Italy difficulties before the conference increase. British naval experts had devised a scheme which it was thought would end the menace. The essence of it was that all participating governments agree to keep their submarines within strictly defined areas. Any submarines found outside those zones would be classed as pirates and could be destroyed. But effectiveness of the plans depends on general acceptance.

Strong Action Expected

"The conference," the Daily Express predicts, "will decide to take strong action against pirate submarines. That is well known. The British mind is made up to take action on behalf of everybody else, be the usual form of such conferences. This one with the Turks, Greeks and Albanians will be no exception. Action against the pirates the Greeks get the best of it."

California Pioneers Enjoy Free Trip to N. Y.

New York, Sept. 9 (CP)—George Cameron, 83, and Mrs. Cameron, 79, aged couple, spent a busy birthday anniversary here today as guests of Stan. Francisco newspaper and a transcontinental airline.

In a quiet spell between sightseeing trips and Broadway shows, the sturdy Californians, oldest of the party, recalled how he worked his way from Australia to the Golden West by teaching school and that one of his students was the late Sir Robert Borden, war-time prime minister of Canada.

Four Powers are Ready To Sink Pirate Subs

Paris, Sept. 9 (AP)—French foreign office officials said tonight they had received assurances Great Britain and two other powers are willing to co-operate with France in the Mediterranean naval patrol under orders to "sink submarine attackers".

The foreign office hastily drafted plans for the naval patrol which it expected tomorrow's Mediterranean powers would be called to accept.

Refusal of Germany and Italy to take part in the conference, to be held in Switzerland, prompted formulation of the plan.

Under the proposed an international fleet composed of British, French, Turkish and Greek vessels would sink any submarine or warship attacking neutral merchantmen.

British officials were known to be in agreement with the three Greek and Turkish assurances that their warships would co-operate was received today.

Picton Closes Public School As Pupil Develops Disease

Nine Year Old Boy Said to Have Infantile Paralysis

QUARANTINE PUT ON

Picton, Ont., Sept. 9—(Special)—At an emergency meeting of the Board of Health held here last night the Picton Public School was ordered closed indefinitely following the admission of Roland McKenzie, nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Farah McKenzie, to the hospital as the first case of infantile paralysis in the county. The boy has a brother who was stricken with some germ ago with the disease.

Fellow-pupils of the stricken boy and members of their families were put under quarantine for a period of ten days. Dr. Gerald Allison, Medical Health Officer, stated that no immediate action would be taken regarding the closing of the Collegiate Institute and Separate School.

The McKenzie boy, it is stated had not been intermingling with children from outside the district, nor has he been seen at any of the summer resorts of the county. He had been at school but two days when he showed symptoms of the disease.

First evidence of the disease in Prince Edward County was seen on Saturday when a child visiting relatives here was stricken with hours after his arrival and was rushed immediately to Toronto hospital where death occurred two days later. Medical men do not associate the present case with that of the Toronto child.

ROWE DEMANDS ROYAL PROBE

Wants to Know if Their is Toll Gate Over Hotel-men

By CP STAFF WRITER

Peterborough, Ont., Sept. 9.—(CP) —A Conservative demand for Royal Commission investigation to ascertain if a "toll gate" hung over Ontario hotel keepers was issued into the political ring today. The demand came from Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, who addressed a political meeting here last night.

T. P. Lancaster, member of the last Legislature, was selected by the meeting to carry the Conservative banner in Peterborough West at the Oct. 6 Ontario elections. The Conservative leader spoke after the delegates named Mr. Lancaster.

Suspects Toll Gate Levy

"I have reason to believe from letters I have received that today there is a toll gate being levied against hotel keepers in certain parts, that is the worst ever known," Mr. Rowe said. "I demand from the present government at Queen's Park a Royal Commission to investigate the liquor-out-of-control policy."

On the eve of an election "we find hotel keepers charged a certain price a gallon," he con-

LABOR PROBLEMS PREMIER'S THEME

Disruption of Industry Fatal to Labor Says Hepburn

Timmins, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP)—Orderly progress towards solution of social problems and improved labor conditions is the policy of Ontario's Liberal government, Premier Mitchell Hepburn told a northern mining audience last night his government's stand on problems facing the province.

The premier, who speaks at Kirkland Lake and New Liskeard today, defied a group of interrupters and described them as "Lewis' men" who had appeared to disrupt the meeting. Before the meeting he reiterated his position to John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Sweat Shop Elimination.

Through the Industrial Standards Act and the Labor and Industry Branch the government was moving towards the elimination of all the sweatshops in Ontario, the premier said, was the way of progress. Nothing could be gained by disrupting industry and ruining Canada's export trade.

Ontario Industry could not operate if it could not quote competitive prices and provide steady deliveries to world markets, The United States

CHINESE BLOCK UPPER REACHES OF THE YANGTZE

Shells Land in Front of U.S. Consulate-General at Shanghai

RIVER BLOCKED

Old Steamers And Junks Loaded With Sand, Concrete Used

Shanghai, Sept. 9—(AP)—Three one-pounder shells crashed in front of the United States Consulate-General today, seriously injuring three Chinese civilians and one British Sikh policeman.

The "one-pounder" shells were fired from Chinese guns north of the International Settlement border, apparently at four low-flying Japanese planes.

Japanese Fleet Blocked

Chinese struck a new blow at the Japanese navy by blocking the upper reaches of the Yangtze River at Nanking just below Silver Island, some 30 miles east of Nanking.

The barricade of obsolete steamers and Chinese junks loaded with sand and concrete effectively blocked the Japanese fleet from spreading its warships up the river to Shanghai. It meant any consideable advance of the Japanese would place their land forces beyond the protecting range of their warships' guns.

Chinese troops held their main line of defence in the face of incessant and sustained attacks from the combined Japanese army, navy and airforce.

Hitler in Courteous Note Says Germany is Ready Cooperate with Powers

Soviet Provocation He Feels Would Hamper Nyon Conference

ITALY AND RUSSIA

Italian Reply to Invitation is of a Negative Nature

Berlin, Sept. 9—(CP-Havas)—Germany today delivered to the diplomatic representatives of Great Britain and France a note indicating unwillingness to attend the Mediterranean conference which those countries had called for tomorrow at Nyon, Switzerland.

The German reply was drawn up by Chancellor Hitler, said the Reich wished to "co-operate loyally" and suggesting that the London non-intervention committee, instead of the Nyon Conference, be asked to consider the Mediterranean problem.

Couched in courteous terms the note said Germany was ready to co-operate with other powers but, because of the "Soviet Provocation," and because Italy is did not feel the Mediterranean Conference had much chance of success.

LEO DIEGEL OPENS ROUND WITH A 67

Makes Good Start For Winning of Canadian Open Golf Championship

St. Andrew's Golf Club, Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—Leo Diegel, veteran campaigner from Philmont, Pa., opened his challenge for a fifth Canadian open golf championship today with a rousing 67, three under par, on the first 18-hole round of the title struggle.

Diegel Leo missed a six-foot putt on the 18th green and still posted a score that appeared likely to withstand the firing of 172 or more of the best scorers in United States and Canadian golf.

Four times winner of the title, won last year by Reuben Little of Montreal, Diegel had to use his course to the turn in 31, four under par, and add a stunning 36 coming back to the heels as he turned homeward with the same record of 67 at his credit.

Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y. set the record here a year ago, with his medal Diegel stood at first putt on the 18th curved past the cup and he took it for his only putting lapse.

Diegel finished a few minutes after the giant Little set out to defend the championship he won with a record-breaking 271 for 72 holes.

On the way to the turn, Diegel had birdies on fourth, fourth, fifth and eighth holes and had five threes during his amazing scoring streak.

He was one over par on the tenth and several others with a 36 being four on the long twelfth. On the 190-yard thirteenth his tee shot

LOST DINGHY, DEAD MAN FOUND

Bodies of Two Others May Be In Boat

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 9 (CP) —The dinghy in which three Toronto men had been paddling on Saturday on Lake Ontario, was reported found this afternoon near Port Weller, with one body in it.

Airplanes, speedboats and tugs only yesterday abandoned a wide search for the boat in which Fred Ferris, 20, and Gerald Ferris, 18, C. Heim, all of Toronto, set out across the lake Saturday.

The boat was noticed by Barnice Trobridge, 14, and Provincial Police were notified.

Nazi Control of United States Is Feared by Chicago Times

Newspaper Charges Uniforms Suggestive of Storm Troopers'

ATTACKS BUND

Chicago, Sept. 9—(AP)—The Daily Times said in a copyright article today that "in uniforms strangely suggestive of those worn by Adolf Hitler's Nazi storm troops, a relatively small but rapidly growing army is preparing for the German counterpart of 'Der Tag' when it plans to seize control of the United States."

Reporters Probe Organization

The newspaper said the article resulted from an "exhaustive investigation of American Nazis" made by three reporters and investigators, James J. Metcalfe, his brother, and William A. Mueller. Mueller wrote the article.

The investigators, the newspaper said, "worked for many months both from within and outside the American Nazi Bund—German-American Bund—and its companion organization, the Deutscher Volksbund" travelling from coast to coast and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, in "most international secrets."

The Name of Oberwinder

"Under the name of Oberwinder" the article continued, "the Metcalfe brothers two years ago built themselves up 45 Nazi sympathizers and were accepted as members of the organizations.

"Jim" Metcalfe established himself in the predominantly German Yorkville section of New York City and "joined the Deutscher Volksbund for the Amerikaeducher Bund on a cross-country tour.

"A month later John Metcalfe became 283 storm trooper in New York. His brother, James, was accepted as member of the silent army operated by the Deutscher Volksbund in Chicago.

PEACHES' PRICE SKYROCKETING

Selects Go at Sixty Cents Per Basket on Market

Peaches skyrocketed to a new high on the city market today with "selected" being quoted at sixty cents per six quart basket, a rise of twenty cents in four days. Offers were offered at fifty-five cents and No. 2s at forty-five cents, a substantial increase over last Saturday quotations.

"They will be higher yet on Saturday," predicted a vendor. "This particular kind of peach is passed over its peak. Albertas, a later variety, are gradually ripening and will likely be available next week at lower prices."

A splendid display of farm and dairy produce greeted a slim attendance this morning with several prices remaining unchanged from Tuesday quotations. Tomatoes were the only drop at fifty cents per bushel while potatoes remained steady at ninety cents. Eighty cents per bushel lot with pecks quoted at twenty cents.

Sweet corn was fairly plentiful, selling at ten and fifteen cents per dozen, with cucumbers also sold at general prices.

Lombard, Bradshaw and Blue Damson plums were offered, at thirty cents per six-quart basket. Duchess apples were offered at twenty-five cents per peck.

Scarcity of eggs for St. Lawrence variety was attributed to the killing of hens for winter, by one vendor. "There will be a few available on Saturday," he prophesied.

Eggs noted a slight decrease today with "A's" being offered at twenty-six cents and "mediums" at twenty-three cents. Broiler chickens are scarce with Broiler available offered at seventy-five cents per pair.

No fish was offered to shoppers today.

Wild Geese Sign Of Early Winter

Signs of an early winter are forecast this week by the unusually large flocks of wild geese which have been congregating in the Bay of Quinte district, it was stated by veteran prophets of the weather from whom bear their predictions also on the early flocking of blackbirds and other winged summer visitors. In the Bay back ducks have been observed in large numbers and smaller flocks of wild Canada geese have also been observed winging over the district from the north.

Trenton Drivers Appear in Court

Trenton, Sept. 9.—Glen Gunter of Trenton, was the driver of a truck that crashed with a U.S. auto east of here on highway No. 2 on Monday night. The truck was travelling east and the auto west. The auto was sandwiched in a motor vehicle proceeding in the same direction. The Gunter truck and the U.S. auto machine were badly damaged while the other car was able to proceed under its own power after the front right wheel hydraulic brake was unlocked. Gunter appeared in court and pleaded guilty to reckless driving before Magistrate C. A. Butler. He was assessed $15, and costs and his operators permit was suspended for a period of two days.

Cyclist Hit

Roy Brown losing his bicycle in the Township of Murray was struck by a car operated by Albert Lambert of Trenton. Lambert was charged with reckless driving following the accident and the officer who preferred the charge said Lambert was under the influence of liquor. The bicycle was damaged slightly but the rider escaped. Pleading guilty in police court Lambert was ordered to make restitution and paid $15 and costs. His permit was cancelled, one month.

LABOR PROBLEMS

was losing its export trade because of industrial instability. John L. Lewis was also being blamed by the laboring people of the United States than "the meanest employer in that country".

Prosperity in North Pointed Out.

Mr. Hepburn said Northern Ontario was prosperous now because of the forestry and financial policies of the Liberal government. There was hardly an employable man out of work in the north.

The government reclaimed the timber limits granted to friends of former Conservative governments and found much work by permitting them to be pulpwood to the United States. At the same time the government set up mills that could be established in Ontario so export would not continue indefinitely.

Conservative Leader Earl Rowe now posed as Labor's friend but when limits as Conservatives member in the House of Commons and the Legislature he opposed most of the labor legislation now on the statute books, the premier charged.

He had been advised by Mr. Rowe of associating with millionaires, but now posing as a friend of anyone considered his actions in reducing income tax, in granting mining claims, in tracts, reclaiming timber limits, collecting succession duties and income tax. His income tax were pleasing to millionaires.

War Veterans Seek Information of Graves Of Comrades Here

United War Veterans of this city are desirous of obtaining a complete list of graves of war veterans buried in local cemeteries to be used on annual Decoration Day services. To this end, it was stated, it is believed incomplete owing to the fact that some graves have not been located, has been compiled by officers of the local unit. Relatives of departed veterans are asked to co-operate in the compiling of a complete list in order that no grave may be overlooked. All communications are asked to be sent to Memorial Hall, in care of Leroy Madden, secretary.

POLICE BLOTTER

Some person has his autumn's supply of meat undoubtedly stored away nicely—at least they're on the way a local butcher feels today.

Yesterday Messrs. Thompson and Black, local purveyors of meats, journeyed to Thurlow Township where they purchased a quantity of dressed beef. The meat was placed in the car and on the return journey to Belleville commenced. When Messrs. Thompson and Black commenced the process of unloading their purchases, however, a quarter of a motor vehicle was missing. It is believed the meat fell out of the car between there and Belleville.

Although a return trip was made over the route taken by the butchers and their loss was discovered, no visible evidence of the quantity of beef were in evidence.

Court appeals were necessary in Belleville and environs during the past 24 hours, leaving the real block available for the three weary knights of the bench who appeared in quest of a night's shelter.

VETERANS TO NAME OFFICERS

Members of the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, Belleville Branch will nominate officers for the coming year at the regular meeting to be held tonight in the club rooms on Front Street. A large number of veterans and ex-service men are expected to attend the function for which an enjoyable program has been prepared.

SAIL FASTENED ON HANDLE BARS

Regina Youth Passes Thru City on Eventful Journey

Wind-browned and tanned by weeks of travel in the open during which time he has covered hundreds of miles on his sturdy bicycle and his high athletic record of 18, from Regina, Saskatchewan, passed through the city last night and this morning after a brief stop over for lunch at a downtown restaurant.

Leaving his western home about one month ago, the bicycling tourist has doubled the lesser known roads of the Province seeking adventure and short cuts to shorten the long northern section of this and other counties. A fishing rod and plenty of tackle is one of the essential articles of his heavy kit consisting chiefly of a pup tent and camping accessories.

Different from other cyclists who depend solely upon their legs for locomotion, the western youth, has fastened a sail to his frame and sail fastened to the handle bars which is operated by the varying breezes when straight-line travel is engaged in. By this means he is able to cover lengthy distances in the simple expedient of coasting and letting the wind do the work. His biggest day's travel, he recalls, was on No. 2 highway some distance west, when he covered 150 miles without pause and the minimum of effort.

Will Visit Ottawa

His trip east will end at Ottawa, where he expects to visit the government buildings mainly for the purpose of discovering just how the Canadian government is managed. His high school training in Regina will record his impressions of his trip in a book which he optimistically hopes to sell.

Eastern "people" he believes are better entertainers than the folk in the west. There is less camaraderie, less inclination to "visit" the traveler on the part of those farther east, he reports from his own personal experience.

Next year the youth hopes to continue his journey to Europe by motorcycle, a trip from coast to coast. The cost has already been estimated by him to be covered greatly the cost of the present trip on bicycle which to date has been less than forty dollars.

ROWE DEMANDS

servative leader said. The hotel strikes, he said, are a direct result of this administration because they are battling against Premier Hepburn.

Blames Hepburn on Labor Policy

Heading his attack on the government's labor policy, Mr. Rowe characterized Premier Hepburn for his labor policy as "Hepburn Law". Hepburn threatened to drive out foreign labor agitators, he said, and then he was unable to do so. He told Mr. Hepburn this six weeks ago, Mr. Rowe declared.

"If there's ever been a political issue in this province, it is Mr. Hepburn's labor policy," he added. "Hepburn is asking a man in charge of the working man who has refused to trust and he will use it against him in the election.

"Men have a right to strike. Men have a right to picket. Men have a right to collective bargaining. Neither Mr. Hepburn nor I can take that away from them."

Law And Order

"That is their right to free association. But remember that for every action there is a reaction and those men owe respect for law and order."

From Peterborough Mr. Rowe proceeds today to Port Hope for an afternoon address. He will speak in Oshawa at night. His Southern Ontario campaign will be broken for a week Saturday night when he embarks for a week's tour of the north with Port Arthur and Fort William the first stops.

NAZI CONTROL

spreading throughout the nation. Leaders of the movement say they will gain control of the United States, but not until the Communist revolution is over.

The organization is an integral part of the Hitler movement in Germany, acting as the secret communication with Berlin. Every meeting of Nazi propaganda is used to win converts to the cause.

Tenets of Band

"Chief tenet of the German-American Bund is an intense hatred of Jews and all things Jewish. Other anti-semitic organizations are uniting with the Bund and the leaders plan will be a general Fascist dictatorship.

"The Amerikadeutscher Volksbund now has 80 odd gauleiter or posts, scattered from coast to coast. Each group has a select organization of uniformed elements commonly called O. D's. The sword purpose of the organization is to police Bund gatherings but it is an exact replica of the Hitler storm troops."

"A Lot of Hooey"

Andover, N.J., Sept. 9 (AP)—The directory of the German-American Bund's Camp Nordland today called the assertion that American Nazis are preparing to seize control of the United States "the greatest joke in history".

"Such a statement is without sense, nothing but a big lie and a lot of hooey," said August Klapprott, head of the oft-criticized camp for girls and boys in Sussex county hills.

Klapprott gave these views in commenting on a Chicago Daily Times copyrighted article which said "the purpose of the Bund "say they will seize control of the United States, but not until the Communist revolution starts."

Klapprott reiterated previous assertions he and Fritz Kuh, National leader, welcomed any official investigation of the camp.

Italy Declines

Rome, Sept. 9.—Premier Italy declined an invitation to confer with 11 other powers on ways to stop Mediterranean piracy today by suggestion that Premier Mussolini of France that the question be placed in the hands of the Spanish non-intervention committee. Germany acted in identical fashion.

The Italian reply was sent by Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano to the British and French Governments which have approved Mussolini's Mediterranean policy in Switzerland. It said:

1. Soviet Accusation Blamed

1. The Fascist Government at first was inclined to accept the invitation to the conference.

2. But Soviet accusations that Italian submarines had torpedoed and sunk two Soviet ships "introduced at the last moment a new and grave element into the situation."

3. "The Fascist Government has come to the conclusion that the arguments to be considered at the conference are covered by the non-intervention committee in London."

This 21-power committee, set up months ago in an attempt to keep foreign men and arms out of Spain, "has had experience also in technical and naval matters which renders it perfectly adopted to facing the problem indicated.

Settles Soviet Issue

"It is evident the Fascist Government must postpone every decision of an affirmative sense until the incident created by the Soviet note shall have been satisfactorily settled," the communication added.

The Soviet note, directed to Italy, protested demanded redress for the "Italian submarine attacks." Italy rejected it and the Soviet Union immediately pressed the charges in a second communication, which Italy has ignored.

If the Mediterranean piracy matter is taken before the non-intervention committee, Italy said, it should "avoid the creation of a new and special conference."

It also would have the advantage of "not excluding any one of the great European powers and other powers directly interested, thus permitting particularly the participation of Germany and Portugal."

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon—The Labor Day holiday was observed here, perhaps somewhat different than some of the larger centres. The school children were given a holiday, but all of the factories were operating as usual.

The presence of Jack Frost on Monday morning alerted the corn-binders going and in a few days silo-filling will be the order of the day. The farmers are finding it difficult to plow. A rain would be much appreciated.

The Huntingdon Council met for their September meeting at Town Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

The official Board of the United Church of West Huntingdon circuit held their quarterly meeting at United Church here on Monday evening.

Rev. W. R. Tristram was the guest speaker at the Bethel anniversary dinner on Tuesday evening.

Mr. George Sarles has rented the Rodgers farm on Ridge Road and will take immediate possession.

The poliomyelitis scare brought great disappointment to the school children when it was learned on Tuesday that the annual school fair which was to have been held on Thursday at Ivanhoe was postponed indefinitely.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Geo. McCrum was held at her late residence, Ridge Road, in the beautiful grove adjoining the home. In the absence of the Rev. Mr. Scott of St. Paul's United Church, Rev. Mr. Sockett, of the Rawdon circuit, conducted the service. Mr. Hugh Sinclair gave two appropriate solos. Interment was made in Stirling cemetery. The pall-bearers were Sandy McCurdy, Philip Carr, Frank Hammond, Nathaniel Heath, Witney Richardson and Hiram Rodgers.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Sills, Russell and Lindsay and Mr. Howard Ashley spent a few days recently visiting Mrs. Sills and relatives at Embro in Oxford County. They also attended the Lindsay-Rutherford family picnic which was held on the old homestead farm.

Labor Day guests of Mrs. Sarah Parney and Don were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Parney of Detroit, Mrs. Jack Lowe, Peter and Jeffrey, of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cosby and Bobbie of Campbellford, Mrs. Lowe and sons are remaining over for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold McGee and family spent the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy McGee of Campbellford.

Mrs. J. Sills, president of the North Hastings W. I. visited the Wellman's W. I. on Wednesday and gave an address. She was accompanied by Mrs. Elmer Post and Mrs. John Hassell.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee and Barden, of Belleville, were Monday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Post.

Mr. and Mrs. James Kay and Miss Ruby Reay of Belleville were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Reay.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Donnan and Billy spent Monday at Silver Lake summer resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Longwell of Port Colborne were week-end guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter McIlroy.

Mr. Wm. McMechan, Sr., was a Sunday guest of Mr. Geo. Post.

Mrs. J. S. Wilson entertained the W.M.S. of United Church on Wednesday for their monthly meeting.

Mrs. Geo. Post spent a few days recently with friends at Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs Floyd Sherfield and Jean were Monday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

Miss Kathleen Johnston of Stirling spent the past few days with friends here.

Guests of Mr and Mrs. Embury Hough on Sunday were, Mr. and Mrs. Robb, Mrs. Neal of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Don Haggarty of West Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fahs of Brighton and Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Hough, of Frankford.

Mrs. Jeffery is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Lorne Reid.

BURR'S

Burr's— Mrs. Norman Fox returned home on Saturday from visiting in Lake Simcoe district, she spent a week with Misses Jean and Beth Pringle, Toronto, at their summer cottage. Miss Jean Pringle accompanied her home returning to Toronto on Sunday.

Miss Louis Kee, St. Catharines, is visiting her friend, Mrs. Norman Fox.

On Monday afternoon, Mrs. Norman Fox and Miss Irene Fox entertained in honour of Miss Winnie Purtelle, a bride-to-be when a number of girl friends gave her a linen shower.

Miss Margaret Huffman played wedding music and Winnie was seated beneath a large white bell with pink streamers forming a little bower. Mrs. Norman Fox read the following address and Irene presented her with a pink and white basket piled with gifts.

Dear Winnie,—

Very lately, this we find,
That you are matrimonially inclined.
One by one all down through life,
Some girl decides to be a wife.
We bring you to this little tower
To tender you a linen shower;
We hope that you will have few cares,
No trouble take you unawares.
As with your mate through life you go,
Your hair may sometime change to snow,
But may you still keep young and gay,
As with your friends you are today.

Winnie was completely taken by surprise and she received a number of very nice gifts.

After a jolly afternoon of music and social chat the hostess served a dainty lunch and all wished Winnie a very happy married life.

FRANKFORD

Frankford—Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Finnigan have returned after a trip to the Coast.

Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer motored to Kingston on Labor Day.

MODERN 'HIGHWAYMEN'

The bandit in the bank has been known for long. So was the highwayman of other times, who gave such a reputation to the highways as to make the name highwayman's worth pit ill-meaning several centuries ago when ways were foul and awful deeds transpired.

But evil deeds are happening occasionally on the highways of this modern age, when the ways are not foul. This is the attacking wounding and then robbing of tourists who had settled down for the night on a sideroad for rest.

These modern 'highwaymen' will meet the full measure of a criminal's punishment if caught and convicted.

RETURN OF COLONIES

Germany at the Nazi congress at Nuremberg has expressed a desire for return of colonies. About the same time the committee of the League of Nations reported pointed out that those complaining of the need of raw materials have themselves to blame for their inordinate outlays on rearmament have raised prices of raw materials which they might easily have had were it not for the expenditures on arms.

There is also the point that not all nations handle colonies alike. Colonial possession should not mean draining colonies as used to be done with conquered provinces but rather the reverse. Today according to some nations colonies are not to be exploited but are to serve a purpose of providing an opportunity of development under wise guidance.

Return of the German colonies lost in the Great War may be a vision but the realization is probably very far off Britishers know these colonies generally are faring well under the League mandate.

A CEMETERY RESTORED

Time wreaks its revenge on cemeteries. What were once well laid out and clean spots become in time unsightly and monuments fall.

Today there is a feeling that these burial places of early settlers must be maintained in a state of repair. In many sections excellent work has been done by local organizations.

With ancient cemeteries the problem is what to do with the fallen and broken stones. East Nissouri folk meet on Sunday near Woodstock to commemorate the dead pioneers. One of the finest efforts is the collection of the fallen headstones brought together on one concrete base and set up in this cemetery in the centre of the cemetery. The erect shafts make an imposing appearance. The memorials are artistically arranged and will endure for ages on their concrete square base which covers considerable area.

WARS

Wars are old affairs. What makes one wonder at them is when one starts to figure out how they are carried on. No war is unprepared for, at least one of the contestants has got ready against the day. When they do occur there is no difficulty in financing them. Unless neutrality is put into force effectively, wealth and arms are poured into both sides and the carnage of men and boys and the slaughter of hopes of mothers and sisters and wives and sweethearts and children goes on with intense fury.

War is costly, it is the negation of progress and civilization, and it can absorb millions of men and their labors.

Today the world which was convinced perhaps halfheartedly because it did not realize what peace means in effort and in sacrifice of selfishness of interests, talks war, is frightened at the thought, undeclared war is waged.

Much is to be done yet before the millenium of the day of world peace comes when all nations will love peace and their citizens will not profit by the calamity of war.

Just at this moment Russia and Italy are looking at one another with a steady glare over the torpedoing of two Soviet ships. For two years it has been one thing or another, the Ethiopian trouble, the Hitler resumption of the west bank of the Rhine, the Spanish war and now the Oriental engagement. Truly the world has drunk deep of sorrows. It is the nervous system wrecked with fears of dire events to be.

Yet most persons believe war is wrong, anti-social, anti-international, inimical to every principle of justice. No other means of righting what are called wrongs could be allowed to crop up as this antediluvian way, this cave-man slugging of nations is allowed to live in civilization. Let anyone think of some primitive piece of attack, some intensely cruel way of doing things in society and he is prevented. But the nations allow the most savage of all—when men are used as pawns and blown to pieces. If war must be why cannot some one invent chess pawns than men and money!

TIME MARCHES ON AND BELLEVILLE MARCHES WITH IT. This season has witnessed a healthy renewal in building operations. All over the city new building is under way, new houses, and improvements to homes, besides improvements in the business district, noticeably new fronts to stores. The largest single construction project under way, of course, is the McCarthy Theatre, which will bear the name of its builder and owner, Mr. J. C. McCarthy, of this city. The building is taking shape now, the concrete work having been finished and the steel men now being in charge. The Dinsher Steel Co., of Toronto, in charge of the steel work with a large staff of skilled workmen, is busily engaged, and a large derrick has been placed in position to facilitate the placing of the thirty-five tons of steel required by the plans. The new theatre will have a large stage which will accommodate the largest road shows, and a modern air conditioning plant will be installed to assure the comfort of patrons at all times. Mr. McCarthy is planning on having the building completed and in operation before the dawn of the New Year.

MERRY ENGLAND WON WARS ON THE CRICKET FIELD OF ETON, it is said, and truly, no doubt, for England learned to play long years ago, and cricket, football, golf, and other sports bred a race of stout fellahs with iron nerves and clear brains. Even business was not permitted to interfere with sport and weekends have long been devoted to various branches of recreation with consequent benefit of health. The four o'clock tea habit, too, is a feature of English business life—when energy has passed the peak and brain and body slows up then the cup of tea becomes the chief feature of the pause, that refreshes, and after that period of relaxation and refreshment the human body can again go full speed ahead and finish the day with a vigor which means the best of results. New countries take a long time to learn to play, to make playtime wait upon worktime and make work a pleasure besides promoting efficiency and better work. Some folks still think that there are not enough working hours in the day to accomplish all they wish, forgetting, perhaps, that too much work and too little play tends to shorten life—and the loss of one year of life can not be compensated by any amount of work accomplished—but of course that is just our opinion, based on years of experience and observation.

WAR IS WHAT GENERAL SHERMAN SAID IT WAS, only more so, and it looks as if the evil forces which go to make war were busily engaged brewing the mess, with prospects of the pot boiling over any minute. The danger spots are visible to the naked eye, and if those responsible tried they couldn't make war possibilities nearer. Britannia which has braved a thousand years, the battle and the breeze, gazes calmly at the turmoil and the shouting, at the same time preparing for any kind of eventualities on land air or sea. Looks as if Great Britain, the United States, Canada and the other Dominions will have to get together in a strong defensive alliance probably supported by France and Russia in a desperate effort to preserve the peace of the world, or, failing that to be in a position to chastise those nations who deliberately provoke war if there ever was a time when the League of Nations should be strengthened and given power to act as the big world policeman it was intended to be, backed up by all the resources of each of the peace-loving supporting countries it is right now when war in its most horrible form is being exemplified in the far east. Some one said that he loved peace well enough to fight for it, but why not get force enough behind a world police force to show warlike nations the futility of bucking up against a stone wall, as the saying is—an international peace police force stronger than those nations united for war.

MONDAY, LABOR DAY

This has been an ideal day at the Ex, bright and cool, and a record crowd. Many labor organizations with their bands and floats paraded through the grounds, and gave the day a good rousing start. The young people ate candy fluff or floss as they loafed and listened. This candy looks like pink cotton fibre wound large on a stick, appears to be a tempting bargain for five cents.

Many were heard to say that they had come long distances to hear the United States Navy Band, and that they were not disappointed. The variety and excellence of many selections were highly praised.

NEW SONG HIT

I have recently heard what I believe is a new song hit because I have not heard it before, I like the words, because they express a great deal of the philosophy of life. Those who outstrip others in the race and struggle of life so often feel the pangs of envy and jealousy, and as a result are unnecessarily dismayed. The music because it is comforting and reassuring, the type of the tune, "When my dream-boat comes home." The name of my favorite new song is, She's Only You, Honey, don't you listen, don't you listen. Here are a few lines from memory.

"When folks say you're a drip,
That your head's not just right,
Don't you listen, Honey, don't you listen!
Keep right on your merry way,
Don't you listen, Honey, don't you listen!
Nor heed at all what fools may say.
Don't you listen, Honey, don't you listen!
When they say you are a dope,
And that you should get a mop,
Don't you listen, Honey, don't you listen!
Envy and spite are awful in their might
And would hurl you clear out of sight,
But don't you listen, Honey, don't you listen!"

THE COMEDY OF NEWSBOYS

Many newsboys have developed into great men of one kind or another. They come in close contact with throbbing life, and learn in the school of experience, the best so far discovered. They are learning the funny side of life too, as I shall never explain. One hot afternoon at the Ex, while thousands were sitting on hard benches in the sun awaiting the United States Navy Band concert, one lad heartily laden with papers shouted:

"Papers here, papers, the Globe and Mail, The Star, The Telegram, one to read for the news, another very thick to sit on, and another to use as sunshade, get all the papers here, and be comfortable."

This chirpy lad gained many laughs in all the ways he had suggested were without in the least understanding that some of his customers were laughing at certain unintended points of humor he had said.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

On the same afternoon that three newspapers per customer were in such demand, I found myself seated on one of the aforesaid hard green benches beside a nicely dressed man of about my own age.

"This is a great Fair for a small city like Toronto," he began in a kind of exploratory effort.

"I agree with you, sir; it is not by any means a failure."

"You see I have been at nearly all the World's Fairs on this continent and I'm in a position to compare them. This Fair is good, but it isn't big like ours in the States," he continued with more self-confidence.

"I found the immense displays of growing flowers at the San Diego World Fair last year to be the finest without any exception in the world," I replied encouragingly.

"You know, we, Americans do things in a bigger and better way. This Fair would not amount to much at all, but for the United States Navy Band for that is drawing the crowds." At this point our American visitor glowed with enthusiasm and pride, but he suddenly noticed that my temperature had not been rising.

"You are an American?" he inquired eagerly.

"No sir, I'm a Canadian."

"Excuse me there is someone over yonder whom I want to see," and he hurried away.

As I had often been mistaken by Americans for what I was not, I soon forgot the embarrassment I had witnessed with amusement.

THE GRANDSTAND

The grandstand at the Ex seats twenty-five thousand people, and it is well patronized every afternoon and evening. The general admission is a quarter, with reserved seats fifty cents to a dollar.

The performance in the grandstand is wonderful, but at night there is vaudeville with a pageant which requires three hours.

VAUDEVILLE

Four beautiful horses waltz, two-step, kneel and bow, and jump over hurdles.

Two chariots each with four horses compete in a race around the track as the Romans often used to do.

Two autos stripped of everything but wheels and frame compete in auto polo somewhat similar to that with horses but the ball is quite large. This contest is the many times due to collisions and spills.

Two donkeys were made to kick furiously, and at the same time large inflated leather balls were dropped on their swift flying heels. The balls were often kicked among the spectators to the amusement of all, especially the children.

There were several acrobatic performances of the clown type, usually quite funny.

The bkn divers (men) ascended a steel tower to a height of thirty-five feet, and landed in a large tank of water. At night the surface of the water was covered with gasoline and lighted so the divers could see their objective very plainly, and not dive to certain death. Some ladies gave graceful exhibitions of diving from a spring-board a few feet above the tank. As usual the clown was there too and made much merriment by his folly.

The twenty-four girls from Roxy's theatre in New York were the most popular. Their first number was on bicycles, and their intricate movements were very beautiful and clever. Their second number was in bathing attire, and each had a very large rubber ball such as is used for various games in the water. They gave several interesting drills in this connection.

PAGEANT, EMPIRE ONWARD

The pageant consisted of several scenes, and was intended to show the progress of the Empire during the last hundred years. It was beautiful, instructive and entertaining.

Scene 1. It represented a street in London, England, when the young Princess Victoria was proclaimed Queen in June 1837, one hundred years ago. There were many people dressed in the manner of that time, and a funny fishmonger in his dray cart was driving a donkey around and amusing the people. At the conclusion of each scene the lights went out on the stage while they prepared for the next.

Scene 2. Queen Victoria is giving a party at Buckingham Palace and has her favorite female dancers perform for her guests. The dances are old fashioned and quaint, the enormous hoop skirts, but the music, the graceful movements, and the various colors of the dresses make the scene very beautiful and entertaining. Indeed it may be said that each scene was especially beautiful, because of beautiful dresses and uniforms, as well as for pomp and ceremony.

Scene 3. The military and naval preparations for the Boer war. Company after company of soldiers paraded to a large steamer with smoke belching from its funnels, and marched on board after bidding a fond farewell of mothers and sweethearts. It was a pathetic scene.

Scene 4. Here we see gaiety and dancing at Edward VII and Queen Alexandra's coronation a large number of distinguished visitors at Stockingham Palace. The dresses and dances in this scene are much more modern and the kilts is always apparent that Edward (familiarly Teddy) was a prince of good fellows. A group of about a score of young men in tall coats, top hats and canes (supposedly from the famous London theatre) do most of the dancing in this scene, very well too. Note that Victoria do most of the dancing in this scene, very well too. Note that Victoria shows this feminine preference, and Edward the masculine, although in both cases there were dancers with partners. Color, grace, and music always predominate with excellent results.

Scene 5. Here we see the sailor king, in the uniform of an admiral, reviews his navy, sailors and soldiers. Half a dozen war vessels move to various points in the background. Bands, sailors and soldiers march and to and fro in the foreground. The whole scene is thoroughly naval and military and the kilts is always apparent that Edward (familiarly Teddy) was a prince of good fellows. A group of about a score of young men in tall coats, top hats and canes (supposedly from the famous London theatre) do most of the dancing in this scene, very well too. Note that Victoria shows this feminine preference, and Edward the masculine, although in both cases there were dancers with partners. Color, grace, and music always predominate with excellent results.

Scene 5. Here we see the sailor king, in the uniform of an admiral, reviews his navy, sailors and soldiers. Half a dozen war vessels move to various points in the background. Bands, sailors and soldiers march and to and fro in the foreground. The whole scene is thoroughly naval and military and the kilts is always apparent that Edward (familiarly Teddy) was a stirring and powerful. The spectator thinks of the British Lion and the "Red, Red Rose" of Scotland.

Scene 6. The Coronation procession passes along the track in front of the grandstand and reviewed by the king in London, Canada, and in fact followed by the Coronation ceremony somewhat abbreviated of course. The actual crowning of George VI and Elizabeth is shown with necessary details. The splendor of both the procession and the crowning are splendid and very impressive. This scene is splendid beyond power of description.

Scene 7. In the final scene the King and Queen along with the two princesses and others are standing on the balcony at Buckingham Palace receiving the greetings of all parts of the Empire. With flags flying groups of soldiers from every part of the Empire come before him and take the assigned position in the stage. Then with bands playing and singing these march past the balcony in a long column, and pass off the stage. Your hard seat reminds you as to where you are, and then you realize that the scene is the most splendid of your life, one never to be forgotten. But you are to get a lot more for your money yet, and there is no waiting.

MUSICAL BEDE

Thirty-two Royal Canadian Mounted Policemen with pennants flying from their long spears rode to and fro before the grandstand in the most spectacular manner. Their horses can imagine. Bands played and horses pranced that they went through all the movements and formations commonly known for soldiers on foot. The skill of these horses seemed to marvellous as to almost human. Again and again thousands upon thousands clapped their hands and cheered and the horses seemed to understand and went on more determinedly in their intricate evolutions. Little wonder that London last May went wild over our Mounties, because they are truly splendid. They finally they massed together in two lines and with spaces point made a dashing charge such as history tells about the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade." The spectators rose to their feet, and gave vent to their enthusiasm.

FIREWORKS

For half a century Toronto Exhibition has been famous for its fireworks after the evening performance before the grandstand and this year is no exception to that splendid record. For half an hour the sky was filled with, the most beautifully colored stars and showers of gold. Set pieces of all descriptions were also displayed.

At no other place have I ever seen such splendid fireworks.

It is easy to imagine how many things I have described in this series of articles will affect different people differently, but at the same time I always hope truthfully.

Best Wishes to All.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Sept. 9th 1917

His Honor Judge Wills Conducted Division Court at St. Ola yesterday.

Your HOME IMPROVEMENT LOAN is an Investment in Living

What does your home need most? A new roof, a coat of paint, more modern heating and plumbing equipment, a modal kitchen, a spare room for the children or a week-end guest? Whatever improvement you have in mind you can finance it this year with a Home Improvement Loan. At any branch of The Royal Bank the manager will be glad to discuss such a loan with you. No security or endorsers are required but borrowers must be able to retire their loans in the stipulated period out of incomes. Repayment is arranged by convenient monthly instalments, spread over one to three years. For loans over $1,000 the period may be extended to five years. Should you wish to take advantage of the Home Improvement Plan ask at your nearest branch for full particulars.

Ask for booklet, "Loans for Home Improvement" which explains how to measure your requirements under the Home Improvement Plan.

Weddings

STEWART—McLEAN

In Knox Church, Napanee, Toronto, yesterday afternoon, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Amy McLean, daughter of Mrs. and the late J. S. McLean, to Mr. Clair Stewart, son of Rev. Dr. F. G. Stewart, formerly minister of St. Andrew's Church in this city, and Mrs. Stewart. White gladioli adorned the chapel for the ceremony which was conducted by the groom's father. Dr. Charles Peakes played the wedding music.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her brother, wore a regency gown of ivory satin with pearl and silver leaves at the neckline, and a veil of rosepoint lace. She carried a spray of lilies of the valley.

Attending the bride were Miss Mary McLean, her sister, Miss Joan Knowlton and Miss Ethel Maclean. They were all dressed alike in faille taffeta in new blue, made on regency lines with matching felt bonnets, and carried bouquets of Johanna Hill roses.

Mr. MacNevison was best man and the ushers were Mr. Douglas Stewart, Mr. Ian McLean, Mr. Eric Aldwinckle and Mr. Murray Bonnycastle.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Napanee Ave., where Mrs. McLean received gowned in gray chiffon with black duboonet accessories. Mrs. Stewart, mother of the groom, chose a gown of deep blue crepe with matching hat and veil. Later the bridal couple left for a honeymoon in France, the bride travelling in a yellow wool ensemble with brown accessories. On their return they will live in Toronto. Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cameron of this city.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of Shannonville W.M.S. of the United Church, was held September 2, at the home of Mrs. Frank Doxtater with Mrs. Orval Stratton, Group Leader in charge. After the opening hymn all joined in repeating the Lord's prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Orval Stratton and the devotional leaflet entitled "The Unchanging Christ" was read by Mrs. H. Shelter and Mrs. Robertson offered prayer. Roll was called by the secretary and was responded to by the members repeating the name of one of the W.M.S. missionaries.

The President, Mrs. Everett Stratton, took charge of the business. Mrs. Claude Clarke read a letter from Mrs. (Rev.) Ross Farnsworth of Belleville. Mrs. Orval Stratton read a poem and the next chapter of the Study Book was read by Mrs. Robertson and was very interesting. Mrs. O. Stratton thanked all those who had helped with her meetings in any way.

After closing hymn all repeated the Mizpah Benediction. Collection $1.70 and for Flower fund sixty cents. A delicious lunch was served on the shady lawn.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

GALL BLADDER INFECTION, GALL STONES, AND OPERATION

It is now known that most of the pain in the stomach and small intestine from gas pressure is often due to sluggishness of the liver and gall bladder.

Pain from gas pressure in the large intestine or colon is very often due to eating too much starch food or failing to chew the starch food thoroughly before moving it down to the stomach. Thus it has been found that the starch grain-digesting ferment unbroken defies the digestion in the stomach and small intestine; when the organisms present there break up the starch granule and allow the gas to escape.

However when there is considerable gas coming up from the stomach after eating, slight pain in the region of the liver and gall bladder, little traces of jaundice in the skin from time to time, it is considered probable that a sluggish liver and gall bladder or the presence of gall stones. The dye and X-ray test will usually show the presence of gall stones and inflammation of the gall bladder.

Fortunately the majority of those with gall stones do not know they have them and any little symptoms that may be present are blamed on an irritable stomach, or eating too much fat or rich food.

Fortunately also the operation for removal of the gall stones and draining or removing the gall bladder is now much more free from danger than previously owing to making a more careful selection of the time to operate when operation does not have to be done immediately.

The inflammation of the gall bladder and the formation of stones is believed to be due to infection carried there by the blood from other parts of the body—teeth, tonsils, sinuses, intestine; and the gall bladder, in turn, can send infection by means of the blood to other parts.

However in order to prevent those with slight gall bladder symptoms such as raising gas after meals (eructations) from worrying about an operation, Sir James Walton, in the Journal of Surgery, Gynecology and Obstetrics states that he does not consider these mild gas eructations as sufficient to require operation on the gall bladder. Cutting down on fat foods and bending the body sideways, with knees straight, should keep gall bladder in fairly active.

Avoiding or removing infection should prevent gall stone formation.

GOOD MANNERS

How To Be A Good Stepmother.

Perhaps the hardest role any woman is ever called upon to fill is to marry a widower with teen-age children. The very name "stepmother" is enough to conjure up discord, if practically learned from.

Going back to the beloved fairy tales of our early childhood, we remember the cruel stepmother who made a slavey of Cinderella, while her own daughters, perfumed and as ostriches went off to the ball to meet the Prince. And there were other child martyrs to stepmother cruelty in these storybooks, from which we hurriedly learned how to read. This is terribly unjust to a class, more sinned against than sinning.

The stepmother's fate was sealed before she hung up her hat in the new home. Today's mail brings a letter from a correspondent in answer to one which appeared in this column a little while ago. The earlier letter was signed "Should Be Wiser". The writer hesitated to marry a widower with two children because she felt that the very names of stepmother had her "licked before she started." Here's the way correspondent managed the difficult task:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Please let me have enough space in your column, to answer a letter signed 'Should be Wiser.' Like the writer, I married, at 25, a widower of 47, who had a daughter of 14. Our daughter is now 16, and we're all very happy.

"The first months were pretty difficult, because this girl lived with her father's family, who filled her up with all sorts of stories about cruel stepmothers. Being a timid youngster and naturally jealous of her dad, she took a strong dislike to me, ignoring my existence as much as possible.

"I tried to keep these things in mind—that 'Love is reflected in love' and, therefore, to treat her with kindness and consideration; to say that she spent as much time with her father as possible, and never interfere with their being together. Today I could not ask for a sweeter daughter than she is. I'll never be mother to her, but she trusts my judgment a lot more than most girls do their own mothers. She feels it's not so long since I had dates myself.

"If second wives would only remember it takes a world of patience in the beginning, and that a loss of temper once means a loss of ground, they would handle this most difficult problem more wisely. I don't feel my husband married me for a sweet caretaker for his daughter. I feel he married me because he felt he had found someone capable of helping him with a big problem, someone whose judgment he could trust.

"So, don't hesitate, 'Should be Wiser.' You will be as happy with your children as I am with my girl.

"Stepmother' or 'stepdaughter' are words we never use. She calls me by my first name, as she always did, but she's introduced to my friends as my daughter. Also remembering her own mother, I think she'd be disappointed if I didn't introduce her that way.

"At 34, 'Should Be Wiser' is old enough to have wide and courage to handle youngsters and get a lot of pleasure out of them.

"One Who Knows".

Fashion Flashes

Wide choice is available in the new autumn suits. Something new is the suit fashioned of mixture tweed with a sweater of knitted yarn in exactly the same color mixture as the tweed.

A good boy is a tweed suit in shades of red, brown and black. With it comes a matching topcoat with tuxedo revers of black Alaska sealskin.

Big and boxy are many of the fur wraps made for evening wear. A straight box coat of mink has a very broad, squared shoulderline worked into a small face-framing collar. The sleeves are increasingly wire. The mink skins are worked vertically.

Sally Versus Kate

By ETHEL V. STETSON

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

When he was a young man Keene was poor, hard-working, shy. Now he was wealthy, getting gray, and monumentally eager to take a big bite of enjoyment from life.

For a summer season he had taken a cottage in the country, and the promise of complete contentment came in the form of a cook. She was a country woman from nearby, without references, but with unwonted skill in preparing dishes simple and delectable, such dishes as a man or humble beginnings yearns for.

Then he met Sally Boyd! She was walking in the woods between her father's estate and his own cottage. He met her often. She was young, audacious, alluring, and he fell in love with her. She was only 40 years of shyness from him — and she loved him. She was naughty and selfish and was not at all the materialization of his dream woman, but the dream woman faded forever. Nothing held him but the memory of delicious meals which his cook prepared for him. While he ate them he reasoned with: "Sally, I adore her, but she couldn't sew a button on a shirt. And she could no more cook a meal like this than—well, I don't need a wife when I have a cook."

But his mental processes would always be those of a man who had worked hard for what he had gotten. He would always like to feel that his wife resembled his mother—his mother, who could cook plain, delicious food, that woman in his kitchen was nearer to him, to his real nature, than was Sally! Sally could make pastry and cream. She rode, danced, and played, day in and day out. It was rather a tragedy that they loved each other, for then the foundation of their natures were so different.

She spent an hour or two with him daily. Often they swam or played, and sometimes they sat, sitting under the trees, or talked. But then she must up and away to the engagement which would be always be slipping off to play somewhere. Would he ever feel that she was permanent, his to hold? "I'll tell you how and why do you stay such a short time with me?"

"Oh, social obligations, my dear. I'm burdened with them, but that you know nothing about."

"And what does it all amount to, Sally? At the end of the day what have you accomplished? Now there's my cook, for instance. At the end of the day she's done something."

"Oh, your cook, your cook! I tire of hearing about your cook."

"You don't tire of eating the cooking for our picnics though, do you?"

"Sort of. Wish she'd make a different thing sometimes."

"I'll tell her so."

"You'll tell her. Do you see her? What is she like, this enchantress?"

"I've really scarcely seen her. I—why—she looks—she looks like a cook. I believe she has red hair. One day she came to find me looking disturbed.

"Something wrong with the cook, I dare say," ventured Sally.

"Yes, something. Some trouble between her and the gardener, I believe. I'm afraid, I'm awfully afraid, she'll be leaving. I want no more trouble."

"You care a hundred times more for her than you do for me. You like the kind of man I am for me, and I'm not the kind of girl for you, and we'd better not make any more plans for the future."

"My darling, you break my heart."

"But so do you break mine. Why, the very wedding cake must be made by Kate. You think more about than than you do about my gowns or where we shall go. I hate her! Unless you promise that you'll discharge her I won't marry you."

Oh, the man of level head, the practical man, the man of forty autumns! He promised, as Sally required of him, when she had driven away he walked home with a burden on his heart. Kate was in her way, dinner was most delicious, Kate had outdone herself. He sighed and rang.

"Send Kate to me, please."

Kate came, a tall girl, a sober, youngish woman. She wore a large apron over her gown and came to mope of red hair, wisps of which straggled out here and there.

"Now for it!

"Kate, I—I sent for you because—because well—"

He couldn't swing it. He just couldn't. Then his eyes, Sally had guessed. Yes, they were nice eyes!

"I send for you because I want to increase your salary. You deserve it. And I want you to stay with me indefinitely. Do you think you can and want to?"

"I can, sir. I do. And I—I very much want to, sir."

Then Kate, minus wig, cap and apron was Sally, and Sally was in his arms.

"You've never known the 'Kate' side of me, Robert, but I'm sure you'll like it. You see, I was tired of being a butterfly, even before I met you, and that's why I learned to cook and went masquerading that summer. And, Robert, if you had discharged Kate I should have called you."

Loss of Sleep

Leads to Nervous Breakdown

The worker goes to bed tired and exhausted.
If sleep is disturbed by irritated nerves,
He arises shaky, confused and unrefreshed.
His general health suffers, efficiency is lowered
And he becomes a neurasthenic,
Worried, nervous and jumps at every noise.
Brain workers especially are subject to nervous disorders
And must be rescued from this condition.
If they are to escape mental as well as bodily troubles.
The logical treatment is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food,
For this food treatment supplies the ingredients
From which red blood and nervous energy are created.
It cannot fail to be of benefit to you.

Allan School Log

S. S. No. 2 RAWDON

Rawdon ', Sept. 8—During the early part of the nineteenth century a little log school house occupied the north western corner of Mr. Cavalry's lawn. For many years the sturdious children continued their studies only to spend their leisure hours playing on the road as there was no playground. Mr. Cavalry sold his farm to Mr. Henry Linn, and as he did not care for the school on his front lawn, he ordered it to be moved. He sold a block of land across the road and on the the trustees endeavoured to build a stick school in the year 1876.

The building when completed measured forty-feet by thirty-six feet. It was of brick structure with cedar shingles. The entrance to the school was built on the east side. There were two windows on the east, and three each on the north and south side. A playground and well were provided for the children and a large wooden shed stood to the south of the school.

Within the school one would have seen a pine floor, double desks, walls and ceiling of blue, red brick with a cedar shingled roof. On the east side are six windows which provide sufficient light for the class room. The school faces south with blackboards at the south, west and north. The school are assorted in size making them comfortable for young and large pupils. At the west is the teachers room with three west windows and in this room is a splendid library with a large collection of new and old books and an up to date globe and maps.

At the south is a long lobby equipped with hooks for cloakes and shelves for dinner pails also a drinking fountain and wash basin. This room opens out into another entry where two sets of steps lead to the basement and another door leads out to the covered porch with a southern exposure.

The basement houses a pipeless furnace and well equipped toilets and a gasoline engine is used for pumping the water.

The school was officially opened on January twentieth in the year 1928. Those present were Mr. A. W. McGuire, school inspector, Rev. F. G. Joblin, Trustees, Secretary Treasurer, pupils of S. S. No. 2, and a large number of ratepayers of the community.

The area of the playground is approximately one acre and here the children enjoy games of ball and the swings.

Each Christmas the pupils of this school and the adjoining school on the west of Mount Pleasant church with their teachers give a united concert in the church hall dividing the proceeds with this money many useful articles have been bought for the school besides curtains for the windows and equipment for the playground.

The approximate cost of the school was fifty-three hundred dollars with a ten year debenture.

Two California poplars were donated by the Agriculture society and were planted May 8, 1931 by Mr. James Linn, Mr. Clifford Charles and Master Lloyd Milligan.

In this Coronation year of 1937 a special celebration was held on Empire Day when four acorns from Windsor Forest, England, were planted by five IV class namely James Hoard, Ray White, Helen Hall and Gladys Sharp. A large number of folk were present including Rev. F. E. Reed and all enjoyed a splendid programme.

Household science was begun in November 1926 when all necessary equipment was purchased such as fall leaf table, coal oil stove, corner cupboard, towel rack. Necessary dishes and a hot lunch served at the noon hour during the winter months.

The teachers of the Allan School since 1867 have been as follows:—1879 George Thompson; 1880-1882 Walter Smith; 1883-1884 Annie Mosher; 1885-1886 Isobella Pollock; 1887 N. McCann; 1888-1890 Fannie Gumley; 1891-1892 Jos. O. Mills; 1893 J. W. Thompson; 1894 E. Vallance; 1895 D. M. Moore; 1896-1897 Oscar Sharp; 1898 W. Brown; 1899 R. M. Trotter; 1900 Joseph Frapp; 1901 Y. O. Bird; 1901-1906 Ella Faulkner; 1907-1908 Blanche Williams; 1909 Ella Campbell; 1910-1911 Nellie Tuttle; 1912 E. Treadgold; 1912-1913 Alice Wallace; 1913 Miss M. Secroft; 1913-1915 Annie Stephens; 1915-1917 Pearl McAdam; 1917 Lucy Williams; 1918 Adele O. Erven; 1918 Minnie Payne; 1919 R. Thompson; 1919 Gladys Morton; 1920-1922 Ida Thompson; 1922-1924 Ida M. Marshall; 1924-1925 Jessie Gemmell; 1926 Annie Halg; 1926-1928 Beatrice Boland; 1928-1929 Pierre Telford; 1929-1933 Evelyn Neal; 1933-1937 Muriel M. Milligan.

Some of the past trustees of Allan School were Messs. Henry White, Allan Reid, Henry Linn, Allan Bailey, Thomas McKeown and Conger McConnell.

Past Secretary Treasurers have been Allan Reid, George Weaver, John Reid. Mr. Irvin Reid has held the office since January 1933

Among those from this school who served overseas were: Garnet Bailey, Frank Hinds, Floyd Garrison, Osborne Smith, Roy Dunkley.

Practically every year the pupils have been keenly interested in Rawdon Township school fair and several have won various cups and prizes which have been awarded from year to year. Some of the pupils have also been successful in winning the Warden's Medal for public speaking. The caretakers of the new school have been Mr. James Linn, Mr. Elgin Chard, Mr. Allan Bailey and Mr. Blake Sharp.

The trustees for 1937 are Mr. Irvin Reid Sec. Treasurer, Mr. Ross Hoard, Mr. Claude Sharo, Chairman.

The writer of this article, Mrs. Percy MacMullen, is indebted to Miss Muriel Milligan for valuable assistance in preparing this log and she thinks that there may be still some details which have been omitted because of lack of time to hunt up the facts.

Giants Hang on While Yanks Increase Lead Margin to 12 Games

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals don't look much today as if they were sharpening up a knife for the purpose of cutting off their collective nose to spite their equally collective face.

If they were really serious about suggesting a year's retirement for Dizzy Dean, and are just looking for a way to throw a scare into Baseball's No. 1 blower-otter, it would seem they'd do a little better than they've been showing in shelving the greatest pitching arm in the game for that length of time, despite his eccentricities.

The row started by Branch Rickey with the retirement suggestion, and followed up by Dean's plea for permission to trade himself, took the stage away from anything in the big time today. Playing second fiddle to the Rickey-Dean brazen were such other developments as the re-appointment of "boiling kettle" Grimes as chief umpire baiter and manager of Brooklyn Dodgers; the continuation of the Giants' 1-2 pace "and in the National League race; the widening of the Yankees' American League edge to 13 full games, and the rise of Pittsburgh to third place in the National League at Cleveland's expense to fourth, in the American.

Dean certainly didn't look ready for a wheelchair yesterday as he pitched a five-hitter against the Cubs. Although he lost, 4-0, largely because of the double play of Gabby Hartnett, a five-hitter isn't exactly setting pace for a retirement fund.

The Giants had their hands full before pulling out a 9-7 decision over the Phillies.

The Yanks pulled two games out of the fire against the Red Sox. They took the opener, 3-2, with a run in the ninth and then, with Gehrig's first homer at the payoff ballcap, scored eight runs in the final frame to win the second game, 9-6.

The Tigers managed only an even break with the Indians, taking the nightcap, 10-5, on Hank Greenberg's two-run homer with which the curtain raiser, 6-1, the Pirates pounded the Reds 7-6 in ten frames and 5-4 in nine.

Four well-pitched games found the Phillies and Boston Red Sox and the Athletics doing the same with the Senators. The Phils won 3-3 and lost 1-0. The A's won 2-0 and then went down 1-0. The White Sox socked the Browns, 10-1.

Toronto Boxer Capably Defends His Title For Third Time

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—They dusted off a place today for Gordon Wallace in the halls reserved for boxers who have tried ad failed.

For Gordon, the Vancouver belter, failed last night in his second try to regain the Canadian welterweight title from Frankie Genovese, the dark-skinned Toronto Italian who has fought Wallace twice before, once in a year and beaten him thrice.

Golf at Trenton

Trenton, Sept. 9.—(Special)—Playing a back up game under ideal conditions on the local golf course yesterday afternoon, Trenton men's golf twelve gave an outfit from Port Hope a terrific drubbing. Inspired by a perfect session's record the home town aggregation swept over the invaders—30 1-3 to 5 1-2 and won their fourth successive match of the season. The beating was the worst that the Port Hope dozen has suffered to date and was the most convincing victory that the locals have scored. Next Wednesday afternoon, Trenton and Belleville clash in what will be the last interclub tournament of the year.

THREE AMATEUR BOUTS ON CARD

Pleasing Amateur Grapplers Return to Arena Ring

A few weeks ago wrestling fans of the city and district became interested in the lightweight amateur style of wrestling. The speed and agility of the boys in this class caught on immediately with the fans hereabouts and in the weeks that followed increased in popularity.

The layoff of the last week due to the Hastings Arena officials being cognizant of the fact that the Belleville Pair was in progress has resulted in a flock of requests from the wrestling fandom of the city for a return of the stable of wrestlers that had created such a lot of a furore in the city.

Consequently the Arena management has again arranged for a high class card which will be presented at the Arena on Friday night. Headlining the main bout will be no less a figure than Bert Crowthall, Mimico "Badman" who will try conclusions with Ernie Hughson, dusky Indian grappler, who caught the fancy of local fans with his exhibition of his now famous "Unconscious Hold". Hughson, who resides in Tyendinaga Mohawk Reserve is his last appearance here as a popular figure with local crowds and they promise him a turn out to force to see him try conclusions with the famous Indian wrestler.

In the semi-final bout, the ever-popular Red Garner, International Champion will not be absent as George Hambly, starry Toronto grappler who has to his credit victories over such fast and agile exponents of wrestling as Hackenschmidt, Lewis and Zbyszko will be in their midst.

Local followers to Belleville wrestling fandom will meet in the preliminary bout, in the persons of Don McLachlan, brawny Brooklyn, N.Y., wrestler who comes with a fine record and Cowboy Sullivan with "Cowboy" Sullivan, an Irish wrestling favourite who knows what it is all about. The whole card fairly reeks with class and the fans are in for a treat in the night entertainment on Friday at the Arena.

WESTERN FOOTBALL EXPECTED TO BOOM

Chicago, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Boomtimes are flirting with football in the Chicago district and there's every the prospect that attendance will reach 2,500,000 in the western conference alone a boost of 50,000 over a year ago.

It looks like the biggest, most enthusiastic year since 1920, said John L. Griffith, Commissioner of Athletics for the "Big 10" today. The Minnesota-Notre Dame game, to be played at Minneapolis six weeks hence, is already a complete sellout, for a capacity crowd of 63,000. Every ticket was sold within nine days after the sale opened.

Notre Dame expects to play before 500,000 spectators for its nine game schedule.

Dean and Cards Split ?

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Branch Rickey started it—now Jerome Herman Dean wants to finish it.

And when the Dizzy one says finish, he refers to his connections with Messrs. Breadon and Rickey's gas house gang.

A segment here last night by the Cardinals' General Manager that Old Diz take a year off "as a tonic" and "build up his health and morals" temporarily non-plussed Dean when he heard about it in Chicago.

"If that's the way they feel about me it would be better if they let me go," he countered. "I think I'll see if our clubs could use me.

"I may not be doing so good now but I'll be O.K. by next season and I can't see any reason for layin' off a year".

Rickey said he made the suggestion in view of the big right-hander's record for the season. Dix dropped No. 10 to the Cubs yesterday after a lay-off since August 26 because of his ailing flipper. He has won 13 games.

Dix was more voluble than his boss but showed unusual restraint in commenting on Rickey's opinion that voluntary retirement "would be the best thing that could happen to Dizzy", his description of himself and "would put me on the player—a big shot" and the added boost in the market; there's no such market for him".

"All the time for the last seven years when I was winning games and winning World's Series, I was a great guy and everybody was Okey Doke. Now, when I ain't getting so good, everything's wrong with me," Dean blurted his poor record recently on that left hip toe broken in the All-star game.

"They should have called you Diana, the Huntress!"
"You mean because I'm good at hunting for a Sweet Cap?"

Quinte Skating Club Holds Annual Tennis Tournament

D. McLean And Miss Johnston, Trenton Win Singles Feature

PLAY AT NIGHT

Newly Installed Flood Lighting System Functions Perfectly

Tennis notables from all parts of the Central Ontario zone participated in the first annual tennis tournament sponsored by the tennis section of the Quinte Skating Club on their spacious courts at the corner of Quinte Street and Dufferin Avenue yesterday. Well over 1,000 spectators witnessed the day's play at intervals that saw 24 players in competition from 154 entries received. Due to the large entry list all of the events could not be completed and will be terminated at an adjourned tournament set for Wednesday next.

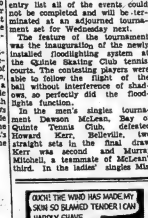
The success of the tournament was the inauguration of the newly installed floodlighting system at the Quinte Skating Club tennis courts. The contesting players were able to follow the flight of the ball without interference of shadows, so perfectly did the floodlights function.

In the men's singles tournament Dawson McLean, Bay of Quinte Tennis Club, defeated Howard Kerr, Belleville. The straight sets in the final draw. Kerr was second and Murray Mitchell, a teammate of McLean's third. In the ladies' singles Miss Johnson of Trenton defeated Esther Moncrieff, Belleville, two straight sets in the final round while Miss Dorothy Bowers, Tweed and Miss Marion McLean, Belleville, are tied for third position and will clash in a deciding set next Wednesday. In the three groups of doubles play 12 teams were entered, that necessitated play long past the midnight hour and was terminated when the games committee announced the semi-finals and finals in this section would also be terminated next Wednesday all participating to receive official notice, however.

Thirteen out-of-town tennis clubs were represented at the local tournament yesterday, the majority being welcomed by Alderman Laude Lewis on behalf of the City of Belleville in the absence of Mayor Arnott! Alderman Lewis in his finest manner not only voiced the city's welcome, but lauded the officers and members of the Quinte Skating Club tennis organization for the fine courts and up-to-date club facilities they boast of. Contesting players admitted the newly installed floodlight system inaugurated in Belleville yesterday surpassed any other in this part of the province.

During the afternoon and early evening refreshments were served by the lady members of the club, who materially assisted in assuring success for the tournament. Many words of praise were heard in favour of the grounds committee that was composed of Hal Kemp, chairman, James Purdon, Miss Olivia Davies and Muriel Wardner.

The tournament was the first of its kind ever attempted in Belleville and brought out interested spectators from all parts of the Central Ontario district. During the day draws were made for games that kept them busied with Mr. Arthur Sears of this city winning the major prize—a radio. An automobile heater was won by Mr. Reynolds, while other lucky prize winners were: Mrs. Reynolds, William Hurst, Mrs. Domenico, Douglas McBride, Mrs. John Deacon, Earl Clarke, J. Hurley and Jack Kirk.



Equal interest is expected in the adjourned matches that will be drawn for and played next Wednesday. The large attendance present at the tournament yesterday proved gratifying to the club officials and members for their efforts in sponsoring the tournament.

Local Bowlers Win All Events At Deseronto

The lawn bowlers from the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club captured all events in the invitation doubles sponsored by the Deseronto Bowling Club in that town yesterday. The Belleville lawn bowlers were in rare form as they presented the strong aggregation of Ontario lawn bowlers in their triumphant efforts in the day's events yesterday.

Particularly of note was the splendid victory of George Walkin and Fred Harper over the Deseronto pair, Dr. Ferguson and Dr. Kingston in the finals for the Consolation series. The same pair were first in the Primary class was won by Joe Bowen and Harry Williams, of Belleville while the Hard Luck event honors were taken by the team of R. Tennis and R. J. S. 'Bob' Drew.

Belleville lawn bowlers have enjoyed a most successful season on the green this year and have been among the better class lawn bowlers in practically every tournament held in this part of the province in 1937.

A fluke hit down the third base line gave the Kingston Ponies a 7-6 decision over Oshawa squad yesterday afternoon down in the Limestone City. Trailing five runs in the sixth inning, Turner, Oshawa hurler filled the bases and then grooved the pill for 'Red' Scrutton, who poled the apple down the third base line, which kicked up "white chalk" when it landed. Two Pony runners galloped in on the hit and another timely kick sent two more markers over the pan. Tony Pidwerbesky, Kingston moundsman of the day, then took a new lease on life and sent the Kingston "front runners" to their initial victory in the C.O.B.L. finals.

Johnnie Turner, Oshawa's starting hurler, had the Kingston batters popping for easy outs on the infield pitch for many an inning, but his sudden change of tactics, when he tried to breeze 'em by, proved his downfall. Turner had the Ponies at his mercy, but apparently could not stand prosperity, as he let the togs in the early stages of the game. The teams resume hostilities in Oshawa today.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Jimmy Kelly, the Greenwich Village Night Club King will start a racing stable with two nags called "Dan Parker" and "Hugh Bradley" after two well-known sports writers.... Cecil Hurst, 19-year-old Toronto lightweight, will defend his Canadian title against Pedro Montanez, Spanish featherweight, in a ten-round bout at Toronto Sept. 20.... Jimmy Braddock, the banjoist champion will receive a cool $10,000 for defending his title against Fred Apostoli in a bout with Harry Heffron, who gets $2,500 for his efforts. Including the rental of the ring and stands the aggregate figure will reach a quarter of a million.

If each of the title bouts should go the limit, the sport writers over-worked hour have to leap along their beds and smack.... It is rumored, however that "Uncle Mike" will support sport hey-pounders with a ham sandwich and a flagon of beer as their pay through the turnstiles. There is no doubt but that Jacobs is gambling somewhat if the weather conditions are not ideal, that is to say, cold weather settin in. Well, he'll take it on the proverbial chin from a financial point of view. Then again there is the question of the sporting element that would break down about that particular time of the year, so guys and gals you must admit "Uncle Mike" is really gambling with a quarter of a million.

Chri Hubbell is making a trophy case for the twenty-four baseballs he kept from the twenty-four consecutive National League victories he pitched. He also has a case for each baseball won in world series play.

It's amateur wrestling night at the Arena on Friday night. These agile and fast-moving amateurs give the fans plenty of speed and ability and are fast gaining favor with the local fandom.

His were rather scarce up at Long Branch when the Point Anne "cementmen" ran into an abrupt snag yesterday and lost 7-6, forced and ethical candidate leading in the practice line of scrimmage for positions on the squad. Of course football is a team's game and it takes plenty of that intestinal fortitude, more commonly known as G——, to become a football hero. Two years ago there was a very prosperous interscholastic football team in Belleville, while last year saw no interscholastic squads. Surely out of all that material there should be some energetic boys who are rugby-minded that have turned out for the first football of practice. Coach Duffield is quite pleased with his linemen, but is lacking the appearance of another good backfielder and at least a half a dozen alternates before the end of the week.

One of the biggest fight attractions ever attempted by one promoter will be staged in New York by "Uncle Mike" Jacobs on the 23rd of next month, four world's champions will defend their title in the same ring. "Uncle Mike" was always a gambler and when he tells he has something really big, he'll back the shekels on the line and gamble the patrons will throng through the turnstiles. In all Jacobs has guaranteed $250,000.00. Lou Ambers is to receive $65,000 for defending his lightweight title against Pedro Montanez, who will receive a cool $10,000 for his efforts. Barney Ross has a guarantee of $25,000 for defending his crown against Ceferino Garcia, who only gets five thousand for his efforts. That is a safe bet, as the crowd will title. Marcel Thil, of France, collects $30,000 for defending his middleweight title against Fred Apostoli who only gets $2,500, however. Steve Escobar, the bantam champion will receive $12,500 for risking his title in a bout with Harry Jeffra, who gets $2,500 for his efforts. Including the rental of the ring and stands the aggregate figure will reach a quarter of a million.

Texas Christian's footballers will travel 5,000 miles to and from the game this year.... Texas University and Nebraska are negotiating a football home and home series to start in 1940.... The Huskers are tied up but far ahead.....

Max Schmeling's first tune-up bout for Joe Louis will be against Joe Walcott Mosel in Berlin this evening.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Happily Engaged Girl Wants to Be Let Alone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It seems now I am engaged, several of my girl friends seem to think they must have missed something, and want to date me, with what's let me alone, because it only makes my fiance unhappy.

I know it can't be that they have suddenly realized themselves in love with me (as they say, think), just because one of their friends snatched me from under their noses and asked me to marry him.

I like these boys, who are old friends, and am too soft-hearted to tell them not to come 'round. I even told them when I knew they'd be coming, yet they still come. My fiance has said he can go out with them as long as he doesn't know about it, but I don't want to lose his love and trust. They just know when I say that I love and trust, they just laugh when I say that I love my fiance and want to go out with him.

Happily Engaged.

If an intelligence test were applied to these young men, I don't believe their I.Q.'s would be very high. Even a moron could reason out that an engaged young girl like to be alone sometimes, and for the "edgeage" to hang around her all around, evening after evening, as you tell me these boys do, seems more like a simple case of boredom than a simple case of being thickskinned.

When these unwelcome visitors call, send word you're not at home.

Answer Is Transparent in the Brain Has Engagement With the Faithful Fiances

Dear Miss Fairfax:

A little while ago, I was particularly struck by a letter in your column. A man if suppose we must call him Jack, asked how he could break his engagement to a woman who had been extremely loyal to him all during the depression, when he was unemployed. She had revived his spirit when discouragement laid him low. She had lent him money, for she had a good job, and then when this promising specimen became employed, he promptly fell in love with a younger girl, and asked you for a nice polite way to "cut her."

Your answer did not say that "cunning" such a one-sided speakman was a blessing in disguise, but I read that between the lines.

Please let me congratulate the lady on losing this weak-kneed son of Adam.

Another Correspondent.

What I said, in answering the particular letter to which you refer, was that a woman who was as fine as her fiance described her to be, would not want to be married as the result of charity. In spite of all she had done for him, this man had fallen in love with a younger girl, who happened to be employed in the same office. Such things happen; charge it up to propinquity.

Once it was considered the honorable thing for a man to go through with an engagement, even if he had ceased to care for the fiance. But that does not hold today.

His Wife Thinks She Has the Fatal Gift

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Since my wife has been going to beauty parlor regularly, she checks the delusion that she is absolutely irresistible to men. My friends and boys, who knew her as a sane and sensible woman, are puzzled at this change which has come over her. She is decidedly middle-aged and not attractive, although she tries to be lovely domestic virtues which made her an excellent wife and mother, a good housekeeper.

This new kink she's got in her head about being an all-conquering siren is worrying me considerably. Are many women like that, or is it some compensatory camouflage that middle-age sets up?

Old-fashioned Husband

A good many women are able to "find" themselves into the belief that they possess the "fatal gift". This delusion sometimes grows stronger as middle-age approaches, and doubtless is one of those compensatory kinks that nature has a way of handing out, as teeth and hair fall.

Your wife is blessed in having a good, sane husband to look out for her. It is this reality that woman have, for believing themselves irresistible when they are no longer young, that makes them the prey-ordained victims of the wretches who advertise, in matrimonial papers, for wives, or who put in papers, phoney business advertisements for "a lady with a little capital", to engage in some enterprise making twenty per cent. Happily these delusions of middle-age are temporary.

Care Needed To Ward Off Facial Lines

Lana Turner
She knows the rules that will prevent wrinkles.

BY HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU sleep with your hand under your cheek like a sweet little cherub? Don't do it. You'll get wrinkles. The flesh is pushed up under the eyes.

It is surprising how many ways there are of etching lines in one's face. Frowning, for instance. Impaired vision may be the cause of that habit. Intolerance and petulance are sometimes responsible. The woman with good eyes and a steady nervous system doesn't get "frizzled lines - ditches" between her eyebrows.

Tighten your lips in disdain and, in due course of time, there will be wrinkles that creases around the mouth. Have the habit of lifting your forehead to express surprise and there will be little railroad tracks scooting across it. No need of facial calisthenics anyhow. Relax the eyes take care of the expression.

Watch the fleshy areas in front of the ears. The first crinkles due to impaired tissues often appear there. Get yourself a jar of heavy massage cream, feed your face every night, rain or shine, sick or well. Put it on with light hand-mering movements of the fingers. Avoid the round and round motion that is so easy and natural. It doesn't exercise the underlying flipes, and that's what the flesh needs when it starts to go on a sag trend.

They speak eloquently.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Wedding Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Next month we will have been married ten years, and I want to have a reception for the occasion but didn't have a wedding when we were married. There are a lot of things I'm not sure about, therefore I'm writing to you for help as I want everything to be perfect.

1.—How long before the reception should I send the invitations?

2.—Should I wear a white dress? (I'm still in my twenties).

3.—Do we have to have a wedding cake on the table?

4.—Is it proper for my husband and me to stand at the head of the table when the guests are being served? If so, should we stand there until all the guests have been served?

5.—Who proposes the toast?

6.—What should I serve? I thought of having ice cream, cake and punch. Is that enough?

7.—Should I send notice to my guests thanking them for the gifts they have given me, or is it enough then at the time they send or bring the gift enough?

Y.

1.—Send your invitations about two weeks or so, days before the date of your party.

2.—If you are becoming to you, and if you especially wish to wear a white dress, it is proper, of course, for you to do so. But it is not necessary for you to wear white.

3.—It's fun to have a wedding cake as part of the gala spirit of an anniversary, but this isn't necessary.

4.—If you are having a sit-down service of your refreshments, you, as hostess, would sit at the head of the table, and your husband, as host, should sit at the other end, the foot of the table. If you are serving buffet style (as I think would be more appropriate and convenient with the number of guests you suggest in question 6) you might have two or three of your friends to be co-hostesses to help you in the serving. There would be no reason for you and your husband to stand while your guests are being served, together at the head of the table. Indeed, I should think that would look rather pointless.

5.—If you had been dead at your wedding, and if he is to be a guest at the party, it would be charming for him to propose the toast, as he might have done at the wedding. Or your father or brother might give the toast. Or your husband might toast you, then toast the guests and thank them for coming to the anniversary.

6.—Since these items are all on the sweet side, you might first serve small slim sandwiches of various kinds. And since many people prefer a hot drink, you might also serve hot coffee.

7.—Your guests will know that you are a gracious and appreciative person if you write each one a thank-you note for the gifts that are given you.

Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A girl whom I know is attending a dancing school. Every so often the school gives a recital for which the girls pay an ticket and attend. They have had three of these in the past year. I have noticed that at each recital this girl receives a number of gifts. Personally I do not think it is necessary to give her a gift on these occasions. Please tell me whether I am right in my conclusion?

Alice

Although it is a pleasant and generous gesture for your friends to give her gifts on this occasion, I don't think it necessary. Often flowers are sent on an occasion of this kind (either a corsage or a box of flowers). But if you have no special interest in sending a gift (and many people do) comfort yourself with the thought that you generously buy a ticket and "lend your patronage", and this is really enough.

Seating Arrangement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

This is perplexing for me. My mother is giving my announcement party at the hotel. Should she be seated at the table with the guests? If so, where?

S.

Since this is apparently to be a "sit-down" luncheon or dinner, your mother, who is the hostess, should sit at the head of the table.

Fashion Flashes

If you like berets you will be glad when you see the new hats. For the berets are closer than ever. An original model is of black felt set onto a bandeau of pink patent leather.

Invitation to dance is the theme of a symphony of gray chiffon, the skirt pleated and very full, with the hemline up in front. The bodice is a sheath composed of mother-of-pearl sequins.

The young idea approves emphatically of a frock of rust crepe. Sermon-brown is the color of favor that are on the bodice, which features a polo collar and contrasting cuffs. Released pleats product centre fullness on the skirt.

AT LAST! A "NO-SCRUB, NO-BOIL" SOAP

That's Safe as Can Be for Colors, Hands . . .

● Millions of wash-weary women are finding relief this amazing way. For here's a "no-scrub" soap that's really safe! A soap that soaks out dirt in 15 minutes . . . yet banishes forever the fear of faded colors and rough, red hands!

Oxydol was perfected by the makers of gentle Ivory soap, at the cost of $1,000,000. Combining speed and safety in an utterly new way, it does these 4 amazing things:

(1) Soaks out dirt in 15 minutes, without scrubbing or boiling. Even grimy collar bands come snowy white with a few quick rubs. (2) Cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine. (3) Gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter, proved by scientific Tintometer tests. (4) Yet so safe that in this case I hope she can get away with it. She's clear-headed and confident. I'm glad it wasn't one of the others."

"If it had been one of the others, would you have tried to discourage it?"

"No, and I wouldn't encourage it, either. I would wait. All children draw, write and act out in some stage in their development.

Protect Him

"But if a child were consistent: If I saw that he could not be diverted and that life couldn't divert him, then I still wouldn't encourage or discourage him. I would try to protect him. I would try to build his health and his character to meet the demands that his talent would be sure to make on him. People who really have an undeniable talent must be prepared to stand much more work than other people, more solitude, more pressure, less pleasure and companionship, that takes more character and stamina."

Yet, all parents search for talent in their children. I suppose it's the pea vine, upon I still wouldn't encourage in us all. Parents are proud of a talented child, who probably owes none of it to them, when they really should be seriously concerned about him.

Really the simple, normal, well-adjusted children are the ones who are such a credit to their parents. If it's really the child's happiness you want, don't wish a gift on him; wish him to be average, friendly, healthy and reasonable.

Normal Circulation Is Vital to Beauty

Joan Blondell
An active life keeps her lovely and healthy

(By Helen Follett)

Beauty shops are stressing the need of good circulation. They say they have a better chance to tone the fibres of the face and neck when blood streams are busy. Some of the beauty operators get the cash customers to do calisthenics before climbing into the barber chair.

A girl pays penalties if she does not move around enough to keep circulation "on the wing". In winter she has cold feet; all the year around her hands are moist and cheeks pale. What she needs is a gym course and outdoor exercise to stock up a healthy appetite, and plenty of nourishing food.

If she is strong and healthy she can take a cold shower every morning. If that's too much of a shock, she can have a warm bath, turn on the spray and chill the water gradually. A brisk rub down is beneficial.

Nutrition is important. Girls with white skins and no roses in their cheeks usually live in worthwhile worst eaters. They nibble between meals, are never hungry. Girls addicted to a balanced diet—meats, fish, vegetables, green salads, fruit, cereals—will bring a favorable change. Make-up won't help much. On the contrary rouge in excess is apparent to an unbecoming degree.

A pretty back has just enough flesh to cover the bones. Arms need more padding than that; they should be rounded. A flat arm has a poor musculature. Calisthenics are in order.

Thighs should be rounded. Hips must extend out gradually not be abrif-like, as is sometimes seen worn-en laced. The round waist is desirable; it looks smaller than the flat one. You can get that by standing tall, pushing the flattened palms on the side of the body below the waistline and rolling and rotating the flesh.

When finger nails are short and wide, file them to a rounded point. If the nail eave follows a uniform line, is as wide at the sides as at the ends, the finger looks well at anything but attractive.

Massage the finger nails, pressing them in at the side to give them a better outline. Friction the nail base daily. Every day try to stir the blood streams upon watch the cells live. Don't forget to apply cuticle cream at night; it is a great help.

Does Talent Handicap Child?

By Lisa Grenelle

One of my children has a certain conspicuous talent that causes comment.

"Aren't you thrilled?" friends ask me. "Isn't it wonderful that she's having a really gifted child? Don't you feel rewarded?"

"I feel rewarded if my children are healthy and normal," I usually reply.

"Come now, be honest; aren't you proud of her?" they ask.

"Of course," I say, "but not because she's talented. She has a great disposition, but that is not enough to offset a talent. She needs a better defense than that—good health, balance, reason, sense of humor, a willingness to take criticism of which...I hope, she gets enough."

"You talk as if you considered talent a handicap," one of my friends said one day.

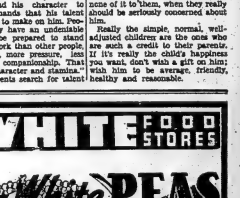
Real Handicap

"Oh, but I do," I answered, "one of the worst."

"But why?"

"It confuses the issue," I replied, especially in a girl. It diverts her from a normal life, sets her apart and make her different."

"You talk as if you wish she were not talented."



"I do. I would never wish for an exceptionally talented child, but every washable color comes out sparkling, brilliant, fresh. And hands stay soft and lovely.

Even sheer cotton prints washed 100 consecutive times in Oxydol suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading.

It's economical, too! Tests show that, cup for cup, one package will go 1/4 to 1/2 again as far as even the latest soap chips on the market. One package often gives twice the suds—does twice the work—lasts twice as long as less modern soaps.

Quit scrubbing your life away! Try this new safe "no-scrub" soap and end the drudgery of washday. Get OXYDOL today. Procter & Gamble.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Shorty Judge was watching one man selling spones off of a pushcart, being a kind of a rouge man with a fat black mustash and the sine on the pushcart saying "Knife 1c, 2 for 2 and 3 for 3." Two for 3, and I said to Shorty I'm on. Shorty, him saying that a whole pushcart full of spones and me standing here without any money.

Sure, I bet he wasn't even born in this country, Shorty said, and I said, Sure, look at that big black mustash.

Making us feel like Communists and something, and Shorty said, Well, hay, what do you say if we ask him if he sell us 1 or 2 spones a piece, and then at least we'll have the satisfaction of trying to buy some and he'll never find out we haven't even got a cent.

Sounding like a good idea, and I said, Hey mister, can we have a couple for a cent a piece, we haven't got a cent.

Not saying what else we didn't have, such as 2 cents, and the man said, well, make it a cent three days, hand over the 2 cents.

Which me and Shorty both start to do a imitation of 2 fellows each looking for a cent in their hands pockets and then finding it, me saying, Holey smokes I must of left mine, and Shorty saying, I reckolem so must I.

Well, you don't like 2 pritty nice kids, here's one for nothing you can eat between you, the man said.

And he picked out a pritty good one and started to eat it, and walked away taking turns taking bites out of it, me saying, It was a real proberly born in this country after all, and Shorty saying, Sure it was, its proberly right here.

Proving it takes more than a mustash to make a fortune.

AT THE BELLE

"Exclusive," a Four-Star Romantic Comedy

A powerful story of a newspaper man who placed principles ahead of life itself, only to have his own daughter fall in love with him, Fred MacMurray, lovely Frances Farmer, Charlie Ruggles and Lloyd Nolan take the screen at the Belle Theatre Friday, matinee daily in the dynamic "exclusive."

The story concerns the efforts of a corrupt politician, played by Nolan, to wreak vengeance on a reform newspaper by establishing his own scandal sheet which he uses for blackmailing purposes. He tries to hire Ruggles and MacMurray away from the reform paper with tempting salaries but they remain loyal to the paper they helped to build.

When Ruggles' daughter, played by Miss Farmer, who is also MacMurray's sweetheart, hears of this, she is furious. Unable to understand the principles of father and sweetheart, she accepts a post as reporter on Nolan's paper. She soon becomes the newspaper sensation of the town. Nolan uses her ability to dig up facts on the private lives of his opponents in his campaign to discredit MacMurray.

A highly dramatic moment arrives when Ruggles is forced to write the story of the suicide. Still sticking to his principles of clean and accurate reporting, he refuses to be influenced by this story with the dramatic sentence "Tonight my daughter killed a man."

When Miss Farmer's usefulness to Nolan has become outlived, he decides to put her out of the way, fearful that she may reveal the source of his corruption. In a thrilling action-packed climax MacMurray engages in battle with the girl and rid the city of Nolan, but not before Miss Farmer has been a victim of the belief that journalism is "just another racket."

"Exclusive" is an important picture in that it is the first film using as its background the world of radio which provides an accurate insight into the methods by which journalism versus the "yellow" and scandal sheet variety. It is also important because it presents the newspaper people as newspaper people know them, not as the over highbrowed, wise cracking, more-often-than-not drunken cynics, but men imbued with high ideals and the courage to pursue them. The acting of the entire cast is of a high measure due to the fact that it is from the pen of John C. Moffitt, former reporter and editor of the Kansas City "Star" and one of the country's outstanding newspapermen.

Three Swell Shorts

Three swell short treats, each packed with entertainment, are announced for exhibition on the same program, including a very funny all-Negro comedy "Her Highland Hero." Mark Warnow and his Blue Velvet Music and Modern Tremblers a Popular Science a color.

Gloria Stuart in "Th eLady Escapes" now playing the Capitol.

C. N. E. Sports

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—Canadian transportation and commercial travellers were honored today at the 50th Canadian National Exhibition. Harness racing, professional divine exhibitions and motorboat racing featured the athletic events.

A notice up in the 325-metre motorboat class, Miss Quebec III driven by Jack McInnis of Sherwille, Que., won the first heat yesterday. Several of the eighteen starters were turned over in rough water and one of the sleek speedsters sank in 40 feet of water.

Agriculturists were in the limelight yesterday as judging of livestock continued. Mrs. Ruth Carpenter, Rochester, N.Y., took first in the class for saddle horses over 15.2 hands with her chestnut gelding Kentucky Lane.

Fast stepping gelding from the stable of John Brigham, Kenwood, Ont., Dazzle Direct won the major pacer of the $3,500 prize for three-year-olds at the harness race meet. In final heat of the big money race Dazzle Direct and Rosalin collided and both horses continued without their drivers.

Morris McDonald, Strathroy, driving Dazzle Direct, suffered abrasions and facial injuries when both horses and a cart passed over his body.

GENOVESE WINS OVER WALLACE

meeting, for the champion won easily in two rounds. Genovese won eight or nine rounds, was never in trouble and looks like a challenger hanging on to survive brief intervals of two-fisted slugging by the best.

The third man in the ring was Arthur Donovan of New York. The final bell hardly had finished ringing when Referee Ben Diamond raised his hand without bothering to look at his scorecard.

The fight got it was a dull affair, marred by clutching. Only at widely spaced intervals, in fact, for not more only a few seconds at a time, did Wallace and Lee and plug toe-to-toe. Wallace couldn't afford to in the late rounds, and Genovese couldn't solve the challenger's style long enough at any time to throw a knockout punch.

Wilbur Wallace, Hamilton champion consideration, Sammy Luftspring took his place as No. 1 challenger by knocking out Eddie Carroll of Ottawa in 22 seconds of the fourth round.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

It was only at lunch with Elsie Farrest that Lorna's name came up again. Mrs. Farrest, wiping her mouth daintily, expressed herself as frankly relieved. "I loathe silhouettes—always have," she said. "Tony darling, what I mean. Certain people don't. Not that certain other people. Many sort of people. I never would have taken on Lorna if you hadn't begged me, Elsie, Webster's in Paris now, and she has no idea of having Lorna with her in Sherrick. Of course, if the Newlands's are as hard up as Lorna says they are, I don't mind doing what I can. But she never should have called under those conditions."

Elsie Farrest didn't add that Lorna had felt positive she could get Tony Kaye back once he saw her.

Jane tried to stifle her misgivings as engagements were made to crowd the following days with gay doings. A cocktail party at the Farrest's on the following day, and dinner at the Pre Catelan, which was to be Elsie Farrest's party.

She took Jane's hand in hers and patted it with the mournful lunch, her soft near-sighted eyes peering up at the tall, graying Jane Bruce. "What has Tony done to you, my dear?" she said. "You were like a Wonderful Person to us as Kayestone. You're still that. But you've changed. You seem to have stepped out of clods. A bit more beautifully earthly, if you know what I mean."

Paris was very thrilling that afternoon as they walked slowly back to the Chilley from Lavenue's. Mme. Anthony Elsie mortgage had climbed and graceful beside her husband sop erfectly grooms in morning coat and striped trousers. Nothing in all the tempting shops she couldn't buy. Everything to do but to love and to play. Then why was Elsie's eyes the deepest shadow in her radiance!

Tony went on to the Traveller's Club, and alone in their suite, flowered salon Jane tried to reason herself out of a state of depression. She couldn't hope to keep Tony forever away from his world, his friends. For a moment she wished passionately that he had less money, that the very things she had always hungered for were not so easily at her command. Rose had its pitfalls, she began, to see. A man like Tony would always attract the Lorna Howlands of the world—greedy, predatory women who wouldn't stop to tax their every charm. And Jane sighed. It seemed hard to believe that the greater part of humanity struggled over stark problems of existence, drawn closer together perhaps by their very struggle.

She started up at the sound of the telephone. The shock from the voice at the other end was that of a meteorites. It was the Comte la Pasle. Another reminder that she hadn't escaped, that she could not entirely escape, the past.

"How did you know where I was?" she asked none too cordially.

"I lunched with Lorna today," he came his slow drawl, pricked with the foreigner's. "You have not forgotten your promise, chere ame? You will come for the hand of a certain picture I hope to finish?"

The image of the pale blue eyes in his narrow blond face rose up before her; More than ever this

"I've got to talk to you alone," he muttered. "Isn't there some other room?" His tone was imperious and his glassed brown eyes shifted from the drift of people to Tony, to Jane and delighted as a host.

Jane drew back a little, glancing at the blotchy red of his cheeks. Late hours. Too many champagne cocktails. Her heart sank as she realized how very much at a loss Tony was. "Won't tomorrow do?" she said in a low voice.

"No—now," he insisted. "Please Jane," he murmured like a spoiled addicted child as an appeal to the old days back in Pond du Lac and any there.

Jane hesitated. Something terrible must have happened. He was like a crimson balloon, punctured, deflated, all the swagger and assurance gone out of him. "The door to my dressing-room is over there—" she nodded toward the farther end of the salon. "Slip in and I'll join you."

She was sure no one saw him edge away, but it was with a feeling of irritation, that she finally managed to leave her guests. This feeling increased when she found Bertram standing over her dressing table moodily staring down at the velvet case that held the Kaye emeralds. She was wearing them for the first time that evening at Elsie Farrest's dinner, and Tony had brought them up from the hotel safe in his usual careless fashion before the guests arrived. There was always something rather superb about Tony's lack of caution.

The adjoining bedroom door was open. On the table behind had already laid out the pale yellow satin that would an exquisitely set off her coloring.

Bertram jerked around. "I'm in the devil of a hole," he said hoarsely.

The Cotter fortune that had never failed Bertie.

With shaking fingers he fumbled in his pocket and drew out a crumpled cable. "From my mother's answer, through our lawyer, to my cable yesterday," he said bitterly. "She says: 'Not a penny more. Your mother's affairs in serious shape. Come home.' I didn't believe it when she wrote me before I called that things weren't going so well. And now when I most have a thousand—"

"But what have you done?" Jane said again, white to her lips.

Bertram turned away, and back to her, his shoulders sagging. "We went to Enghein-les-Bains last night. Lorna's crazy about gambling," he groaned. "I staked her, and we left last heavily in the casal. I was terribly tight. Well—they know Lorna there," he went on desperately. "On her word, they took my check. But it's no good. You understand? They're very strict about that kind of thing. I'm finished. Cotter, back there in Pond du Lac, will be sadly frightened. From her own fragile hold on happiness she looked at him with greater understanding. "What is it, Bertie?" she said quite gently.

"I wish to G—d I never gone to New York!" he blurted out suddenly, savagely. "I wish I'd never laid eyes on Lorna. Listen, Jane, for God—can you lend me a thousand dollars?"

"A thousand dollars?" Jane faltered. "But, Bertie—but why—?"

Bertram's ravaged young face twisted to a sort of helpless fury. "Because I'm flat broke right here in Paris. And—well, I've acted like a d——— fool. If you want to know," he said fiercely, "I did something last night that I'd pay a hundred times over for unless I have the money, to settle."

Jane stared at him, so shocked that she could hardly speak. "Oh, Bertie, what have you done? Surely your mother—" Through her whirling thoughts the image of old Dan Cotter, back there in Pond du Lac, rose unbidden.

The purplish threads of high living stood out on Bertram's cheeks. He shifted his body heavily.

"It was Lorna's fault, I tell you," he said sullenly. "I'm not denying I was tight, but she knew that. And she kept egging on. Damn it, Jane, she knew I broke out. Why the virtue all of a sudden in you?" His bloodshot brows eyes turned desperately back to her. "You weren't so scrupulous when you came to New York and staged that pretty little comedy on Park Avenue. Oh, I'm not blaming you, mind that. Tony Kaye fell for. You should worry." He lowered his voice. From the salon beyond, gay voices rippled.

"I can't believe it." Her eyes deepened to storm blue in her pallor. Lorna Howland's face and the fold of ours as if carved to her head. And the picture came to her of the Cotter house on its hill in Pond du Lac with old Mrs. Cotter living out her days in loneliness. Only this boy, Bertram, left to her. Unless I cover that check. I'm done for. Now will you help me out?"

STOLEN EMERALDS

"You gave a bad check in Enghein-les-Bains?" Oh Bertie, how could you!"

Jane stared at him aghast. In the small boudoir-dressing room where they stood, silence spread, webbing all the feminine luxuries that Jane had grown so accustomed to. On the dressing table behind Bertram lay a fortune in jewels. Tony Kaye carelessly about the case. From the salon beyond, gay voices rippled.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 9 (AP)—Stocks zoomed through the glass ceiling in today's market for recoveries running to 4 or more points. Calls were well ahead near the fourth hour, but the comparatively large volume at the moment dwindled.

Although the dark texture of the Mediterranean dispute and dark Japanese conflict continued, and there was no particular turn in the skirmish trends regarding a fall business pickup, many traders thought the week's slump called for at least a technical rebound and acted accordingly.

Canadian shares advanced over a broad front. Adding over 1½ points were Dome Mines, Distillers Seagram and Hiram Walker. Smaller gains were registered by Lake Shore Mines, International Nickel and Canadian Pacific. Mcdonald Funds were unchanged at 20.26 7-8.

Outstanding on the upside were shares of Bethlehem, Bethlehem, Republic, National Steel, Wheeling Steel, American Rolling Mill, Crucible, Pr. N.Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Southern Pacific war, Northern Pacific, Chrysler and General Motors.

Transfers were about 1,500,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 9 (CP)—A moderate amount of investment business on the Toronto list forward today but the gains were impaired slightly in the closing half hour as the buying demand faded out. All groups were slightly higher on the day. Action centred in the gold and base metal shares while the industrials a few issues, including Dominion Steel B, Fanny Farmer, Walker's Common, C.P.R. and British American Oil, changed hands in considerable volume.

A wait-and-see attitude on the part of traders was indicated by the drop of aggregate turnover by 400,000 shares from yesterday.

Brazilian's early advance of more than a point dwindled to not more than a half point at the close and point gains for Dominion Steel B, British American Oil and Distillers-Seagrams were cut to fractions. Steels, however, showed a gain or better than a point, and of the other interlisted issues, C.P.R. and Ford A. held practically unchanged and the big oils were steady to a little stronger.

The food list harbored some soft spots. Canada Bread, preferred, Pfd. 1½, Maple Leaf Milling, a point and Alberta Pacific Grain, a half off 2¼.

O'Brien reached 4.60 but settled back to 4.40 for a net gain of 25 cents. Other active, according gold, up 10 to 15 at the close were Teck Hughes, Macassa, Buffalo-Ankerite, Coburn and Siscoe.

Smelters' 2-point advance was trimmed a little later.

Market Comment

Death of O'Brien Director Results in Selling In Stock

The death of J. A. O'Brien, director of O'Brien Gold Mines, has caused much selling in the stock. The heavy selling which came in the week resulted from the belief in some quarters that succession duties on Mr. O'Brien's estate might necessitate a certain amount of liquidation of the O'Brien stock.

However, it is reported that Mr. O'Brien's major interest in O'Brien Gold Mines is through his investment in the holding company, M. J. O'Brien, Limited.

The death of J. A. O'Brien, president of O'Brien Gold Mines, and who was recently elected president following the death of A. E. Ames, former president, came as a shock to the mining fraternity and his many associates throughout Canada.

To say that the war scare was responsible for the sensational break in the market after the Labor Day holiday is not presenting the entire picture. The public has been well posted on developments in the Far East, in Mediterranean and in Spain and although nervousness has been evident for some time, there was seldom a scare for the sudden avalanche of liquidation on Tuesday. It would appear to the writer as if a part of the selling was engineered by professionals in New York and the local list refiected more than it should the trend since the last.

Now that the market has suffered a sharp setback, the opinion is being heard by market forecasters that the Fall outlook for business is not as promising as it appeared a short time ago. In other words, they are endeavouring to find a reason to explain the sudden break in securities.

Several things stand out in the present market. If, as is generally believed, the market has declined on account of the possibility of war, it is not unreasonable to assume that the base metals would be the prime beneficiaries from such a development? Yet, these securities have suffered even more severely than the general average. Another point would also call for a tremendous amount of buying on the part of those who have led the decline. In other words, the list is not acting according to form.

Which brings up the point that the majority of market traders had anticipated the commencement of a rally immediately after Labor Day. Financial Service took the occasion to point out that when the majority of market traders anticipate a fixed trend, it seldom develops.

In the present type of market, the analysis of individual equities is useless. The market acts as a whole and when weakness develops, every security sells off irrespective of merit. Nevertheless, many issues are becoming perceptible and those with surplus funds are being presented with the best opportunity in the last two years.

The advice being given by the majority of investment houses is to acquire a line of the better grade stocks on a scale from previous prices. No one can get the absolute low on any security and in order to miss the opportunity, acquisition of equities on a scale appears a wise procedure. It should be borne in mind that the market is not being wiped out and when the selling process disappears a good rally should ensue.

Livestock

Toronto, Sept. 9.—(CP)—Trading was slow to steady on the Toronto Livestock Market today. Only a hundred cattle arrived with slightly lower prices on the cattle division and also on the calf division.

The calf market closed weaker at $9 to $9.50 for choice vealers, with medium kinds at $10.25 to $10.50 off truck for bacon. Lambs were steady with a few good light sheep sold up to $4.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 620; calves 150; hogs 220; sheep 1,000.

Only sales on killing cattle were a few heifers and steers and heifers which went at $3.75 to $8.50. Common to medium stockers brought $3 to $4.50 and a few good feeders reached $5.50 and $6.

On the calf division heavy weight calves sold at $3.50 to $5.

Lambs while generally steady, also sold 25 cents lower. Early sales on good ewes and wethers were at $8.75. Final sales were at $8.50 with some unsold.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Sept. 9—There was a steady tone on the local egg market yesterday. Butter and cheese prices continued to rule easy. Potatoes and poultry were unchanged. Receipts were light, being 3,236 cases of eggs, 1,075 boxes of butter and 7,438 boxes of cheese, excluding stock sold here.

On the open butter market the range was 28 to 28½ for No. 1's.

At the weekly auction of Quebec cheese held at the Corn Exchange Board of Trade, 1,069 boxes were offered, the No. 1 white selling at 16 3-4c to 17c and the No. 1 colored bringing 13 1-4c. No. 1 Ontario cheese was quoted 17 3-4c to 18c for white and 14 5-8c to 14 3-4c for the colored.

New Base Metals Discovery At Eva Lake Yields Good Values

Heavy results have just been received from the Provincial Mines Department on 14 channel samples taken from the new base metals discovery on the Company's Coyle Lake group, officials of Eva Lake Gold Mines advise. The samples were taken at 5 foot intervals along the 70 foot length which has been stripped on surface and reveal a combined value in gold, silver, copper, zinc and lead of $18.24 per ton across an average width of 5.6 feet. Assay No. 7 as follows: F. G. S., the company's consultant report in part, "Subject to examination of the economics of the undertaking, these values may be considered an expression of commercial tenor."

KATHERINE LEAD PREPARES SHAFT

Operations at this Ontario lead property are now being centred on the de-watering, re-timbering and straightening out of the shaft. Dewatering is expected to be completed by September 18th, when the bigs on the east end-veil will be straightened out.

The shaft has already been retimbered to the 55 foot level and as the shaft is straightened, re-timbering will be carried out to the present depth of 110 feet.

Two new drifts have been staked on the surface, one of which has a width of 22 feet. These veins run parallel to the one on which the main shaft is sunk, and a cross cut will be made at the 100 foot level to intersect them.

With everything on the surface shipshape condition, it is expected that this property will be in production within a very short time after the present shaft operations are completed.

insurgent dictator.

Goebbels spared his listeners none of the bloody details of what he said was the Bolshevist terror in Spain. He told a lurid story of murder, rape, the slaughter of churches and the killing of hostages.

"Spain is Soviet Russia," he said. "It is perfectly incomprehensible that some church authorities should uphold Stalin's terror."

Calls on Europe to Awaken

"All this might have happened with us except for Adolf Hitler.

"The churches ought to be everlastingly grateful to us. But, instead, they insist on trespassing on the domains of the State."

He reverted to his original theme: The people of Europe can no longer afford to bury their heads like ostriches.

"They must wake up now—any delay is sinful.

"Ours has been a voice crying in the wilderness.

"And if the Bolshevist infection is allowed to spread, history will accuse the democratic statesmen of Moscow's political smoke screen.

"The Spanish, trouble was planned by Moscow, financed by Moscow and organized by Moscow. Today it is communism. Tomorrow Moscow would have succeeded in its real design but for one man's heroic energy."

landed in a bunker and he barely reached the green with an explosive shot. But he saved himself by dropping a 42-foot putt. Diegel missed a shot on the corresponding hole and was over par, then came home in even fours.

Ed Oliver of Wilmington, Del. was the second par breaker, scoring 45-35 — 80 and landed in second place behind Diegel with less than half the field to play. The fellow showed signs of the first nine holes in fours and carded a birdie two on the short seventh.

He had a birdie on the twelfth, dropped a stymie shot on the fourteenth and carded a birdie on the 405-yard 16th.

SUDDEN DEATH OF TRAVELLER

Many friends in Belleville and throughout Eastern Ontario will regret to learn of the sudden death in Toronto of Howard Marks, a popular commercial traveller, representing the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company. Death came suddenly to Mr. Marks at his home, 59 Oearl Crescent, Toronto. Deep sympathy is felt for the bereaved wife and relatives.

9 POWERS DIVIDE INLAND SEA INTO 2 ZONES

Anti - Piracy Patrols Take Place of Convoys; Lanes for Mediterranean

Russian Commissar Hints at Italy But Does Not Name Her

RUSSIA READY ALONE

Italian Says Soviet Ready to Act Alone if Necessary

Nyon, Switzerland, Sept. 10 (CP-Havas)—The nine-power anti-piracy conference, acting on a technical committee, tonight abandoned the project for giving merchant ships in the Mediterranean naval convoys, but retained in principle the British plan to divide the Inland Sea into two zones for surveillance.

The western part of Malta would be guarded by the French and British fleets while those east of Malta would be patrolled by the fleets of the other powers represented at the conference.

Russian Treaty Made.

Geneva, Sept. 10 (AP) — Foreign Commissar Litvinoff warned the nine-nation Mediterranean conference today that Russia "must also will take its own measures" against submarine attacks.

This was interpreted as a threat of reprisals against Italy.

In an impassioned address not long after the nine powers met to adopt a collective note against piratical attacks on neutral vessels, Litvinoff said:

"The Soviet government cannot allow anyone to destroy its plain property."

He linked these words with a thinly veiled accusation that Italy as a "pirate government."

Everyone, he said, knew the country he was referring to.

Then Litvinoff brought into the open his warning—that Russia will act, alone if necessary, to stop the pirate submarines.

She has accused Italy directly of sinking two of her ships.

The Soviet Foreign Commissar did say Russia was ready to take part in collective measures against the pirates "but she was wondering if the measures would be "effective and immediate."

But he served notice: "The Soviet Union cannot remain inactive in the face of the flagrant violation of its rights which may, perhaps, be defended by other powers or by an international organization!"

After he had spoken, British Foreign Secretary Eden rose to express regret that Italy and Germany were not represented at the conference.

But, he added, this should not stop the conference in its "duty."

Then the conference went into closed session.

Litvinoff started off this way:

"Such a flagrant violation constitutes piracy on the high seas—organized piracy, not the work of individual criminals, gangs or mutineers, but by the government of a European state, which pretends to be the world's attention."

He said this piracy had come from "submarines whose nationality has been secret, whose national flag was concealed, whose crews were disguised uniforms."

"Only those states can avoid participating in this conference which consider themselves guaranteed against piracy and incapable of using organize it themselves as an instrument of national policy or because they prefer extreme intimacy with the pirates.

Anglo - French Proposals to End Submarine Piracy

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Sept. 10 (CP)—Revised Anglo-French proposals to end submarine piracy in the Mediterranean are to be submitted to the Nyon Conference, British main features are understood to be:

International policing to confirm itself to defined Mediterranean lanes;

Creation of an international force of destroyers to ensure that these lanes can be used freely and safely.

Any molestation with shipping in these lanes will be treated as an act of piracy.

General Sanjurjo De Llano, commander of General Franco's southern army, announced in a broadcast that Franco had bought four submarines which were now in the Mediterranean. This was the first mention of the purchase.

Authorities are curious to know when Franco bought the submarines and from whom they were purchased. Lieut.-Gen. Sanjurjo is member of the non-intervention committee which has representatives of the Spanish non-intervention government, the sale would constitute a breach of the agreement. It is expected Quiepo De Llano's announcement will be placed on the non-intervention committee for inquiry.

In any event, it is stated in British circles, submarines flying the flag of Italy will be liable to attack if interfering with British shipping on the high seas will take the consequences.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. E. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Lengthening of twilight. We often hear them say how short the twilight is here and south. "Why the sun had no sooner gone and it was dark" they say. On clear nights twilight lasts until the sun is 18 degrees below the horizon. The actual duration of twilight varies with the latitude and time of the year. But the shortest on clear nights is 1 hour, 9 minutes at the equator at the time of the equinox. Here in the United States say at the 48th parallel, is 2 hours 19 minutes at the summer solstice about June 21. Of course when the sun is overcast, the twilight period is much shortened.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 10 (CP)—A moderate disturbance, centred in Wisconsin, is likely to move eastward across the Great Lakes and a severe storm area centred over the northern portion of Hudson Straits while pressure is high over Northern Manitoba and a large part of the western States also off the North Atlantic coast. Showers and thunderstorms have been general in northern and eastern Ontario also in some parts of southern Ontario in other districts the weather has been fair.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh easterly to northerly winds; mostly cloudy with scattered thunderstorms, chiefly in east portion. Saturday, fresh northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool.

Manitoba, — Light to moderate winds; fair, warm and dry; cloudy with a few scattered showers; not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy with a few scattered showers. Saturday, fair with much change in temperature.

PASTOR INDUCTED AT TABERNACLE UNITED CHURCH

Rev. D. T. McClintock Installed With Due Ceremony

CHARGES DELIVERED

Stress is Laid in Addresses on Social Gospel

Rev. D. T. McClintock, formerly of Wellington Street United Church, Brantford, was formally inducted into his new pastorate at the Tabernacle United Church, last evening, with a large number of members of presbytery and members of the three Belleville United churches present and others taking part. It is a coincidence that last night in his former church, the induction his predecessor in Belleville, the Rev. J. B. Naylor was likewise taking place.

Rev. D. T. McClintock was born in Owen Sound and received his education in the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, University of Toronto and Knox College, Toronto. He taught school for some years and was also superintendent of the Spanish non-intervention, Brantford, the sale would constitute a breach of the agreement. It is expected Quiepo De Llano's announcement will be placed on the non-intervention committee for inquiry.

In any event, it is stated in British circles, submarines flying the flag of Italy will be liable to attack if interfering with British shipping on the high seas will take the consequences.

Rev. J. Semple Officiated

Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church, acting on behalf of the presbytery, was in charge of the induction ceremony. Rev. W. J. Sanderson, of Trenton, preached the sermon. Rev. W. H. Shannon of Centenary delivered the charge to the minister and Rev. C. H. Blanchard of Bloomfield United Church delivered the charge to the congregation.

The rite of induction was impressive as the members of the Presbytery stood while the new pastor was being set officiating minister before the communion railing while Messrs. D. J. Reid, Percy Sprague and W. George Barlow represented the Tabernacle congregation. After the Rev. Mr. McClintock had answered the questions a hymn was sung.

Received in Public

Rev. Mr. McClintock was escorted by the Rev. W. J. Sockett to the platform and services closed with the benediction.

SCHOOLS CLOSED BY CHATHAM BOARD

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 10—(CP)—A conference between the Chatham Board of Education and Board of Trustees for Separate Schools decision to close schools of the city until September 20 as the result of a strike by workmen on the sewage disposal system was announced here today. The new patient lives just outside the city limits and do not attend a local school.

The Public School Board has decided that Sunday Schools shall be closed and that children under 16 will not be permitted to attend ball games or places of entertainment.

Cartoons and Editorials Used To End Rumors of Wars

Lord Beaverbrook Believes There Will Be No Wars

STUDY OF NATIONS

By I. NORMAN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 10—(CP Cable)—Lord Beaverbrook is launching a campaign to have done with rumors of war, as he believes there will be no wars.

By editorials and the efforts of the brilliant cartoonist Strube, the Canadian press lord is planning through the Daily Express and the Evening Standard to minimize the disastrous effect of the insistent or continental tensions.

Wilther "The Empire"

Strube in the Express today depicts the front door of the "Empire Theatre" with the sign stating "The Dominions' Melody". At the door, standing and calmly grinning, is a Mackenzie King with the sinister face is a turmoil of Hitler, Mussolini, Chiang Kai-shek, Leon Blum and Jews, all pointing among themselves, shouting and fighting.

To American is seen dashing in panic to Wall Street. John Bull, wiping his brow, said the cartoonist is pressing his way through to the Empire Theatre and the Empire advertisement: "It's cooler in the Empire."

Yesterday the leader-writer of the Express, Frank Owen, announced: "Stop the war. Here are the reasons for his cartoons—"Major Attlee" is a high-powered moneylender and villain with swords, guns, and bombs. Strube is to present Major Attlee's Crisis in his real role in the future.

"Major Crisis" a Character

"Major Crisis" is the villain of the piece," Owen wrote. "He stalks about the world stage uttering fearful threats of war and death and desolation and darting looks of hate and rage upon the peaceful faces of nations.

"Now as we no longer fear the villain of the movies, who bound the girl in the mountain shack, we no longer fear Major Crisis. Only the city (London financial district) believes in him. Even the cartoonists are fright at him.

"Every morning we read of Stalin shouting at Mussolini, or Hitler abusing Stalin, of Mussolini roaring he won't stand for this or that. Then we learn that Foreign Secretary Eden went to Paris, that Leon Blum is going to Prague, and that the situation is grave.

Public is Calm

"Then the League of Nations spokesmen tell us that peace is indivisible and that war anywhere means war everywhere. Then we remember that in 1920 the Russians fought the Poles, that in 1922 the Greeks fought the Greeks, that in 1932 the Japanese fought the Chinese, and in 1935 British fought Paraguay, and that in 1935 the Italians fought the Abyssinians, and still there was no world war.

"Today there is a civil war in Spain which is a terrible civil war and in the Far East there are rumors and possibilities are geared up for a vast struggle. Yet the British public remains calm.

Everyone Knows

"Why, no war? In the first place we are too strong. We have the most powerful navy in the world and our fleets could blow out of the water the combined fleets of dictators' armadas likely to come against us. We have the finest air force and growing stronger despite certain lamentable delays in the rearmament scheme. Our army is efficient and adequate for any immediate purpose.

"The second reason for sleeping soundly at night is that dictators' challengers in the bloody lists of Europe are not the only knights in the field. They have men, guns, and planes, making them formidable opponents. We have the dominions at the first onset, but they have no command of the resources of war material, food, and money that could sustain them for a struggle with the great democracies.

Once Was a War

"Thirdly, all of the powers, either dictatorships or democracies, desire peace.

The Evening Standard in a full page leader denounced Britain's policy as just as evil the Nyon conference so far has not been particularly helpful. Nevertheless Britain has a better make up her mind that the Mediterranean problem is insoluble for the present and that abnormal and continuous anxiety about the war is over. She should stick to her own patch, giving adequate protection to British shipping and the protection of foreign ships and cargoes to the nations which own them."

LIBERAL POLICY IS CALLED BLUFF

Rowe Assails Attitude on Labor And on Temperance

(By C. P. Staff Writer)

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 10 (CP)—New liquor legislation if proposed by the Liberal conservative party sitting power at the Oct. 6 elections, Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative leader said in an address yesterday he would turn over the liquor board which would be independent and as free as possible from politics.

Mr. Rowe's party's platform's aim was temperance and sobriety spoke the Conservative leader in Durham Co.T.A. gathering. Labor policies were chief targets in his speeches yesterday.

He criticized what he described as the government's policy of "buck passing" and told a Cobourg audience the Liberals "pass the buck" on liquor control" and told a Cobourg audience the Liberals "pass the buck" on liquor control policy

FORTY-ONE PEOPLE DONATE BLOOD FOR PARALYSIS TREATMENT

Immediate response to the appeal of local physicians and the Ontario Department of Health for serum with which to combat the present epidemic of infantile paralysis, resulted in forty one men and women attending the clinic at the Belleville General Hospital yesterday. Each donor had made a successful recovery from the ordeal previously, though many of them attended in wheel chairs, on crutches and with the aid of canes.

Dr. R. H. Franks of the Ontario Department of Health, in charge of the clinic, estimated that some 200 ounces of blood had been taken. He was assisted by Dr. G. S. Cronk, local Medical Officer of Health and a staff of nurses. All blood secured was shipped at once to Toronto laboratories.

SPARKS SET FIRE TO LOAD FURNITURE

En route to Huntsville from Bancroft, a load of furniture owned by Henry Edwards of Bancroft, caught fire this morning, sparks from an engine being used by a road construction gang near Apsley, lodged in some of the inflammable effects. Unnoticed by driver or owner of the load, the fire had gained such headway that much of the furniture was destroyed.

CLD ALLEN WAREHOUSE IS BEING DISMANTLED

The old Allen dock warehouse, formerly one of the largest and oldest structures in the city, which collapsed without warning some weeks ago, will soon be only a memory by older residents of the city. This week workmen are engaged in reducing the blackened timbers, remnants of the once proud structure, to waste lumber and siding, still in good state of preservation in spite of their years of service.

WATER LEVELS LOWER

Water levels in the bay and harbor have dropped noticeably during the past week or so, uncovering many of the shoals and sunken piers, thus removing some of the menace to navigation for the smaller craft. With the shoals covered to a deceptive depth during the high season, considerable difficulty had been experienced in navigating the lower harbor by the smaller pleasure craft, and not a few accidents to hulls were reported.

PARALYSIS CLOSES EASTERN SCHOOLS

Mild Type Disease in N. B. —Thirty Two Are Stricken

Schools in New Brunswick remained closed today as the Maritime Province joined other parts of the Dominion in combatting the spread of infantile paralysis. Opening of the schools was postponed a week yesterday on the recommendation of health authorities.

New Brunswick's case list has reached 32 with most patients suffering only a mild type of the disease. No alarm was felt but closing of the schools decided on as a precautionary measure.

Third victim of the disease in Nova Scotia was a 23-year-old man who died Wednesday at Halifax. In Montreal 42 persons were under treatment. Six new cases were under the city.

Scheduled to reopen Tuesday, Ontario normal schools will remain closed until the disease is definitely checked. Hon. Dr. J. S. Simpson, education minister, announced last night. Secondary schools, separate and secondary schools will not open until Sept. 20.

One death occurred to bring the toll in the Toronto district to 34. In the province, the total stands at 1,200 were stricken since the disease first made its appearance, the death toll at 44.

Other countries extending the school holiday because of the disease include Edmonton in the west and London, Ont., and Montreal district in Western Ontario. Both cities yesterday decided on Sept. 20 as the day for school classes to resume.

With more than 90 cases in the west where the disease did not exist in Quebec and the Maritimes with four deaths it is estimated there are 200 persons suffered throughout Canada. A 17-year-old Barrie youth and a five-year-old Toronto girl died yesterday to raise the Dominion's death list to 46.

Miss Ina McCauley To Continue Her Duties as Teacher

Will Continue on at London Collegiate Despite Inheritance of Fortune

In spite of the fact that she inherited a fortune amounting to $695,901 from the estate of her father, the late Dr. Archibald McCauley of the International Nickel Company, Miss Ina McCauley, Collegiate High School teacher of Trenton and ex-resident of Belleville, will continue her duties as teacher of French and English at London Technical and Commercial High School.

Miss McCauley taught school in Trenton during the latter years of the war, according to reports, during the time that the late Robert White was principal.

When news of the death of her brother was received in Trenton a drowning accident reached her, Miss McCauley left by car for England at the time, rushed back to Canada and Sudbury.

Miss McCauley who was born in Belleville is according to reports, well known here. Her father was a minister on the Smithfield circuit for a number of years and also preached for some time on the Cherry Valley circuit in Prince Edward County.

Two Cars and Trailer Damaged in Crash Near Allisonville

Two cars and a trailer were seriously damaged yesterday afternoon in two miles west of Allisonville, when a car said to be driven by William Wood, Concession farmer went out of control and crashed into a westbound car and two trailers owned and operated by Ray Alexander, Hillier farmer.

According to Provincial Police who investigated the accident, Wood, who was driving in an easterly direction swerved at the entrance to a sideroad, attempting to drive to right his car veered across the road and crashed into the Alexander car. The force of impact threw the Wood car back across the road to crash into a pole.

Both Wood and Alexander occupied injury. Charges of reckless driving will be preferred against Wood. William Harry Thompson, of the local detached of provincial Police stated this morning.

POLICE BLOTTER

A number of minor investigations kept local police authorities busy yesterday, Arthur Glass complained to the police his raincoat had been stolen from a parked car on McAnany Street last night.

S. Golden, Belleville, reported the theft of $4.00 in cash from the Stewart-Warner premises. The "bike" had been parked in its customary position, but was gone when Mr. Golden's return.

Fred Truscott, Sidnorford Township, reported the theft of his 1931 model Chrysler sedan. The car was taken from Bridge McGregor, premises yesterday. It carried Ontario license plates number 6A194.

A pair of transients were apprehended panhandling in the city yesterday and were promptly taken into custody to appear in court today. Four Dundella shared the cell block with them last night.

Arrested on a warrant lamed in Toronto, Edgar McGregor, address unknown, was taken into custody in Trenton Wednesday yesterday by Provincial Police McKeracher, and handed on the charge of the theft of $4.80. The accused man is being held in Trenton. Detective Sgt. Ellis turned over to Toronto authorities their prisoner this morning. The Toronto police were notified of McKeracher's apprehension last night.

POLICE COURT

Failed to Pay Taxi Bill, Concessionman Charged with Fraud

"Hold that man in custody and charge him with fraud," suddenly interrupted Crown Attorney R. C. Donnelly, K.C. at Harry Hogan, carnival concessionman, pleaded not guilty to charge of vagrancy before Magistrate J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. Hogan was held in $100 bail on a nominal charge of vagrancy pending an investigation regarding a having allegedly engaged a local taximan during Belleville Fair week and refusing to pay a $7.00 taxi bill. Today the charge of fraud was laid in lieu of the "vag" charge.

Transients Given 7 Days

Two transients, who gave their names as William McGee and Patrick McVeigh, faced charges of vagrancy and panhandling. Both admitted the conditions and promised to leave the city if given a suspended sentence. McVeigh is trying to be too much, of this begging and panhandling racket, and we should put a stop to it right now. Seven days in the common gaol was imposed by Worship in meting out sentence to both men.

Solicitor Ill

Clerk of the Court Chief Kidd called out the name of Solicitor Keating, charged with reckless driving. There was no response. Solicitor Keating is confined to bed line out in Campbellford, so I believe we'll have to enlarge the matter," explained Mr. Donnan. A month's enlargement was granted.

Worthless Cheque

Harry Windover was convicted of obtaining money under false pretences, to wit $10.00 from Harry Dunning by means of a worthless cheque. His Worship suspended sentence for six months, upon the payment of the costs of the Court and restitution having been made. The costs amounted to $45.30. The issuing of the cheque occurred last January.

Failed to Appear

William Barnes, Niagara Falls, who was permitted his liberty upon establishing bail was fined in his absence after being arrested on a charge of the theft of a tire, the property of Leonard Reid, failed to put in an appearance today. A bench warrant for his apprehension was immediately requested.

ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS HOLD NOMINATIONS

Several Officers Receive Acclamations, Including Percy Ford, President

STATE OF BRANCH

Members of local Army and Navy Veterans in the Canadian Legion, will have a likely list of candidates to choose when, to-night, the annual meeting held in Memorial Hall last evening.

Nominations, presided over by president George McIndoe, were as follows: President, Percy Ford (acclamation); First Vice-President W. Ford and J. A. Chater; Second Vice-President; H. Ransom, W. Clark and C. Calcutt; Secretary, James Lazenby (acclamation); Treasurer, Herb. Willer; Sergeant-at-Arms, J. McGuire (acclamation); Chaplain, Rev. Tom Hill and Samuel Johnston.

Five members will be selected from the following list to serve on the executive body with elected officers: Bob. Pontius, Geo. Ransom, Thos. Horton, S. Pointer, J. C. Lancaster Jas. Pontius, F. Wigins, B. Beavis, A. F. Wesley, H. Thos. Hallam, Art Newman, C. Calcutt, Geo. Lowe, E. Pritchard, Thos. Gill, F. Branagh, J. Scott, H. C. Calling, R. Stewart and S. Johnson.

Election of officers will be held in October.

New Members Inducted

Several new members were inducted in the unit last evening following the full acceptance of their application by the general body. Recently the badge of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada was inaugurated by President George McIntosh by the new members while other comrades stood at attention. The emblem is one of the two emblems of the Army and Navy, the large Units, being a bolio of justice and fair dealing, and the blood-red wreath of poppies, consists of the supreme sacrifices that have been made by comrades who departed. It was clearly explained. The new members were welcomed with the usual hearty applause tendered by older ones.

The report of Secretary Lazenby showed that considerable work and correspondence had been carried on by the unit during the summer months in which time no regular meetings had been held. On the matter of pensions alone, forty letters have been issued in connection with the unusual hearty applause tendered by older ones.

The report of Secretary Lazenby showed that considerable work and correspondence had been carried on by the unit during the summer months in which time no regular meetings had been held. On the matter of pensions alone, forty letters have been issued in connection with the necessitating the writing of 100 letters. Reports that had been received by the chairman of various committees expressed his appreciation for the co-operation that had been shown by the executive officers and each member during the year. "I don't think any president who ever held this position has been given more help than I have had during the past year and I want to take this opportunity of thanking everyone for it," he added.

It was announced that the next regular meeting of the unit would be held on the evening of the second Thursday in October, unless in the interim a special or emergency meeting is necessary.

HEAVY SHIPMENTS SUGAR RECEIVED HERE

Preserving time in the city at present has resulted in some of the heaviest shipments of sugar from the east in years, reported this week some 800 tons of sugar of various grades, from icing to brown, has been received and is being loaded on wholesale grocers' trucks to points throughout the district.

STIRLING MEN FRATERNIZE ON 80TH BIRTHDAYS

Robert Eggleton And Fred T. Ward Celebrate Within Two Days

Stirling, Sept. 10—To reach four score years of happy and healthy life is in itself an unusual thing. To reach two gentlemen with an equal knowledge of community history through continual interest in its progress, arrive at their eighteenth birthday within two days of each other and offer hearty congratulations to each other on the occasion, it is more than unusual.

Robert Eggleton's Celebration

Such was the experience enjoyed by Mr. Robt. Eggleton and Mr. Fred T. Ward, prominent citizens of Stirling, who for many years have exchanged congratulations to each other as they reached the same birthday within two days of each other. On Wednesday the eighteenth birthday was Mr. Robert Eggleton when congratulations and wishes from many friends on Friday, September 3rd. as he waited in the office to get his mail, a trip which is part of his daily routine, since his retirement from active labor a little over a year ago. Mr. Eggleton until well past seventy-five years of age, was a building contractor and few of the men still working on his staff could outshine him in activity. To-day at 80 years he is enjoying physically with his sight only slightly impaired and his mental faculties perfect. He considered it nothing unusual to reach his eighteenth birthday and was looking forward with anticipation to New Year's Day when Mrs. Eggleton, who is also quite active for her years will celebrate her 80th birthday anniversary and "that will be something worth celebrating" declared Mrs. Eggleton with a smile.

F. T. Ward Also an Octogenarian

The other prominent citizen who reached the eighteenth birthday two days later was Mr. F. T. Ward prominent businessman of Stirling for over fifty years. Mr. Ward still takes an active part in the direction of the large store and furnishing store where he is found daily at his desk. He spent the early part of the day with friends on his birthday attending service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where he is a member of the Kirk session and never misses a service unless through illness. His interest in the community is emphasized by the fact, that after more than fifty of active service on the Stirling Public School Board he resigned at the close of last year, "to make room for younger men." His interest in the educational institutions of the community is the same as he follows the activities and governing body of which he once was a member, particularly the medium of the Daily paper.

Recovered From Serious Illness

The sturdiness of his physical being was shown by the fact that within the last few months subject to a severe attack of pneumonia at his age, many of his friends believed it would be necessary for him to retire from business, he was only confined to his home for several weeks and has been hale and hearty since to carry on. Feeling no doubt that it was very much time to wear out rather than rust out, and this grim determination resulted in his recovery and he is now as active in his business establishment as ever. He was also celebrated his birthday he was surrounded by members of his family and grandchildren at a dinner party given in his honor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Eggleton.

'Dudley' the Dog Spares 'Bunny' the Rabbit In a Front St. Chase

"There may be a war in china and another impending in Europe, and many thousands of people dying one over here—and besides the burning season isn't over yet," quoth "Dudley" the distinguished resident of the Queens Hotel, who gave your scribe another interesting recital of the "Hare and Hounds" on Wednesday evening.

"Dudley" who lay at his ease on the sidewalk in front of the hotel shortly before ten p.m. blinked his eyes in amusement; nipped himself to see if he was dreaming; rose to his feet, stretched luxuriously and ambled across the street to meet a more or less frightened rabbit which was skipping its way along Front Street. The rabbit appeared its speed as "Dudley" gave chase, an automobile coming down the street temporarily halted the chase, which was watched by the glare of lights.

"Dudley" caught up with the rabbit, sniffed, then playfully pushed it over with his paw. Again the bunny quickly gave way and again it stopped blinded by lights. "Dudley" then gave the same cuffed it again with his paw. Around the market square the strange pair made their way, "Dudley" being the canine gentleman he is, waiting for his new-found pal to get away before giving chase.

Finally the rabbit disappeared behind the fence at the rear of the Queens Hotel Garage, and "Dudley" resumed his restful position in front of the hotel.

Obituary

MRS. GEORGE A. RENNIE

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital at an early hour this Friday morning, Sept. 10th, of Mrs. George A. Rennie, residence 9 Cedar Street, in the city. Recently she underwent an operation for appendicitis from which she failed to rally. The late Mrs. Rennie was born in Sidney Township, her maiden name being Miss Mary Louise Hagle, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hagle. For many years she made her home in this city and had many friends to whom her passing has brought sincere feelings of regret. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. George A. Rennie; one son, Mr. Bert L. Bell, Belleville; two daughters, Mrs. Lillian Kerr, of Western Ontario; Mrs. J. Ernest Laug, Belleville and ten grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

The late Mrs. Rennie was married twice, her first husband being the late John H. Bell, who died in the year 1901.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. JOHN E. FALCONER

(Picton)

Picton (special)—On Wednesday, September 8th, death called Mrs. J. S. Falconer who had been ill for some months of a heart condition that followed rheumatic fever. Mrs. Falconer who was in her forty-ninth year, was the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Cole of Picton. For some years she was a teacher here in the west with her husband and family. They returned to Picton to reside about six years ago. Her decease is survived by her husband, one daughter, Ina, Mrs. Williams, and a young son, Bruce, at home, and one brother in Hamilton who have the sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

ELMER ST. PIERRE

(Picton)

Picton (Special)—Following a lingering illness, Elmer St. Pierre passed away on Thursday, Sept. 9th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Ostrander, West Main Street, where he had lived for many years. The deceased gave his early years at Milford where Mr. Ostrander then conducted a general store and was assisted by Mr. St. Pierre. With the family he moved to Picton, to reside a number of years ago. He was of a kindly, genial disposition and his early passing will be regretted by a host of friends.

LATE SHEILA MARY TICK

The funeral of Sheila Mary Tick, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Tick, took place Thursday afternoon, Sept. 9th., from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, St. James' Cemetery where interment was made. The service at the grave was held by the Rev. Father C. E. Baker.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

BARNHART DEATH INQUEST ENDS

Many Witnesses Testify to Fatality on Highway

"That William Laurence Barnhart came to his death at Belleville General Hospital on August 18th, 1937 as the result of personal injuries received upon the King's Highway No. 2 at Shannonville, Hastings County, when he was struck, by a westbound motor car owned and operated by one Herbert Diamond, of Belleville, Ont.," was the verdict returned by a jury empanelled to inquire into the death of William Laurence Barnhart, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Barnhart, Shannonville, as a result of an automobile accident, at the adjourned inquest held in the Belleville police court chambers last night before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson.

The inquest was conducted by County Crown Attorney R. C. H. Donnan, Provincial Police Constable A. A. Stark acted in place of Police Sergt. Harman who was absent through illness.

Dr. S. H. McKnight, who conducted a post-mortem on the body of the dead child testified that death was due to destruction of brain tissues caused by multiple fractures of the skull.

Mrs. Lillian Barnhart, mother of the deceased, testified that she in company with her son and two daughters had left their home at 7.45 on the evening of the accident and had walked down the sidewalk in the four corners in Shannonville, where her eldest daughter intended taking a trip to Belleville. Her two daughters had crossed the highway to the north side of the pavement while she and her son had stayed on the south side, witness testified.

Mother Picks Up Son

A few seconds before the arrival of the westbound motor car, witness had turned to look for her son and discovered he had been struck by a car. She did not see what had actually happened she stated. She picked up her son from the side of the road. He was rushed to the hospital. He was unconscious when she picked him up, witness stated.

Marie Barnhart, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barnhart, stated to the Crown that she had intended taking a westbound bus from Shannonville to Belleville. She with her mother, sister and brother left their home and walked to the place where the bus generally stopped. "We all stayed together until we came to the corner when my sister and I crossed the road, Mother and my brother stayed on the south side of the highway", she testified.

She had just entered the bus when she heard someone yell and saw her brother had been struck by a car.

"Did you not make the statement that you kissed your brother good-bye and then saw him run across the road in front of a car?" the Crown Attorney interrogated, after witness declared she had not seen what had happened. Witness said that she thought she did make the statement.

Distance From Car

"How far was your brother from the car when he started to cross the road," asked the Crown Attorney.

"About ten or twelve feet."

It was dark at the time and both bus and car had their lights on, witness stated. Her brother was thrown in a south westerly direction after the impact, she said.

Herbert Diamond, of Foster Ave., Belleville, driver of the car, which struck the child, was given the protection of the court before giving evidence. He was returning from Lonsdale with his wife and child, he said. His lights were operating properly and the car was in perfect mechanical condition. He had had his brakes adjusted that morning. Witness passed the westbound bus at a corner near Millbrown, which followed him to the corner at Shannonville where the accident occurred. He judged he was proceeding at approximately forty miles per hour. Driving conditions were good and the pavement was dry.

Horn Blown to Warn Women

He did not realize there was an accident happening until he saw the head and upraised hand and foot of the child directly in front of his car. Throwing on the brakes, he had applied his brakes when he saw a car approaching in the distance. He had blown his horn for he could see three women talking in the road directly ahead of him. He had just released the brakes when the accident occurred, witness testified.

He did everything possible in the operation of the car to avoid the accident, Diamond claimed. After the impact he stopped his car, then drove it to the side of the highway and rushed back to the scene of the accident.

From there he ran with an unknown woman to get a doctor, but was told that the Shannonville physician was away. He was questioned by a police officer in civilian clothes, who was a passenger on the bus to whom he gave all information he could, witness stated.

Asked by the Crown Attorney whether there was a possibility of the child being struck by the car he saw approaching, witness stated he did not think so. His car had a dented fender and the horn was loose. "I could not see whether the child was a boy or girl," he said.

Officer's Testimony

Ats. Herbert Diamond corroborated the testimony of her husband. "I heard a crash at the time of the collision," she stated. "There was nothing Mr. Diamond could have done to avoid the collision," she stated in answer to the Crown Attorney's query.

Highway Traffic Officer Sam Ryan, who investigated the accident, stated that he found skidmarks some twenty-eight feet in length about one and one half feet from the north side of the pavement at the scene of the accident. In a subsequent test of the Diamond car he discovered that the vehicle stopped at a distance of 28 feet after being driven at a speed of 30 miles per hour. He thought the car was well under control and was not travelling at an excessive rate of speed. The car was in perfect mechanical condition, witness stated, and there was nothing found in his investigation of the accident to censure Diamond responsible for the accident. Provincial-Police Constable A. Stark testified he had questioned Diamond at the scene of the accident shortly after it occurred. He had been travelling in civilian clothes on the westbound bus. There was no evidence that Diamond had been drinking, he stated.

Kenneth Vivian, Shannonville garage owner, testified to the removal of the injured boy to Belleville General Hospital.

Members of the jury were Messrs. Lorne Green, John Shaw, Carl Sills, Samuel Johnson, R. H. Ketchabaw, Harold Bateman and F. R. Casriber.

LABOR LEADER IS NOMINATED BY CONSERVATIVES

JOHN NOBLE

General representative in Canada of the American Federation of Labour, nominated by the Liberal-Conservative Association for Bellwoods (Toronto), as Conservative candidate for the provincial election. He will oppose Arthur Roebuck, deposed Attorney-General of the Hepburn Government who is running as an Independent Liberal following his demand for a reorganization of the Liberal party in Ontario.

HEPBURN ASSAILS LIBERAL POLICY

No Cars Bought

Mr. Rowe opposed the Canada-United States trade treaty. He wished to open Ontario House in London, to needless duplication of federal services and talked of doubling Ottawa's debt to provide employment. Premier Hepburn said his government not only closed Ontario House but sold it so it could not be re-opened.

Conservatives had accused him of spending $40,000 on new automobiles for ministers after selling those used by the former government at scrap prices.

"We bought no cars and I happen to be the only Premier of Ontario who has never charged up one dollar against the Province for travelling expenses," said the Premier. The ministers' salaries were reduced and the cars sold at public auction with the money placed in the treasury.

Charges Tories Benefited

Friends of the former Conservative Government had benefits ranging from renting places to the administration for liquor stores. Agents also obtained commissions on sales of certain brands of liquor to the commission, he charged the Premier.

"Why, the former Minister of Highways was actually involved in leasing of property by his brother-in-law to the Board at three times the rent it was worth and so anxious was the Board to help the brother-in-law that they paid him six months rent in advance."

Mr. Hepburn declared $19,000,000 worth of liquor was sold during the last year of the Conservative regime while in his government's first year sales were $26,000 less but the profit to the treasury $2,000,000 larger. This indicated just what the Conservative "tell gait" cost the Province.

While the former administration built northern roads on borrowed money, the Liberal Government was building roads and paying for them. He said a paved highway from North Bay to Cochrane and to to Kirkland Lake would be built and paid for from revenue.

form a coalition".

"Not a coalition to save Ontario but a coalition to save Mitch from defeat which he will get October 8," said Mr. Ireland. The Conservative leader did not "sell Ontario out".

Mayor Alex Hall of Oshawa in an address challenged the premier to debate C.I.O. and Oshawa General Motors strike issues. The premier refuses strike issues. The premier refuses to face", said the mayor, because Mr. Hepburn knows, "I have the correct facts which I will divulge before this election is over."

Labor Policy Called Bluff.

The labor policy of the premier was "a bluff" as he knew he was powerless to carry out threats to throw foreign labor agitators in jail, Mr. Rowe said at Port Hope. Mr. Hepburn's criticism of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization caused an increase in the membership of the C.I.O. in Ontario.

There are more C.I.O. members than before he (Mr. Hepburn) and George McCullagh (publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail) started to advertise it," he said.

Mr. Rowe demanded an investigation to ascertain if a gallonage tax was levied on hotel keepers since the campaign started. The public should know where these funds are going.

"After Oct. 8 we will institute a Royal Commission into the whole liquor administration unless Mr. Hepburn advises me he will hold an investigation to determine why certain hotel keepers received letters saying they had to pay a tax on a gallonage basis."

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"Land Beyond the Law" Plunges Days in the Far West When "Colt" Law was Supreme

Tapping again that vast reservoir of excitement, romance and gallant action by adventurous pioneers which lies in history of our border States, Warner Bros. have turned this time to New Mexico in its pioneer days for one of those thrilling melodramas they made so well. "Land Beyond the Law" is the name of their current offering, coming to the Capitol Theatre one day only, Saturday, matinee and evening. The title of the film is the same as that given to New Mexico in the late 70's by General Lew Wallace (afterward the author of "Ben Hur") who was sent there by the Government at Washington to establish and maintain order.

This is undoubtedly the best of the films of the Westerns with music in which Warner Bros. have starred their singing cowboy, Dick Foran. It has all the excitement incident to the usual Western thriller, including fast shooting and action—but in addition it has really fine characterizations and very catchy music.

Dick Foran, the Singing Cowboy, is starred in the picture, as a hard-riding, two-gun man, who, of course turns his talents to the use of General Wallace, becomes a trusted deputy to him by M. E. Jerome and Jack Scholl. They are "Whisper While You're Waiting" and "Song of the Circle Bar."

The romantic feminine interest is provided by Linda Perry, a pretty little newcomer to films. She had never even seen a bronco before being engaged for this picture, but in two weeks—at the cost of many bruises—she learned to ride with the best of them.

Added Shorts

In addition to this grand western thriller, we present a number of select short subjects. An Andy Clyde comedy, "Hot Paprika," a musical comedy starring Sylvia Froos, "Transatlantic Love," a terry toon "A Trough Egg," a novelty "Screen Snapshots" and the Latest News Events complete this splendid bill.

Today Only

Shown for the last times today two grand light comedy hits. Shown as bit no. 1 Patricia Ellis and Warren Hull in the musical comedy "Rhythm in the Clouds" and as bit no. 2 the light comedy romance "The Lady Escapes" starring Gloria Stuart.

Starting Nite

"You Can't Have Everything" With Don Ameche, Ritz Bros. Full of Music and Fun

Rhythm, sweet, trembly and low-down; heavenly song hits by Gordon and Revel; scrumptious girls; a parade of personalities headed by Don Ameche, The Ritz Brothers and Alice Faye; flying fiddles, hot trumpets and blue crooning; dancing feet like rain on the roof; and the funniest antics ever from the Ritz maniacs...Twentieth Century-Fox includes everything for a smash hit in "You Can't Have Everything," singsational new musical now playing at the Belle tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday, matinee daily.

All the uproar, the swing, the brilliance, and the freshness expected from the entertainment makers who produced "Sing, Baby Sing," "Thanks a Million," "On the Avenue," "One in a Million," and "Wake Up and Live" is topped by this new feature which also includes Charles Winninger, Phyllis Brooks, Tony Martin, violin, Tony Martin, Arthur Treacher, Louis Prima and his band and Tyler Brooks.

A perfect example of his concept, proved at the box office again and again that entertainment can be strictest form is the most successful, "You Can't Have Everything" is a rousing success as Darryl F. Zanuck's best manner. Every entertainment detail finds its proper niche in the gay screen play by Harry Tugend, Jack Yellen and Karl Tunberg.

Rubinoff's facile violin starts the story off on a musical career by serving to introduce Alice Faye, a hopeful singing playwright, premises in New York, to Don Ameche, successful author of bright and fragile musical comedy. Currently appearing in Ameche's latest show are the Ritz Brothers and Tony Novik, the latter an exciting new personality making her first screen appearance.

To further his romantic aims, Ameche has Charles Winninger, his producer, buy Miss Faye's tragedy, which the Ritz Brothers proceed to adapt, with considerable blue-pencilling, into a rowdy farce.

A steady round of singing, dancing and comedy intersperses the light action to produce a well-rounded gem of fun and amusement.

The Belle Latest World News Events, and "Woodland Cafe" a funny Walt Disney Silly Symphony in color will be presented on the same program. On Saturday matinee three swell cartoons will be presented.

"Exclusive," Gripping

"Exclusive," the motion picture at the Belle tonight for the last times is a gripping story that will hold your interest throughout. It is a thrilling newspaper story vividly portrayed by Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer, Charlie Ruggles and Lloyd Nolan. "Three alone" will precede the feature attraction. Shows start at 7.10 and 9.16.

THE GAME'S THE THING

Through the carnage of war, and the destruction on the Chinese front in an undeclared war comes a piece of tidings so unlike a war despatch, stating that the Olympic games are to be held in Tokyo as planned in 1940. That is a long way off and many things may happen in Nippon and China, and many poor souls now living will not have an opportunity to attend even if they at present wish for with the slaughter of war many a man and boy and many civilians will long before 1940 have been wiped out by modern machinery of war in the Sino-Japanese struggle.

There is some cheer in the thought that these games will be carried on, that even the thought of the games could find its way through the crowd of war messages and the war thoughts of the Orient. These games, modernized of course, yet have their inspiration in Greece of long over two thousand years ago, games whose name have lived through the crash of Greek and Roman civilizations and yet find their way across the telegraph wires over the other waves of the modern radio while even mishaps of today are forgotten or unknown.

Something endures of civilization—even the games—while guns try to tear down the material and the human.

STUDYING THE BIRD ALIVE, NOT DEAD

A Canada goose tagged by Jack Miner at Kingsville, Ontario, has been found on the Kellogg bird sanctuary at Battle Creek, Michigan.

Each year Jack Miner has further evidence as to the value of the sanctuary system for conserving bird life on this continent; because, by tagging the waterfowl that visit his place, he finds that they are often recaptured or seen on other protected areas.

It is a usual occurence to see Canada geese wearing Jack Miner's tags, on the Thomas Jones sanctuary, near St. Thomas, Ont. Several have been reported seen on the sanctuaries in elsware. But the latest report is from the W. K. Kellogg sanctuary at Battle Creek, Mich., some 200 miles from Jack Miner's home, where a goose tagged at the Miner sanctuary, has been found.

Jack Miner is quite interested in this report from the Battle Creek sanctuary, because it was his experience that induced Mr. Kellog to build the now-famous Battle Creek sanctuary; and now it is interesting to learn that the birds have established a flight lane from one place of safety to another.

Jack Miner says this is proof of the statement he has made so many times, namely: "That the birds know a place of safety, as well as a place of danger, and will come to humanity when kindness and love are shown.

By such acts of sanctuaries, the bird life of this continent will be saved from extermination. A game warden prosecuting a person for killing a bird illegally, does not save the bird's life; but, by providing safety areas, birds will increase in numbers, instead of decreasing.

WORDS IN BRIEF

The short word came in for high praise at Press Day at the Canadian National Exhibition, at the hands of P. D. Ross of Ottawa. One syllable words he told his hearers of the newspaper staffs are Anglo-Saxon and deal with the spirit. Not long ago a writer wrote a book without the letter 'E'. One can readily realize the turns he had to make to write so that he might be clear. But he succeeded.

It ought to be more easy to write a story or book of simple words of the mother tongue using only one syllable or two.

One has to take but a glance at Shakespeare, greatest of masters of English in all its origins, but greatest of all when he is using Anglo-Saxon words. Even that great line: "To be or not to be" beginning the most famous commentary on life ever written, is pure Anglo-Saxon. What writer but a giant like Shakespeare would have tried to use words of two and three letters, to use them so clearly that everyone can know what he means.

THE TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly
You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by.
Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps;
It shrinks down into a corner and it never stirs or peeps—
The typographical error, too small for human eyes,
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.
The boss he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair and groans;
The copy reader drops his head upon his hand and moans—
The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be,
But that typographical error is the only thing you see.

THE VILLAGE DRUNKARD, made immortal by the weepy play 'Ten Nights in a Bar Room", has passed out of the picture. In fact it may be said the Village Drunkard is no more. You remember the type, shiftless, shaky, an odd job worker when he was sober, but seldom sober, generally married with a wife who took in washing and tried to raise the children in shamed respectability. The Village Drunkard, as a rule did odd jobs around the hotel, even cleaned the cuspidors, and often was spare man on the free bus from the station to the hotel, worked about the hotel stables and generally managed to keep close to the source of his inspiration supply. He was also prize prospect of the periodical revival meetings and got "saved" at least one a year regularly. Prohibition virtually put the Village Drunkard out of business, for he did not commend himself to the village bootlegger as a safe customer, and cash was the village bootlegger's chief business. In town and cities the local bushers, either straightened up when prohibition arrived or they gravitated to rubbing alcohol and the alcohol soaked wax, manufactured ostensibly for convenience in providing a hasty cup of tea or hot water for the sick room—now ruddy christened "canned heat", which the lads buy because it is cheap, fifteen cents, or thereabout, and squeeze the alcohol out of the wax, add any soft drink and sugar, and addicts would not exchange it for any drink. "Rubby" or rubbing alcohol is a favorite with the steady drinkers of this class, has a bad taste which is corrected in part by other mixtures and makes a drink with a kick like a mule. Every town or city has its "canned heat" and 'rubby' addicts—as a rule they toil not neither do they spin but they are expert panhandlers and manage to take up all of the visible supply of these potent spirits each month, for the supply is limited, each drug store being permitted a limited amount only, and sales have to be signed for by the buyer. This results in names being added to the "Indian List". Those whose names appear too often on the druggist alky list are placed on the "Indian List" and no more can be sold to them while the names remain on the list. However, being a closely knit fraternity others buy the alky and share it and money is pooled for supply. "Canned heat" has had a tremendous increase in sale since it became a popular behind the barn drink. Native wine, which is cheap, also has a great run, and is often spiked with "rubby" or "canned heat" to give it more kick and quicker action, resulting in nerves shot to pieces and visions worse than "pink elephants" ever thought of being. Such is the metamorphose of the Village Drunkard, who for the most part now is a valuable citizen, one of the finest fruits of prohibition. Canned heat and rubby addicts are common among tramps who panhandle for the price of a meal and buy canned heat or rubbing alcohol, for food can be begged and any good moocher can get food enough in an hour to last all day, but it takes money to buy even this cheapest of booze.

The true object of education should be to train one to think clearly and act rightly.—Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

Sept. 10th., 1917

This section of the county was visited by a severe frost last night which did considerable damage to vegetation. Corn, tomatoes, potatoes and cucumbers were badly frost bitten.

Petawawa Camp will probably break up shortly after October 1st., and the 73rd Battery will be located at Belleville.

Mr. George Thompson, Everett Street, is spending a few holidays at Montreal.

Mr. E. T. Thompson has returned to the city after spending a short time at Toronto on business.

The Rev. A. M. Hubly of Emmanuel Church has returned home after attending a Synod meeting at Toronto.

30 YEARS AGO

Sept. 10th., 1907

Mr. A. A. Abbott, barrister, Trenton, was in town today.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Goddard have returned to their home at Elgin, N.B., after visiting relatives here.

The members of the Epworth League in connection with Ridgeway Street Methodist Church spent a very pleasant time at the home of the Rev. A. Martin, Charlotte Street, last evening. Miss Herbert in a talk took the guests on a trip to Europe which was much appreciated.

Chief Justice Howell of Manitoba, a native of Prince Edward County, is seriously ill at Winnipeg.

Lt.-Col. J. Earl Hallwell, former commanding officer of the 15th Battalion, died at Stirling this afternoon. He was born at Blackburn, Lancashire, England, on July 18th., 1854, and was thus slightly over 53 years of age. He served during the Northwest Rebellion in 1885 and was wounded. He was prominent in legal, military and social circles at Stirling, Belleville and in Prince Edward County generally. Fraternally he was a prominent Mason, Oddfellow and Orangeman.

40 YEARS AGO

Sept. 10th., 1897

The last fishing competition in connection with the Forest and Stream Club was held yesterday. It was a perfect day for bass fishing as the results show. Anglers in eight boats competed. W. H. Ketchenson's prize was won by James Gillick and L. F. Lalonde with 34 bass, averaging 3 pounds each. The Sinn prize was won by H. Tisdale, who fished alone and caught 16 good sized bass. The D. Grass prize was won by Joseph Templeton and Dr. Purvis and they also won the Solman prize for the three heaviest bass caught during the season, weight 7 pounds and 15 ounces. The eight boats brought in 65 bass, most of which were taken near Nigger Island. Bass fishing will be at its best during the next two weeks. Fishing is better in the Bay of Quinte than it has been for ten years.

Sawdust Township Council has been asked to submit a local option bylaw in the municipality.

In the baseball match yesterday between the hotelmen and a scrub team, the latter won, the score being 33 to 11.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 10th., 1887

Massanaga Point is now deserted by campers.

Messrs. Denmark & Northrup, barristers, are offering the Henderson House for sale.

In North Hastings there are 99 schools conducted in 15 brick school houses, 47 stone school houses, 45 frame school houses and 27 log school houses.

Mr. John Penn's pug dog, Fido was killed by its master a few days ago and yesterday he received a letter from Mr. Hind of Trenton that the dog is in that town.

Up to noon to day 544 dogs have been registered in Belleville. This city has some 30 miles of board walks and each mile of walk has some 20,000 protruding nail heads which are a source of great annoyance. The street sprinkler would confer a great favor on impatient humanity by putting a force of men to work to drive in the nails.

The play, Uncle Tom's Cabin, will be presented at the opera house here on the 17th instant.

WAR LEAVES TRAIL OF DESTRUCTION IN TWO COUNTRIES

Over two widely separated fronts—Shanghai's great international waterfront and the quiet sleepy cities of Spain—war is raging and these graphic pictures from both areas give point to the statement that war, official or undeclared, is still Hell. At left is the scattered gunk bombarded left after the greatest aerial bombardment that Shanghai has ever experienced had lifted revealing scenes of unbelievable destruction in this city of 3,500,000 souls and the torn bodies of hundreds of slain civilians; at right is a view down a corridor of the main hospital at Santander, Spain after insurgent troops had invested the city. Below, is pictured the return of a Japanese warplane to its floating base after a raid over China's cities. Its bomb racks empty and with flaming villages in its wake it is hauled aboard one of Nippon's aircraft carriers to await the signal for another "pacifying" mission.

THOMASBURG

Thomasburg, Sept. 13 — On Thursday evening, Sept. 9 friends and neighbors gathered in the hall to honor Miss Audrey Bedford, bride-elect.

Mrs. Bissell Cook called the gathering to order and asked Miss Bedford to come to the platform while Isobel Allen Beaudoin read the following address:

Thomasburg, Sept. 9, 1937.

Dear Audrey:

Your many friends of this community have gathered here tonight to express to you their best wishes, having learned of your approaching marriage.

This has always been your home, and though you spend some time away from here while engaged in the nursing profession, we are glad that for the past few years you have been in our midst. We have always found you ready to help in any community activities, and assure you that we will not soon forget you.

We also wish to say that your husband to be is to be congratulated on choosing, as a life partner one who is held in such high esteem in the community. Our hope for you both is that the coming years may hold much happiness and prosperity.

It is gratifying for us to know you are both going to be able to live and we will look forward to your visits often.

We ask you to accept this gift, hoping it will be useful and a pleasant reminder of your friends of Thomasburg and community.

Murray Blakely, Helen Mae Alfod Dudgeon, Norsmoe Beatty.

Audrey was then presented with a silver tea service. In a few well chosen words Audrey thanked her friends.

At this time Mr. Kenrulch was called to the platform. He thanked the people also. Mr. Fred Porter played the piano and all sang "For They are a Jolly Good Fellows." Lunch was then served and the remainder of the evening spent in social intercourse.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Coon and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Coon, of Shannonville visited Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carter and other relatives here over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomond of Pickering called on Mr. and Mrs. John Steven on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Elwood Kerrulch, Mr. Earl Brooks and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wray of Kingston, spent Thursday evening at Mr. William Hodbert's.

GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS

Green Fire

By MYRA A. WINGATE

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

Early evening was upon the tiny village. The grocery store, with its worn, sun-browned stoop, where on the scarred benches local rumor and confidence was deserted save for the proprietor, Wirwell Whittakerin village nomenclature, Wills.

Far up the lake road a solitary man appeared, strolling toward the store.

"Sho, now!" murmured Wills with satisfaction, "believe it's the doctor. So he's here!"

They greeted each other with quiet pleasure and sat together on a bench, two tall, iron-gray men, one bearing the stamp of the city, the other just as plainly a countryman. Both faces were keen and whimsical, with an underlying assurance of strength and character. The doctor leaned back, hands clasped about one knee.

"How's trade, Will?" he asked comfortably.

"Growin' considerable, doc. Between the summer sports and the winter sports, had to branch out a bit. Needed help, so I took in a partner—young Ned Hazard. Had a little money to invest and had to stay here 'count of his dad's health. Likely lad and a big help. I was hopin' he'd marry and settle down here, but things may not go accordin' to my ruthers."

"Fly in the ointment?" asked the doctor.

"H-m-m-m" admitted Wills. "My choice would've been Molly Brown. Know this millionaire tooth-paste man, that's his first cousin on the second lake. His daughter's kind o' democratic."

"Miss Ned's the fly?" asked the doctor, plating up the plump stogie-cat and cradling her in both arms.

"You're a genuine Yankee, doc," drawled Wills with a disarming grin. "You're idea o' conversation is askin' questions."

"So on with your story," returned the doctor, composedly. "That same Miss Molly Brown is drawing near in her father's ancient flivver. You'll have just about time to finish before she wants he mail."

"Ned's easy to look at," said Wills reflectively. "They make a handsome couple, I don't deny. But, cat's fool! Ned's a workin' man."

"The Lady Vere de Vere would treat a country heart, for pastime, are she goes to town," commented the doctor.

"Sometimes I have hopes of your intellect, doc," encouraged his friend. "Ned's courtin' car," indicating a neat little coupe coming down the road lake. "He's takin' the lady to some sort o' function tonight."

"Speaking of the cat's fool," said the doctor, irrelevantly, "did ever notice the cat's eyes? Get the right angle on them and they are full of green fire."

The two cars reached the store, and Wills unfolding his lank, powerful body, went in to give Molly her mail. The doctor rose to greet Molly, who alopped with the ready courtesy so pleasing in the young.

Ned hurried out, followed by the senior partner, ruffling his thick, graying hair, as was his habit when perplexed.

"Ned, could you take this order of groceries down along to Camp Wetuckit? It's on your road, and I've had to send Jake the flivver up to the lake."

The atmosphere about the coupe became electrical. Miss Molly looked distinctly haughty and forbidding. Wills looked as bland as a spring lamb. Ned, troubled and reluctant, but unwilling to refuse, took the basket.

"Really, Ned," said the lady with a light laugh, "I cannot be carried about with the groceries."

Molly Brown, coming out of the store with her packages, saw the little comedy.

"Let me take that for you, Ned," she offered quickly. "I have to get in to the camps anyway on some business for father."

Wills and the doctor, left alone on the steps, sat for a time without speaking. The dalorce in the car, if they could have listened in, would have sounded something like this:

"You were just pretending to be a friend. You knew what my business was."

"Don't be ridiculous, Ned. I thought you were a partner."

"A partner in a grocery store does everything," said Ned stiffly. "I'm not ashamed of it."

"Save the heroics for Miss Brown," answered Molly mockingly. "I saw she was anxious to made an impression."

"She was not," furiously. "Molly is always like that—just kind and friendly. She doesn't have to make an impression on me. I've always known her."

A long moment of silence in the car.

"You are rather a dear, Ned," she said at last, compelled reluctantly to admit the essential worth of the lad. "Perhaps you are high. I'm sorry."

The doctor looked up at the sky and whistled softly. Presently he said:

"To borrow an expression of your own, Wills, why in tunket did you do it?"

"Why, doc," protested Wills, "You was the one that pointed out to me how there was always green fire in the cat's eyes if you got the right angle on them."

ENGAGEMENT

Mrs. J. J. Davies, 39 Pine Street, wishes to announce the engagement of her only daughter, Olivia Rose, to Harold Hicks Wreson, of Hathaway, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Wreson, Belleville. The wedding will take place quietly the latter part of Sept. 10-1t

Mr. A. R. Fowlie is visiting his son, Mr. Keith Fowlie and Mrs. Fowlie in Niagara Falls, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reeves are spending a few days in New York city.

The hostesses at the Ladies' Town Bowling Club yesterday were Mrs. A. J. Bisnett, Mrs. Ed. Thomas, Mrs. J. Neale. The winning rink was that of Mrs. M. F. Duff (skip), Mrs. H. McGlonk, Mrs. O. J. McIntosh.

Mr. J. Richardson and Mr. Steve Flagler, Niagara Falls, N.Y., are visiting their sister, Mrs. J. Hess, Bleecker Avenue.

Mrs. (Dr.) Bruce Hunter, Montreal is the guest of Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, Bridge Street.

Dr. Austin Walters, who is recovering from his recent illness, at Lakeland Prince Edward County, will return to the city on Monday to resume his practice.

Mrs. Walter Bowen of Trenton, and Miss Lena Patrick, Reg.-N., of Cobourg, were guests on Friday of their mother, Mrs. John B. Patrick, at her home, 19 Benjamin Street, on Thursday on the occasion of her birthday. The guests from out of town were Mrs. E. Thompson and daughters, Connie and Peggy of Kingston, and Misses Turner, Cobourg.

Weddings

THOMSON—BROADWORTH

Rawdon, Ormsdale—A quiet wedding ceremony was performed at eleven o'clock, Thursday, September 2nd, at Rawdon Christ Church Parsonage, by Rev. J. F. Bewell, when Laura Matilda Broadworth, youngest daughter of Mr. William James Broadworth and the late Lulu Armstrong Broadworth, became the bride of James Ross Thomson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew H. Thomson, all of Rawdon.

The bride wore a becoming gown of navy taffeta with navy accessories and hat donned to go and reside for traveling.

The witnesses were, Miss Edna R. Bateman and Mr. Gerald C. Broadworth.

Celebrate 25th Anniversary of Their Wedding

Sunday, September the fifth, was a day that will live long in the memories of Mr. and Mrs. Denis J. Corrigan of the Township of Murray, near Frankford, when they entertained a large number of their relatives and friends on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Corrigan, whose maiden name was Margaret Bellerille, was most of her life in Murray Township, with the exception of a few years residence in Belleville, before her marriage to Denis J. Corrigan, what at that time was a well known on the Belleville Police Force. They later moved to their present home, where they have since resided.

The happy couple have been blessed with a family of six children—three sons and three daughters, who reside in and with their parents.

After receiving the hearty congratulations of the guests and best wishes for many more years of happily married life, a buffet luncheon was served to sixty guests. The tables were tastefully decorated with autumn flowers and pink tapers. Tea was poured by Mrs. P. J. Donovan, a cousin and sister of Mr. Corrigan, and Mrs. W. B. Davidson of Belleville, a friend of Mrs. Corrigan, who acted as her bridesmaid, twenty-five years ago. Mrs. M. O'Malley and Mrs. John McColl of Frankford and Mrs. M. J. Critchfield of Syracuse, N.Y., cousin of Mrs. Corrigan, were in charge of the serving assisted by Miss Betty Corrigan. Miss Mary Corrigan, Miss Kathleen Macaulay and Miss Mary Rogers.

Father H. J. Farrell of Stirling, proposed the toast to the bride and groom of twenty-five years ago and in a few well-chosen words spoke in a very fitting manner.

The guests included relatives and friends from Syracuse, N.Y., Ottawa, Peterboro, Belleville, Campbellford, Brimville and Read.

Many beautiful and useful gifts of silver were received by the happy couple who thanked their friends sincerely.

After a most pleasant evening, the gathering broke up with the singing of "They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Must He Baby Her as Mother Did?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

If she were not the most adorable girl on earth, I shouldn't be writing this letter to you. We're engaged, and expect to be married in about six weeks, but difficulties are crowding in thick and fast. I have, from my old home, some very lovely pieces of antique mahogany, which have been in my family for four generations. But my wife-to-be is all for the ultra-modernistic stuff that no one but a contortionist could use as furniture.

Whenever we have an argument, she takes to tears, and I give in. Am I going to do this all my life? Successful marriage has always seemed to me a genuine partnership, romantic and practical, but I don't seem to be getting anywhere with my fiancee. And I'm terribly worried about the consequence.

ENGAGED

About a year ago, a young man who found himself in a similar situation where his fiancee settled every question by tears—"Woman's Weapons", as they have been humorously called—wrote to this column to tell how he had solved this.

He bought two nice little red-leather blank books. He gave one to his fiancee, and told her to submit a list of questions in blue—things she wished to know about her future husband. These contained allowance for housekeeping clothes, amusements, savings; would her kind and friends be welcome to dinner once a week?

In his little red book he advised—Be kind to her friends. Be welcome at a poker game once in two weeks?

Would she prepare a supper? Would she be kind enough to make herself scarce, so the boys could take off their coats and have a real he-man party?

Would she settle arguments by tears, after she married?

Then he suggested how to cook his favorite dishes, will she please learn how?

Will she regard marriage as a sensible partnership, or a continual petting party?

Will she run a budget?

And will she please remember the man she married is only human?

These questions were duly answered by both parties, and the marriage has been very successful.

Please Let Mother Have a Vacation

By Her Loneseome

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife and I have been married for a good many years, and we had a wonderful little year in the shape of a legacy, I thought it to take her to Atlantic City, and have a vacation. She lost my feelings considerably by saying she didn't care about going to Atlantic City, but she would like to go back to her girlhood home and renew her acquaintance with some of her old schoolmates.

And would you believe it, she's said she'd like to go alone, and she with a good husband and four children. I told her she could go, but I'm wondering if she isn't getting a little queer.

WORRIED

Not at all queer. Even the most devoted of wives and mothers feels at times that she'd like to get off and away from her family, and get a set of new impressions. This doesn't mean that she loves you any less, but that she wants to come back to you entirely refreshed in spirit. Maybe she can take up the family problems with renewed vigor. Your wife knows the sort of vacation she wants, and I hope you will let her have it.

All families are better for being separated occasionally. It brings out their good points individually

HEARS HUSBAND'S SPEECH
Less is the political limelight than her husband, Mrs. John Lewis, wife of the C. I. O. chieftain, is seldom photographed, but the cameramen presente her here as she listened to an address from Mr. Lewis in Pittsburg, Pa. About 150,000 persons heard the speech, which forecast shorter hours, higher wages, and more authority for labor.

Blemish on Face Needs Expert Care

No blemishes mar her beauty

(By Helen Follett)

In the grand, romantic days of yore, maids were regarded as beauty spots. That led to the use of patches of black court plaster. A very ridiculous beauty fad, if you ask us, or even if you don't. When the queen of Louis Quatorze had white wigs, patches were in high favour.

The trouble with a pet mole is that it may decide to sprout a few hairs that develop into ugly bristles. The electric needle will remove them, and the mole. Only an experienced medical man should tamper with them, however. Sometimes what the growth is tickled by x-ray is used, also carbonizide snow. When the growth is thick and large, surgery sometimes is used.

Warts are even more unwelcome visitors. They consist of the elongation of the papillae of the skin and a hardening of the cuticle. They may remain the size of a pinhead or become distended into large unsightly growths. Small ones often disappear, if developments is rapid and there is a white, ragged border, on the surface of a fresh nail man. Your blemish is a sensitivity wart that may become malignant.

Neither warts or moles should be subjected to home treatment. There is a chance of causing a scar or of starting an infection. Professional treatment costs little and is the safer way of getting rid of them.

Carriage and grace depend upon the spinal column. Sit in a lump, walk with your shoulders forward, and your backbone won't be worth much. The balance of the body is maintained by a strong back, which means strong figure. You, by them by exercise, deep breathing, maintaining good posture.

A stringy neck can be corrected by adjusting. Exercises are made behind the ears, the flesh drawn up, bits of cheese slipped under the wounds stitched together.

Yes, Miss Questioner, it is expensive, and you should place yourself in the hands of an expert of good standing in the medical profession.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W. I.

The September meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute met at the home of Miss Lillian Anderson on September 1st with a good attendance.

The meeting opened with the Ode followed by the Lord's Prayer. The Misses Helen Lough and Doris Wallbridge were appointed delegates to the Area Convention. Miss Helen Lough expressed her thanks to the Institute for flowers sent during her illness.

Mrs. Ernest Wallbridge gave a splendid paper on "Teaching Boys and Girls Right Habits Similar to Each Other." Mrs. Keeble gave a demonstration on millinery. Miss Mabel Hatfield gave a travel talk on her trip to the north which was very interesting. The meeting closed by singing "God Save the King." The hostess then served delicious refreshments assisted by several ladies and a social time was enjoyed.

Child Very Sensitive About His Age, Too

Youngster is Humiliated When Grown-ups Remark About His Extreme Youth

(By Lida Gremelle)

Joseph was to come down to lunch Sunday with all the grown-ups, Uncle Alec and Aunt Lucy Brown and cousin Ruth, and also some strange friends of the family, one of them an explorer or a general.

Joseph was very anxious that he be presented properly. He bathed and shifted his manly and older, because when Joseph grew up he hoped to be an explorer or a general. So Joseph washed behind his ears without being told, put on his best clothes and went downstairs to greet the guests.

Now did Joseph forget to pull out Aunt Lucy's chair for her, and he picked up her napkin twice, as he had seen Father do, and looked to see if the distinguished guest had noticed.

Then Aunt Lucy showed her gratitude by asking him if he would want her to cut up his chicken—just as if he were a baby!

Youth Sensitive

Joseph flushed and squirmed and wished he could disappear under the table. With a terrible look, he whispered to Aunt Lucy, "I can cut up my own chicken!"

But how good did it do? The explorer had heard what Aunt Lucy had said and considered him a baby. He didn't notice that Joseph was cutting up his own meat, quiet efficiently and with out help.

Only Cousin Ruth noticed. "How do you do it without slobbering?" she asked. And then, to the "general," "I'll bet Joseph can ride, she said. "You know, Colonel, I never have learned to cut chicken properly. I never can find the joints."

The colonel laughed. Joseph knew he'll was a colonel he had always wanted to be, not a general or an explorer. "Perhaps you'd like me to separate it for you?" the colonel asked Cousin Ruth.

But Cousin Ruth smiled and turned to Joseph. "Thanks [illegible] but I think this young gentleman can help me. Can you, Joe?" And she handed her plate to Joseph.

Joseph took the plate, put his own aside, and flushed for the second time, but with pleasure and gratitude this time. He'd do something nice for Cousin Ruth. Gee, he would! And he did a good job on her chicken.

Helped Raise

When he had finished, the colonel himself complimented him on it. Joseph beamed at him.

Cousin Ruth had won a friend for life. Joseph was never to forget that day, and he did a number of things for Cousin Ruth. Yet, she had shown Joseph only the courtesy and consideration which any civilized adult shows another.

We don't have to pamper children to make old Aunt Susie conscious of her advancing age. At least, I hope we don't. Such a thing is cruel and malicious as that.

And we don't have to humor children, or other people's children, by drawing attention to their extreme youth in some way.

Even if Jane and Jills Willis can't help being very small, let them struggle with it, even at the risk of [illegible] Remember, face that risk on the new table cloth, let them stay away from the [illegible] altogether rather than humiliate them.

Invitations to Fiance's Family

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married next month. We are to have a quiet wedding, as am not entertaining. Invitations as only my fiance's family and my family will attend. I would like to send an invitation to my fiance's parents, who live out of town. Will you kindly let me know whether I should word this invitation? Should I send an invitation to each member of his family?

G.

The best form is for your mother, or whoever is to be the hostess, to write this note of invitation. The hostess should write directly to your fiance's mother, and one invitation would suffice. This might be the wording:

Dear Mrs. Wood,

Dear Mother and Tom are marrying next month . . . on "the" important Tuesday, September twentieth . . . we are all looking forward with special pleasure to having you and your husband and Betty and Bob with us, and this note is to give you all early notice, invitation and welcome. As you know, Tom have decided to have only your family present and one or two of the ceremony, and I am sure that you will be happy to supply "family party".

If possible, we would like to have you arrive the afternoon before the wedding, so that we can have a little time together with you before the wedding. Will this be convenient? If so you will all plan to stay with us in order to be with your? We will try to make you very comfortable, and I am sure there will be a happy occasion for all of us. Will you please let me know you can plan to stay over-night with us after the wedding.

Do tell me that these plans will be convenient for you, so that we may have the added pleasure of anticipating your coming.

Dearest love to all, from the Allen family.

Cordially,

Mary Gray Allen

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Richer than ever are the new fur coats. Typical of the trend is a tuxedo swagger in black broadtail with a big melon collar and tuxedo cuffs of silver fox.

Many buyers are concentrating on tailored suits in fine tweed, to be worn with a reversible topcoat of tweed and fur. The topcoat is generally of the short, swagger type, the fur in mole, seal or muskrat.

Get away wearing a smart tweed coat. A good model is in black checks, a blue back and a cherry-red joining of the checks in the centre back, being smart items. The large collar is of lynx.

All eyes are on the velvet turban draped spirally to new heights. These come in bright colors with jewel blue and ruby red in demand. Some of these hats are very high.

Appropriate for the seashore is a silk frock and coat fashioned of great crepe with a printed design of white and gray seagulls.

An added starter to the color race is deep claret red. This shade is used for a smart silk linen frock with buttons over the shoulder and down the sides in white.

That Body of Yours
By James W. Barton, H.D.
FOUNDATION DIET FOR THE HEALTHY SCHOOL AGE CHILD
It is just a few years ago since it was the custom to practically starve anyone who was sick, allowing perhaps just a few special easily digested foods to be eaten, and forbidding rich foods or foods known to be hard to digest. It was believed that the body needed all strength to fight the illness and this strength should not be used in digesting foods.
Today the more sensible view is taken that if the patient is to be at his best to fight the illness he must have strength obtained from food with which to do it. Further, instead of giving a list of foods to avoid, a large list of the foods that should be eaten is now prescribed by the physician.
The physician today has to remember that certain foods are necessary for body building meats, eggs, fish, cereals; certain foods for energy, starch foods; certain foods for their minerals and vitamins, vegetables and fruits; foods to preserve the alkali reserve—fruits and vegetables; foods that will not cause illness or intestinal upsets in this particular patient; and plenty of water.
In other words an all-round diet is necessary at all times, and this applies particularly to growing children.
Dr. Julian D. Boyd in Journal of Pediatrics childrens' diseases says of a guide in designing the diet for a healthy child of school age, the following have been specified as a desirable basic or foundation daily intake, to which other foods may be added: 1 quart milk; 1 or 2 eggs; 1 ounce butter; 1 teaspoonful cod liver oil; 1 orange or tomato or apple; 1 additional serving of fruit; 2 servings of vegetables, one of them a leafy vegetable, cauliflower, asparagus, spinach); 1 serving of meat, fowl, fish or liver.
Milk is the basic or foundation food as it is not only the best source of calcium but also it is a valuable source of protein —the body building food, and of the vitamins B and G. Vitamin B is especially valuable for children as it promotes growth and appetite, and is greatly needed by nerve tissue Vitamin G also promotes growth in the young and vigor in the adult.
This foundation or basic diet as advised by Dr. Boyd offers parents a simple diet to follow to maintain health and strength of the healthy school age child.

PASTOR INDUCTED

an opportunity to meet Rev. Mr. McClinton and Mrs. McClinton at the reception held in the church to the school rooms.

A social hour was spent in the school room. Mr. A. D. Archibald presided over this function. On the programme were music by Mrs. Hector Post and Mr. James D. Manning, and addresses, bringing greetings from Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne who spoke at the fellowship of the ministry, Rev. Mr. Ellis, who one, engaged in a tremendous task, and himself, the pastor of the church of God," and Rev. L. S. Wright who referred to the many fine qualities of his well-known friend the new minister.

Mr. McClinton succeeded the good wishes for Mrs. McClinton and himself, and assuring the people that "is not a fifty yard dash but a marathon and from now on which goes on day after day and year after year." Mr. McClinton spoke of the impressive service of induction over which Dr. Semple had presided. The addresses which had been given could not have been given twenty-five years ago, he said with their great emphasis upon the social order. Rev. Dr. Semple pronounced the benediction.

Refreshments were served at the close by the ladies of the congregation.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 10—(AP)—Stocks met heavy selling in today's market with averages falling well below their depths plumbed in the early part of the week.

Losses ranged from 1 to 6 points generally. Numerous shares touched bottom for the year or longer.

There was virtually no recovery near the final hour. All groups participated in the retreat. Transfers were about 1,800,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 10—(CP)—The market went into another nose dive today, the second in three days, and now lows for the year or longer were scattered over the board at the close. Declines of a point or more on Toronto list fell into line with the Wall Street break and prices appeared to be taking a anxious view of Russia's new threat against Italy. Losses ranged up to 5 points, with showing among the Seniors and Golds as the most severe. Industrials were proportions in the closing stage.

Brazilian, Steel of Canada, Ontario Issues, National Grocers Common, Distillers-Seagrams, Canners A, Walkers Common, the Preferred and Car issues and some of the paper issues likewise were lows for the year. Brazilian closed around 20 1-3, off about 1 1-2 points, and Massey Harris Pfd. off 2 points. Abitibi Pfd. also lost five points or more.

In the gold list Hollinger was down to 46, off more than two points for the day. Dome dropped 1 1-2, Kirkland Lake 2 points, Lake Shore declined 4 and improved slightly to 72, off 4, Sherritt-Gordon 2 points, Teck-Hughes down, Noranda about 2 1-2 off and Hudson about a point off.

MARKET COMMENTS

For the immediate future, it can be expected that the market will move with the news. Developments in the news from Europe is read and digested. Speculation is extremely tense and the market gets more consideration to the matter of present and prospective earnings. A few months hence, present market prices may appear cheap, because the public will not come back into the market until a sizeable rally has occurred.

We have gone through one of the worst breaks in the last four years but fundamentally the majority of stocks were at levels commensurate with earnings and prospects so that the setback at this time is out of hand as bargain hunters are attracted by comparatively low offerings. When stocks get down to a basis where they are selling at approximately five times current earnings, as in the case of Hiram Walker, it is high time to consider the buying side.

The day to day fluctuations in the market are difficult to forecast but one thing is certain, namely, that many bargains are today available for the discriminate buyer and those who can pick the meritorious securities will, over a period of time, make money. The day to day trader is very adventurous.

Plants Are Operating at Full Capacity

The various plants of Imperial Oil Limited are operating at capacity. This is the first time in some years that the company's refinery at Sarnia and Montreal East has been operated at full capacity. Seventeen hundred hands are employed at the first mentioned place, and plans are being prepared to go ahead on improving the wax plant there. Demand for Imperial products in the Maritimes has been, extremely good, this year.

SAYS ARMED MEN ATTACKED HER

Japanese Woman Tells Police of Being Trussed And Robbed

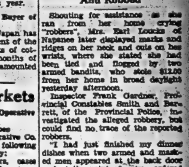
Shouting for assistance as she ran from her home, Mrs. Earl "Trobers", Mrs. Earl Loucks of Napanee later displayed marks and ridges on her arms and ankles and wrists, where she stated she had been tied and gagged by two armed bandits, who stole $12.00 from her home in broad daylight yesterday afternoon.

Inspector Frank Gardner, Provincial Constables Smith and Barnett, of the Provincial Police, investigated the alleged robbery, but could find no trace of the reporting robbers.

"I had just finished my dinner dishes when two armed and masked men appeared at the back door and at the point of a gun ordered me to get out my money. I refused and they struck me and knocked me down onto a chair, later tying my hands together with a rope," Mrs. Loucks shouted in a frightened voice as she displayed injured wrists, that show outward signs of having been cut and bruised. "They became angered to tell when my money was the larger of the two men pulled a long piece of electric light cord out of his pocket and bound me to the chair across the shoulders and back," explained Mrs. Loucks as she also showed the large gallery of neighbors and police the streaks and gashes on her skin.

Finding of Purse and Money

"Later they found my purse and took $12.00. After this they bound my feet and carried me down into the cellar where they left me until some hours later when I managed to free myself and call for help," concluded the nervous woman.



A Mike Hlavac, who lives next door to the Loucks family stated that he saw two men answering men loitering around her home the evening previous to the alleged attack and robbery. Mrs. Loucks, but workmen, employed digging a ditch on the street in front of the Loucks home assured the Provincials that this story is false, and have seen nothing out of the ordinary on Thursday afternoon, when the attack was alleged.

Both men were masked and one carried a revolver, one many of the tall one and the other a short one. Mrs. Loucks stated to the authorities. Inspector Gardner and his posse thoroughly searched the district in and around Napanee but no sign of such persons was in evidence, he said today.

Mickey Cochrane Hangs Up Mitt and Mask, Will Direct Tigers from Bench in Future

Although Only 34 Years Old Bengal Pilot Retires From Active Service

A GREAT GUY

Red Sox Turn on Yanks to Win by 13-7 Score

(By Ed Fedor)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Old Pop Time marked up the final out for one of baseball's grandest playing careers today.

Mickey Cochrane was definitely and officially through as a catcher in future, he'll be bench manager only for his Detroit Tigers.

And all over the big leagues, the reaction was the same:

"He was a great guy while he had it."

Mickey was the sparkplug of one world championship team, and backbone and Manager of another. But, in addition to all that, he's a "right guy". The boys all like Mickey, and baseball will have to go a long way to find another "man in an iron mask" with his wealth of baiting, his fire and his personality.

His 34 years and the effects of a "beanball" that fractured his skull early this season have made him bring up the mitt and mask for keeps.

Yesterday he wrote finis to his playing career by signing a new contract as non-playing pilot of the Tigers for next season.

While Mickey prepared to leave tonight for a tour of Europe, the rest of the big time, dug in again for their strength drive.

In the National League, the Giants were three games in front by virtue of a split in their doubleheader with Boston, but the Cubs, Brooklyn Dodgers, Carl Hubbell was belted 5-1 in the opener, but the New Yorkers came back to take the nightcap 9-2.

This even break boosted their League edge a half game since the Cubs' finally lost their first hold on the Cardinals and were given a thorough lacing, 13 Gus Mancuso gang swinging for behind Warneke.

The Red Sox stopped stooging for the Yankees for a day and hammered out a 12-7 victory over the American League leaders with a 16-hit attack. This defeat, coupled with the Tigers' 10-9 victory over the Indians, left the Yanks' pennant-edging margin to 11 games.

Dutch Brandt's four-hitter gave the Pirates a 1-0 decision over Cincinnati Reds. Vince DiMaggio's three-run homer did the trick for Boston Reds over the Phillies by a 3-2 margin.

The Senators slugged the Athletics twice, 13-6 and 10-7, with a total of 30 hits while the White Sox outlasted the Browns 9-8.

HARNESS HORSE ATTEMPTS NEW WORLD RECORD

Famed Greyhound Will Try to Better Peter Manning's Mark

Indianapolis, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Eyes of the world's trotting fans were focussed today on Greyhound, sensational five-year-old gelding scheduled for an afternoon attempt against time to set a new world record on the Indiana State fair ground mile oval.

Weather conditions permitting, the Dauntless son of Buy Abbay was to make an effort to break the mark of 1:58.3-4 set by Peter Manning, at Lexington, Ky., in 1922. The gelding is owned by K. J. Baker of St. Charles, Illinois.

Greyhound, winner of the 1933 Hambletonian for three-year-olds, has stepped the mile in 1:37 1-4 on three separate occasions.

AMATEUR BOYS TANGLE TONIGHT

Lighter Amateur Wrestlers Are Proving Popular at The Arena

Reddkin and "wildcat" will meet tonight at the Memorial Arena when "Wildcat" Bert Crowthal, the Mimico flash and Ernie Hughson, Reddkin grappler from the outskirts of Oshawa, will attempt to settle their grudge and against differences in the main bout of an attractive card. The meeting of these boys will be the first of the season and it should be interesting to watch how the Badman Crowthal will put over the punishing "Uncouscious Hold" while flashy Ernie will try to use his Canadian flo wrestler and the bout should be productive of some thrilling mat action.

Red Garner lightweight champion and a popular artist with Belleville fandom will meet the fast travelling George Hamby in the semi-final. This bout in itself has all the earmarks of a main go and it wouldn't be surprising if it stole some of the thunder from the headlined attraction. Don. McLachlan, Brooklyn, N.Y., need "Cowboy" Sullivan in the opener.

ORIOLES PIN THEIR HOPES ON FISCHER

Toronto Leafs Lose 5-2 Decision To Buffalo Bisons

Baltimore's playoff stock in the International League jumped upward a few points today with news all is well with their star southpaw, Carl Fischer.

The slender, 23-year-old hurler, who figured prominently in the march of Buffalo Bisons to league and playoff championships last season, is counted on for some heavy duty in the post-season series by Manager Bucky Crouse. Fischer won three games for the Bisons in Governors' Cup clashes last year.

The Orioles haven't clinched their berth in the first four yet, since Buffalo Bisons are hanging on like a drowning man onto a stick, but their ace portsider brought them on the verge of it with a fine performance yesterday.

Fischer went the route for the first time in his last three starts when he beat Jersey City Giants 2-1. Carl held the Jerseys to six hits, struck out six and walked but one.

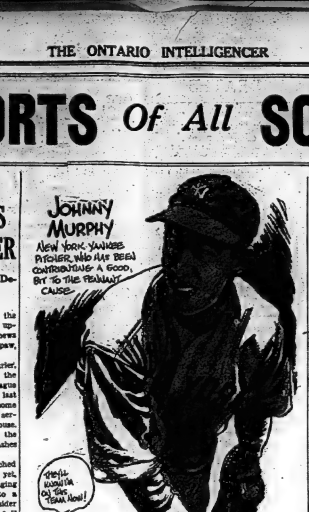
The Bisons, faced with elimination the next time they lose, keep their hopes alive with a win over Toronto Leafs. Ken Ash, of no-hit fame, outpitched Earl Caldwell. Rochester eked out their home season with a 4-1 victory over Montreal. Syracuse and Newark had a day off.

DIEGEL LEADS THE FIELD IN CANADIAN OPEN

Diegel And Cooper Shoot Well Under Par in First Round

Toronto, Sept. 10.—(CP)— For years the Canadian Open Golf tournament and Leo Diegel were almost synonymous and it may be that way again. The old warrior with the cramped putting stance, four times winner of the event, led the field today with another veteran, Harry Cooper as they started on the second 18 of the 72-hole competition.

Diegel and Cooper victor at Ottawa in 1932, shot 67's, three under par yesterday and held a two-stroke advantage over Willie Burns of Cleveland and Ed Oliver of Wilmington, Del.



Golfers with a sentimental touch and those who remember how much Diegel has done for the open are pulling for him to extend his wins to five. When the event was only a amateur competition, Diegel came to Canada, practically discovered the open and touted it to golfers here in the United States. The influx of stars from across the border has much to do with the open becoming a top ranking tournament.

Diegel narrowly missed leading the field along yesterday. He had a six-foot putt on the 18th green for a 66 and missed it.

Lawson Little, the defending champion and slammin' Sam Snead, the pre-tournament favorite both lengthy off the tee—were deep in the ruck when the final scores were posted.

Little played poor golf on his outgoing nine and had to come home in 36 to post a 74. Snead posted a 75, the same score as his partner Bobby Cruy, Jr., of Windsor, Ont.

As they started on the second round only two Canadians appeared left to win the open for a crown no native son has won since before the war. Stan Horton, the slender Ottawa professional, and Bob Cruickshank, of Kingston, Ont., both posted 73's yesterday.

ORILLIA IS IN LACROSSE FINALS WITH MIMICO

Terriers Meet Mimico With Winners Clashing With Cornwall

Toronto, Sept. 10.— (CP)—Fighting for the Senior Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association Championship, Orillia Terriers and Mimico Mountaineers start their best-of-five final series here tonight.

The series winner plays the Cornwall District Champions for the right to meet the British Columbia finalists for the Mann Cup, emblematic of Senior Canadian Lacrosse Championship.

Mimico has been resting lately while Orillia went through a series with St. Catharines Athletics in the semi-final round. The Terriers took the series three straight but lost the services of three men for the opening final game.

Mike Kelley, President of the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association, announced yesterday the Mann Cup finals would be played alternately at New Westminster and Vancouver, irrespective of which club won the coastal playoffs.

Orillia has won the championship three times and until last night were favorites to be Eastern Canada's representatives fourth time. But the injury jinx, against a fit and rested Mimico squad, may cost them a chance at the title.

Jack McDonald, Mimico mentor, said all his crew were ready for the series. Mountaineers have been a constant threat for the O.A.L.A. title and have given the Terriers some of their stiffest battles in the season.

Scoring strength of the Mountaineers is in the Duke Harrison, Gord Gair, Chuck Davidson trio. Their speed will help to offset the tricky play of the Terriers specialist in rushes. McDonald said if his Mimico men can outrun the Terriers so that after one of their spectacular rushes they can get the jump on them before they were set on defence the series would go to the Toronto Suburban outfit.

PERTH BISONS WIN INITIAL PLAY-OFF GAME

Defeat Gloversville 2-1; Lee's Colts in Final Series

By The Canadian Press

Perth-Cornwall Bisons, defending champions in the Canadian-American Baseball League, are one step closer to another title today as they move over to Perth for the second game of three out of five semi-final series.

Bisons took a 2-1 decision from Gloversville Glovers yesterday under the arclights at Cornwall last night. The third-place Glovers proved themselves no pushovers and the thundering herd had better pile up another victory before they move into hostile pastures Saturday. Glovers are almost unbeatable on their own diamond as they showed early in the regular schedule, when they ran up a total of 11 straight victories before their home crowd.

Bisons, on the other hand, appear equally as good on the road as they are at home and if they can turn in a few more games like the one played yesterday, there will be merry times ahead for the fans in Cornwall in another week or more.

Hal Dyer's Bisons, a scrappy circuit coupled with Joe Dickinson's three-hit hurling were the big feature in Bisons' victory. Circuit Dickinson helped win his own game with a single in the fifth and then trotted home on another of Tyler's bingles. Wally Chace, of the Glovers, who caught Dickinson's three-hit hurling were the big Gloversville mound gave up 7 safeties while fanning 10 batters. Glovers' only tally came in the ninth inning when Klinker's double scored Rochelle, who reached first when Gunn muffed his pop fly.

The very latest rugby football writing comes out of Peterborough. It seems the Oshawa Blue Devils may not function this season, leaving the Lake Shore group out on the limb with only three teams, Peterboro' Optima, Oshawa "Red Raiders" and last year's champion Lindsay Kelvatians. Some hint in the east we have a splendid compact three-league group of the O.R.F.U., Belleville and Kingston Garrison. Lou Brooks, Peterboro' convener for the O.R.F.U., comes to bat with the suggestion that the three Lake Shore clubs chisel in on the local group set-up, making a six-teamed group. The local supporters say—"Nerts, Louie, old boy."

Last year it cost the Belleville Checks a cool three century note to finance their travelling expenses, the locals being at the extreme eastern end of the group. As the situation now stands the locals only squad have to make the travel to Kingston, a matter of fifty miles, and if reports of the Gloversville mound gave up 7 safeties while fanning 10 batters. Glovers' only tally came in the ninth inning when Klinker's double scored Rochelle, who reached first when Gunn muffed his pop fly.

It is quite doubtful if the Kingston Garrison would accept such an amalgamation, as looks as though the Orfuns will have to make the best of it in a three-teamed loop, that is, if they do fail to do some missionary work and induce Oshawa to return to the fold.

Sorry to report "Slim" Burdea, well-known R.C.A.F. lacrosse and rugby player, was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital for an appendicitis operation recently. "Slim" is reported to be on the mend, however.

Ourselves as others see us—at any rate here's what the Trenton sport scribe has to say relative to the Belleville rugby football situation of a recent date.—

"Belleville rugby management is quite upset because Billie Hughes, noted coach and trainer, left the city scene to handle the R.C.A.F. entry in the O.R.F.U. One of the things the coach or trainer of a Belleville team has to contend with is a habit of Belleville athletes to be terribly set for practice.....and how they expect lusty team to get anywhere in stiff league competition without the necessary training is beyond us.....Billie Hughes is already handling the boys at the air station.....and they are getting out for practice and will round into a formidable team."

x x x

Also, the Lifluck City sport scribe has this to say.—

"Manager Ken Long, first baseman of the Peterborough Central Ontario League team was leaving town on the noonday to read 'this left town.' Long paid a visit to the city hall and then town of Dundas and was offered a good job with the Bertram people. It had to be accepted at once as the first-sacker decided to pull the plug immediately. The big youngster made a lot of friends during the season and will be missed. He had a lot of tough luck during the Central campaign and was probably "robbed" on more well-hit balls than any player in the League, especially when playing against the Oshawa club. Long was counted on as a good-

DEMOCRACY LOST NAZIS ARE TOLD

Convention Awaits Visit of British And French Representatives

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 9 — (AP)—On the eve of a visit to the Nazi party congress by representatives of the world's three leading democracies, officials decided today attacks on that form of government would be steached to spare them embarrassment.

Democracy already has been linked with Bolshevism in a principal address. Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, Nazi ideological leader and recipient of one of Germany's new "Nobel" prizes, called Bolshevism the "illegitimate child" of democracy and said democracy was doomed.

The forthcoming visit by representatives of Great Britain, the United States and France constituted the first acceptance of invitations to the party rally by the larger countries.

Andre Francois-Poncet and Sir Nevile Henderson, the French and British Ambassadors, and Prentiss Gilbert, United States Charge d'Affaires, were scheduled to leave Berlin for Nuremberg tonight.

Sir Nevile, whom the Nazis consider the friendliest British Ambassador since Chancellor Hitler came to power, took the leader in accepting this year's bid. The United States government authorized Gilbert's visit over the objection of Ambassador William E. Dodd.

DID YOU CAUSE THIS?

As a motorist and a citizen of Ontario, answer this question: How would you like to face the rest of your life knowing that you were responsible—through carelessness—for an accident like this? Would you ever want to drive a car again?

If you do drive, get this clearly in your mind! Should you break an Ontario traffic law and cause death or injury, you may not be allowed to drive à car again! We are determined to end the needless slaughter of our people. Cutting in, passing on hills and curves, crowding, racing and other breaches of the traffic laws, will get you into trouble—make no mistake about that!

Reckless driving must stop—now!

WE WANT YOUR HELP!

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders!

Former Belleville Pastor Sets Record

Rev. Dr. F. E. Maloff, pastor of Wall Street United church, may lay claim to the title of "marrying parson" after his activities in that direction on Saturday.

Between 3 p.m. and 8.30 p.m. he made no fewer than four couples happy by marrying them at the parsonage, Pine Street. At 3 p.m. he united Robert John Kirkland, of Smith's Falls and Miss Adelaide Irene Armstrong, of Merrickville, who were unattended. At 6.30 p.m. Gordon Herbert Smart and Miss Estella Winnifred Buell, both of Brockville, were married, followed closely at 7 p.m. by Victor Stanley Hall and Miss Gladys Elizabeth Edge, both of Brockville and at 8.30 p.m. Dr. Maloff united Kenneth Nath Barrington and Miss Elma Caroline Weatherhead, both of Rockspring. who were supported by George L. Gardiner, of Brockville, and Miss Vera Barrington, of Rockspring. Then Dr. Maloff called it a day. Brockville Recorder.

Dr. Maloff is a former pastor of Bridge Street United Church.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw — Mr. Roy Brown accompanied Lady Eaton's party in again receiving the congratulations of his friends. He won two firsts and one second and one third prize on white cheese at Belleville Fair last week.

Canon W.O. Swayne, Mrs. Swayne and Robert have returned from Ottawa and the Gatineau District where they have been holidaying for the past month.

Mr. Fred D. Peak and Miss Bell of Toronto visited friends at Bonarlaw on Thursday of last week.

Mrs. Bertha Blackburn of Coe Hill was the guest of her sister Mrs. Stanley McInroy for several days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Baker, of Peterboro, visited Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brown over the week-end.

On account of the derailment near Smithfield on Wednesday all trains were routed via Bonarlaw and Peterboro for some time on C.P.R. and the citizens here had a taste of the old time activity with long freight trains and heavy passenger trains pounding through all night long.

St. Mark's Sunday School re-opened on Sunday last after the holiday. In addressing the school Canon Swayne referred to this being the 150th anniversary of the consecration of the first Anglican Bishop in the British Colonies viz. Rev. Chas. Inglis, first Bishop of Nova Scotia in 1787. At the church service following Sunday School the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Brown, Olive Joyce, was baptized. Mrs. A. V. Brown acted as Godmother and Mr. J. R. Brown as Godfather.

Mrs. S. T. Madd and Miss Willa, Reg. N., Peterboro, who are holidaying at their cottage, Redmerville, were recent callers on Mrs. H. B. Anderson and Mrs. Jas. her.

Morden.

Mr. Jas. Wickson spent the week-end in Toronto.

School re-opened on Wednesday with a full attendance. Beginners were Harley Joyce, Donald Rose, Bobbie Lewis and Gladys Kinnear.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kinnear and family spent the week-end in Woodstock with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant, Howard remaining with his grandparents and attending Continuation School.

Hilda Morton, Betty Ferguson and Elmer Carley are attending Wellington Consolidated School and Douglas Palmer is attending Consecon School.

Mr. Clayton Palmer spent Thursday in Picton.

Mrs. Elsie Carley spent last week in Picton with Mrs. George Strawbridge who has been quite ill.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Root, Mrs. H. B. Anderson, Messrs. A.A. Carley and C. Carley spent Saturday afternoon in Wellington.

Miss J. Root has had poison ivy on her feet.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner Wood and family spent Sunday in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Garfield French spent Saturday evening with Mrs. H. B. Anderson.

Mr. C. Brown and Douglas were Friday evening callers at J. Root's.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Parry, Station St. and Mr. and Mrs. Ira Beare, Lingham St., Belleville, spent Sunday at their cottage.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was pushing crochet hooks in and strate things crooked, saying, F. Willis Hinkle had a very intristing article today, Willyum, all about the power of suggestion. F. Willis Hinkle claims you can tell a perfectly well man in the flower of health that he looks pale and he will immeedtly start to feel ill, ma said.

F. Willis Hinkle never did know what he was talking about and it seems he hasn't learned yet, pop said, Try it on me. Go ahed, tell me I'm pale and listen to myrnocking laughter, he said, and ma said, Well naturally when you know something in advance, you're practically fore-warned, before you're armed. Willyum, I mean seriously and P. Willis Hinkle said, did you feel quite yourself when you came home this evening?

This evening? pop said, and ma said, O, I know you didn't say anything, but you cani feel a wife and mother. You were feeling far from well and you know it, and I dont know if you're even quite yourself now, she said.

By golikes I wasn't so perky at the office today, but nobody noticed nothing so I guess you must have a 6th sense or 2nd rite or something, pop said, and maybe. See, I knew it, and you're still feeling a share or 2 under the weather, aren't you?

Well, admit I have felt better, but say, look here, is this a trap, is this some of that P Willis Hinkle suggestion bunk after all? pop said, and ma said, You'll never know.

And she kept on laughing to herself as if she knew a great joke, and pop got in back of the sporting page so he wouldn't have to see her even if he had to hear her.

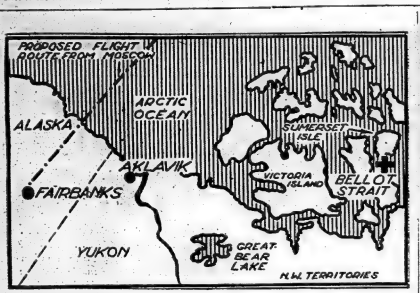
RUSSIAN BLACK SEA FLEET ORDERED TO SAIL AS SUB ATTACKS CONTINUE

While Great Britain and other Mediterranean powers prepared for a conference at Geneva to discuss the attacks on mercantile shipping in the Mediterranean by an unidentified submarine, Soviet Russia prepared to dispatch her Black Sea fleet to the trouble area. Two Soviet merchant ships were sunk within four days following attacks by a submarine. The Soviet press has alleged "Italy's Fascist dogs and cut-throats" are responsible for the attacks and Pravda, official Communist organ, suggested that the Soviet government might not wait for agreement of international reprisal. Typical of the ships and men Russia is dispatching to the Mediterranean are those shown above. At the upper left Soviet sailors are shown loading a gun aboard one of the Soviet ships. The photograph at the lower left shows the cruiser Aurora, in a photograph taken as it visited Germany some years ago. The photograph at the lower right shows another of the Soviet Union's huge cruisers.



FROM FAR CORNERS—BUT QUAKERS ALL

Those who look upon Quakers as people simply garbed with the women wearing bonnets and plain dresses, might be somewhat surprised to learn that Quakers living in many lands dress in the prevailing costume. Two fine examples of the modern Quaker are shown (above) as Arthur R. Clayton, of Canada and Syomei Wasano, Mito, Japan, chat during the Quaker conference in Philadelphia. The caption writer in Philadelphia apparently thought Canada was such a small place that we would know Mr. Clayton, for he gave his address only as Canada. Of the 300 delegates attending the conference many came from Japan, China (extremely friendly despite the current crisis), Denmark, Canada, England, India, Scotia, Africa and Austria.

'QUAKE HITS MANILLA AS REFUGEES ARRIVE

The earthquake which struck Manilla and suburbs coincident with the arrival of the first group of American refugees from Shanghai, has been likened to the famous San Francisco earthquake. It was the worst earthquake experienced by Filipinos since 1892. Shown in photograph above is the damaged pavilion of the Pandacan chapel which has stood the ravages of the elements for centuries. Its belfry collapsed when the earthquake struck.

THINK FLARES SIGHTED IN ARCTIC THOSE OF MISSING FLIERS

Search for six Russian fliers, missing on a projected transpolar flight from Moscow to the United States, moved almost 1,000 miles eastward, when the S.S. Nascopie, on the Canadian government Arctic patrol, reported sighting strange flares in the vicinity of Bebo Strait, far up in Canada's northern wastes. Hopes that the flares had been sent up by the missing men were given strength when the S.S. Aklavik, sister ship of the Nascopie on the patrol, reported it had not set off the flares. Aviation authorities were inclined to doubt the Russian aviators might be in the vicinity of Somerset Island and Scothia Penninsula, pointing out the experienced fliers would be far off their scheduled route. The map above shows, at the right, Fairbanks, Alaska, which rescue fliers have been using as a base in their search. Aklavik, Yukon, which has also been used as a searching base, is shown east of Fairbanks. The area from which the flares were reported sighted is at the extreme right of the map.

MONK TESTS REMEDIES

Destined, perhaps, to be a martyr to medical science, this little monkey lies helpless on the operating table, while Dr. Lewis Gebhart sprays zinc sulphate into his nostrils in a Stanford University laboratory test to determine the value of the solution in combating the spread of infantile paralysis. Results of the research will be sent to the medical profession now engaged in many sections of Canada and United States in fighting serious outbreaks of the malady. Convinced of its lack of harmful effects, Toronto officials recently tried the spray on 9,000 children.

LEWIS HINTS C.I.O. TO ENTER POLITICS

Shaggy-browed John L. Lewis, generalissimo of the Committee for Industrial Organization and as such the most important figure in American labor today, addresses a radio audience from a Washington studio and carries in his speech a threat to withdraw his political support from the Roosevelt administration. His remarks had Washington jittery with the fear that Lewis would lead a third party composed of militant labor and disconcerted agricultural groups in the next presidential campaign.

WEDDING CLIMAXES 12-YEAR COURTSHIP

A childhood romance, continued by mail for over a decade, came to a story-book ending, when Robert Davies, of Hamilton, Ont., returned to Dysart, North Wales, and married Miss Frazer Evelyn Parry. They are pictured here aboard the Canadian Pacific liner Montrose, as they arrived back in Montreal after the wedding. Mr. Davies came to Canada in 1926 to earn a living, but the depression hit him and he had to wait 12 years before he could return to claim his sweetheart. They were married in Bethel Welsh Presbyterian church and now they are back in Canada to make their home.

SPANISH GOVERNMENT SHIP VICTIM OF MYSTE RIOUS SUBMARINE

The Spanish government ship S.S. Armuru, carrying food for the government forces, is pictured after being beached on Tredos Island near the Dardanelles, in a sinking condition. The ship was torpedoed by a mysterious submarine, in the Mediterranean. British and French warships are at present scanning the waters of the Mediterranean, in quest of these "pirate" submarines, which have attacked more than 30 ships in the last few weeks. According to reports reaching London, the determination of General Francisco Franco, leader of the rebel forces in Spain to cut off all oil supplies from the loyalists, is allegedly the cause beneath all these mysterious submarine attacks. Incensed over two attacks on Russian merchant ships the Soviet government has sent a curt note to Italy formally charging Italian submarines with the attack on the two Soviet ships.

DEFENDING SHANGHAI

General Sun Yuan-Liang (above), commander of the Chinese 88th division, whose forces are now the spear-head of the troops resisting the Japanese invaders at Shanghai. Japanese troops at the city are meeting desperate resistance on the part of the Chinese and an estimated 70,000 Japanese soldiers said to have been pressed into the drive against the Chinese defenders.

MARRY ABOARD SHIP PRIOR TO WORLD CRUISE

Embarking on the first of two voyages they will take within the next few weeks, Elizabeth Smith Warren and Emile E. D'Africain (above) were married at Oakville, Ont., aboard the sailing yacht, Sea Fever. The young couple, together with two other married couples, will shortly begin a world cruise in the sailing ship on which they were married, which may take them from one to ten years. The six young persons will pay their way by writing, painting and taking motion pictures. Sticking to strictly nautical lines, the bride and groom together with the attendants, wore yachting costumes and after a short sail about Lake Ontario returned to land for a short honeymoon. The real honeymoon, however will begin when the Sea Fever sails down the St. Lawrence river to begin the world cruise.

SPANISH REBELS CONDEMN U.S. FLIER

Made prisoner by the insurgent armies after flying for several months for the Loyalists, Harold E. Dahl, American aviator shown at left, has been tried by court-martial and sentenced to be shot. His wife, the former Edith Rogers, sometime linger with crooner Rudy Vallee, and his mother, appealed to their American government to intervene and save the flier's life. U.S. envoy, Claude Bowers, hopes to effect an exchange for insurgent prisoners held by the Loyalists. Mrs. Dahl, pictured at right awaits the outcome of negotiations at her home in Cannes, France.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

"You're cleverer even than I, thought if you wangled that," he muttered, and swung back to her. "I never knew you thought that I knew you as a kid in Pond Inlet, Lee. Give me credit for that, Jane—" His predicament swept over him again. "Jane, won't let you down again. You won't let me down, will you? What's a thousand to Mrs. Anthony Kaye? His laugh was mirthless.

Jane shook her head, her mind was heavy with trouble. "I can't sell without telling him why I want it. Then the whole story has to come out."

"You mean so tell me that Tony holds back on you—?" Bertram began.

Jane straightened to her slender height. "Tony would give me anything I wanted," she said. "He offered to make a very large sum for my own capital—and I refused. So he pays for me—everything. He naturally gives me whatever I may need. But don't you see, he'd think it queer if suddenly I asked for a thousand dollars when I never have before. She took up her handbag from a chair. "Will two thousand help, baby?" She bent to stick at the haggard misery in his face as he rose to his feet.

"Well, it's my finish, then," he said dully. "They must have found out already. Lee's handle's white—see. I haven't dared go back to my hotel all day. Thanks for the finance. They won't get me out of this."

Jane's hand, still in her bag, touched the moonstone ring she had hidden there. Mrs. Coster's gift long ago to her father. She drew it out slowly. "I've seen you before, but your mother and my father would have married—if it hadn't been for her family. She gave him this ring. For her sake, I'll try somehow to get you money enough for your passage home by tomorrow. I don't see quickly how I can do more. But if I can—I will." She thrust the ring at him, tears blinding her eyes. "Take this back to her, Bertie."

But Bertram sank into a chair, his face in his hands. He didn't look up or move. "What's the use? There'll be after me before I can get on any boat. And—they have my address at home."

Jane slipped the ring back into her bag. She wouldn't give it to him now. "How weak and cowardly you are!" she said with a note of contempt. "But I do feel responsible in a way. If you don't want Mrs. Haycraft to, you wouldn't have met Lorna. You'd be back in Pond Inlet."

"I'm sorry," Bertram raised his head. "I'm very sorry now. Horribly decent Jane. If I hadn't been a cad about Lorna—"

Jane laid her hand on his shoulder. "Neither of us really belongs with these people. It's only because I love Tony—" Her voice trembled. "I'm so afraid of losing him. But I will do all I can. Now do pull yourself together. I must go back to my guests."

He slumped in the chair. "Don't mind me. I mean I've lost my nerve."

She stood uncertainly, listening to the sounds behind the door. Tony would wonder where she was. "You can't stay here. Tony would be furious if he found you."

"I'll get out in a moment," Bertram said heavily, and waved her away.

Jane slipped back through the door, closing it on his huddled figure. Not a movement, not a sound. Tony moved restlessly toward her from a group by the window. "Everyone's asking for you. Where have you been?"

She couldn't meet his quick searching gaze. "Nowhere," she tried to smile.

"If you're bothered about Lorna," he began, lowering his voice, "don't be." And his grey eyes were telling her things that at any other moment would have lifted her heart.

Then races and chatter closed in. Meaningless talk about Paris at this dead season—a spring-board for Deauville, Biarritz, the Riviera for those who didn't mind the heat. The lofty, air-conditioned, sandalled to the opposite end of the room. Jane watched Lorna manoeuver to join them on the balcony. Her rag head was tilted for confidences. She stood dark and cool above her, and at his answer, she lost her vivid colour. But Jane couldn't discourage Lorna for long. She moved her small darling body so that she had both coronets—her green eyes entreating and reminding him of all that there had been between them.

In spite of himself Tony felt the old call of his senses toward this girl he had been so very mad about since he could remember. He said brutally, harshly—"You're wasting your time," and then with clashing finality—"and mine."

Lorna murmured—"You'll never get over this."

"You're wrong." Tony said shortly. Jane was like a drug. Her violets soul felt oddly at rest now that he had married his lovely golden girl he was beginning to trust. The Kayes were that way. Wilful, hot, headstrong, capricious and very sure of themselves. They loved and left women, but once they married, they were faithful. And tradition had it that their wives were always impeccable.

Lorna tried again with all the seduction of her purple red lips. "I was a fool, Tony. But—we can be friends, can't we?"

"I suppose so," he said indifferently. His had never seemed so attractive, so desirable.

Lorna glanced from the balcony into the room, at Jane gracefully moving among her guests. And her heart was filled with, bitterness as she thought that she, Lorna, might have had all this if she hadn't had her head in one frantic moment. Tony's long body stirred indolently beside her. He wanted to get away.

"Well, Paris is ideal for a honeymoon," Lorna shrugged her shoulders. "I congratulate you both." With that she left, her head high. She knew that she hadn't been deceived. Whatever they were now, Jane hadn't been marrying that night in Toronto.

A frown gathered along his black brows. "Don't you think we'd better?" He gathered politely to go.

"I wouldn't dream of keeping you," Lorna airily agreed. "Have you seen Bertie Cotter anywhere around? He came with me, but I thought I saw him vanish through that door a while ago."

"You couldn't have. That's my wife's dressing room." Tony made a very definite pause. It's only because I love Tony—" Her voice trembled. "I'm so afraid of losing him. But I will do all I can. Now do pull yourself together. I must go back to my guests."

He slumped in the chair. "Don't mind me. I mean I've lost my nerve."

She stood uncertainly, listening to the sounds behind the door. Tony would wonder where she was. "You can't stay here. Tony would be furious if he found you."

"I'll get out in a moment," Bertram said heavily, and waved her away.

Jane slipped back through the door, closing it on his huddled figure. Not a movement, not a sound. Tony moved restlessly toward her from a group by the window. "Everyone's asking for you. Where have you been?"

She couldn't meet his quick searching gaze. "Nowhere," she tried to smile.

"If you're bothered about Lorna," he began, lowering his voice, "don't be." And his grey eyes were telling her things that at any other moment would have lifted her heart.

Then races and chatter closed in. Meaningless talk about Paris at this dead season—a spring-board for Deauville, Biarritz, the Riviera for those who didn't mind the heat. The lofty, air-conditioned, sandalled to the opposite end of the room. Jane watched Lorna manoeuver to join them on the balcony. Her rag head was tilted for confidences. She stood dark and cool above her, and at his answer, she lost her vivid colour. But Jane couldn't discourage Lorna for long. She moved her small darling body so that she had both coronets—her green eyes entreating and reminding him of all that there had been between them.

In spite of himself Tony felt the old call of his senses toward this girl he had been so very mad about since he could remember. He said brutally, harshly—"You're wasting your time," and then with clashing finality—"and mine."

Lorna murmured—"You'll never get over this."

"You're wrong." Tony said shortly. Jane was like a drug. Her violets soul felt oddly at rest now that he had married his lovely golden girl he was beginning to trust. The Kayes were that way. Wilful, hot, headstrong, capricious and very sure of themselves. They loved and left women, but once they married, they were faithful. And tradition had it that their wives were always impeccable.

Lorna tried again with all the seduction of her purple red lips. "I was a fool, Tony. But—we can be friends, can't we?"

"I suppose so," he said indifferently. His had never seemed so attractive, so desirable.

Lorna glanced from the balcony into the room, at Jane gracefully whose foreign voices seemed to be ever fencing.

It was late, and still new arrivals were drifting in for cups of tea or cocktails, and rolled and shook hands with strangers, her unsatisfied, thwarted. She must somehow get back into that dressing room and rout Bertram out.

Lorna's jealous green eyes were on her as she edged toward the door, finally gained and slipped through it at a moment when Tony was engaged in a further corner.

"Bertie, you really—" Then she stopped short, staring around at the small room, and then at the adjoining bedroom. They were both empty. The chair where she had left Bertram hunching in his misery had been shoved back, rumpling the rug. He must have stolen out through the bedroom.

Her fury turned slowly, instinctly to the dressing table, and her clenched hands flew to her lips.

The velvet eyes holding the necklace in her gaze. Below the Kaye emeralds was open. Their cold green eyes still glittered, but there were gaps in the priceless pattern. The long emerald earrings were missing.

CHAPTER XXV.
FREIGHT

Jane stood in shocked stillness, staring down at the velvet case now open on the dressing table. Two bare spots where the long earrings had shone in the rich pattern of the Kaye emeralds. The great necklace, brooch and bracelet burned coldly, viciously as if conscious of a sacrilege had that had despoiled them.

She remembered quite clearly that the case had been closed when she left Bertram in here—broken, desperate, her own thoughtless folly in ever having trusted him. Oh, he couldn't be!

The sibling sounds of the cocktail party in the adjoining salon reached her in gusts. Below the open window of the dressing room Paris played on in the deepening glow of the July evening. It swept over Jane with waves of horror that Tony had announced to his friends that she would appear at Mrs. Haycraft's dinner tonight in the full magnificence of these family jewels. His final irrefutable answer to any lingering doubt that she was his wife.

She sank into a chair, her golden curls crushed and damp against her finger tips. Once more the past had caught up with her when she seemed so firmly to have escaped, the lies on which she had built her happiness. For how could she distinguish her own responsibility from the wretched boy who alone knew her as Jane Carey!

"What shall I do!—what shall I do?" she moaned aloud, staring at the small case which was like a trap in all its mocking luxury. Tony, would he ruthless when he discovered the theft.

She sat forward, hands clenched between her knees. Trying to think. She couldn't avoid explanations that inevitably must involve Tony. They'd catch Bertram only too readily, could break down and talk. Even if he managed to get rid of the earrings to cover his friend, they would catch him. Then it would all come out—where and how he had known her in Pond Inlet. For she would have to protect him. She couldn't let him be disgraced and sent to prison because of old Mike. Cotter and Bertram her father had loved. Besides, it was indirectly through her that they had plunged into this dreadful tangle on her own responsibility from the wretched boy who alone knew her as Jane Carey!

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Leamington, Ont., Sept. 10 (CP)—Officials of the Citizens' Committee for Government Control have decided to accept a challenge to meet prevailing sentiment in a public debate Monday on the grounds it would end a crusade ill feeling among Leamington voters.

The challenge was issued to the committee and hearing interests by the Leamington Ratepayers' Federation.

Fort Erie, Ont., Sept. 10 (CP)—"A yearling not pushed" is the record Fort Erie convention of East International body of magicians and mystics is considering, it was said by Secretary Bob Wells at the 74th Pan Pan Pantera organization here today. Norman Nelson of Rochester, N.Y., a sleight of hand artist, reported to Wells upon his return home he found $50 missing from his pockets. Nelson did not know whether the money was lost at the convention or on route home.

Brussels, Ont., Sept. 10 (CP)—William H. Cook's 22-year-old cat may be the oldest in Canada. Jimmy is toothless and cannot eat the mice he catches.

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 10—(CP)—Add garden freaks: A carrot grown here by Harry Jeffery, is shaped like a hand. All the fingers and a thumb clearly defined.

Marthon, Calif., Sept. 10 (CP) —Merle Hart, 21, looked at the wreck of his airplane today and counted himself lucky to have escaped from it with slight bruises. The Ontario youth, student flier at Alameda, Calif., overturned his training ship three miles south of here when forced down by engine trouble yesterday. He said his father was R. S. Hart of Hamilton, Ont., Vice-President of the National Steel Company of Ontario.

Oklahoma City, Sept. 10 (AP) —Game Ranger L. E. Crawford reported to State Warden E. D. Turner an Indian had expressed resentment, when Crawford asked him to sign an easement in connection with a dam.

"He got his bow and arrow and scalping knife," Crawford reported, "and said he was going to use it on a stomach—scalp 'em—I no want dam dam dam survey."

"I did as he said."

North Manchester, Ind., Sept. 10 (AP)—Sherman Shrider exhibited the fish he caught in Lake Dora.

A large-mouth bass tried to swallow a small-mouth bass. The small-mouth stuck in the big mouth's throat. Their gills tangled. The small-mouth couldn't back out, and the big-mouth couldn't get the small-mouth down.

Then along came Shrider and flipped the helpless fish to the bank of Manchee Lake.

Fremlin Ire., K.C., Sept. 10—(CP)—In 43 Hoodlund-studded hours in the life of R. L. Holland, this happened:

His prize dog escaped from his yard, attacked a neighbor's chickens and was shot. A wagon hauling sand to Holland's yard broke down. A rabbit-hunting coon caught fire and new parts were installed. A fence backed the truck into a parked automobile. Holland himself tossed a brick through the windshield of Holland's automobile and one of his two pigs broke a leg.

POWERS HOPEFUL OF ITALY'S COOPERATION

Litvinoff Hints Patrol May Mean Recognition of Insurgents

Geneva, Sept. 11 (CP)—Great Britain and France threatened indirectly today to police Italy's share of the Mediterranean with their own ships if Premier Mussolini should refuse such an assignment to help rid the high seas of submarine pirates.

Informed sources at the Palais Wilson explained, however, Great Britain and France hoped for Italy's cooperation.

But that failing, they asserted, British and French warships would take over the high seas zone—the Tyrrhenian sea of the Italian west coast—to be assigned to Italy under the impending nine-power protocol. These ships would be empowered to sink any piracy-bent undersea craft.

Italy Views on Patrol.

Italy, alienated from the Nyon conference by Premier Stanley Baldwin's charges Italian submarines were among the lurkers responsible for the five weeks have terrorized Mediterranean shipping lanes with their torpedoes, has not had the patrol question put up to her formally.

But the countries represented at Nyon already were in agreement in principle on a plan to patrol the Mediterranean by patrolling warships and aircraft of several nations, it was revealed. This plan would be limited to all governments participating at Nyon who were considered to have the greatest world interests.

agreed to by tonight.

Recognition of Insurgents.

Hard reports from Spain, new problem in charges by Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Foreign Commissar and delegate to Nyon, that the patrol would be equivalent to recognition of the Spanish Insurgents as belligerents under international law.

Litvinoff raised this point in private conversation last night, at the same time expressing fear the patrol as planned might not be sufficiently compact.

If Italy takes part in the police plan to protect international shipping, British and French warships would cover the western Mediterranean while the remaining zones would be assigned to other nations.

Nyon Plan Will Collaborate.

(Mussolini's mouthpiece, Il Popolo D'Italia of Milan, said today that Italy stands ready to collaborate in efforts to quiet the troubled Mediterranean. The newspaper insisted, however, that the 27-nation Spanish non-intervention committee in London was better qualified with submarine piracy than the Nyon gathering).

Uncertainty continued, however, over Italy's response to the invitation to join the Nyon conference. Count Ciano's statement yesterday arranged a power. "The case is in your conference's lips."

Strike Rash If Threat Carried Out.

His denunciation of the phantom submarine attacks two of which sank Soviet merchantmen was a thinly-veiled attack on Italy and a hint that Russia would act independently if they were not halted by the patrol plans.

Italy promised to strike back if Russia carried out the implied threat against Italy. This would be retaliation with which he would "not be afraid," said a high official in Rome).

Before facing the full force of Chilean fire, officials said, rebel troops captured Llanchen, across the river from Antung, and then built a pontoon bridge across the Machang River. Air raiders had reduced the town practically to ruins as the Japanese moved forward.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. E. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

"I pray thee, put in yonder port, for I fear a hurricane."

And well might the old sailor of the Spanish Main ask the skipper to seek port for the greatest winds on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts are hurricane winds. Born in great whirling storms of tropical origin, called hurricanes or tropical cyclones, sometimes come far north of the Atlantic coast accompanied by rain and snow. And sometimes, but very infrequently, they travel north up the Mississippi valley. But they never travel north by land or by sea they change their character and lose some of their terrific ferocity. This month and next marks their greatest frequency, but in some years we are remarkably free of them.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—Synopsis: A fairly deep depression is moving eastward across the Great Lakes and another disturbance of considerable intensity centred off the middle Atlantic coast, is moving northward, while pressure is high over the western provinces and a large portion of the western states. Moderate to heavy showers and local thunderstorms have occurred in most districts of Ontario and light to moderate showers in some parts of Quebec and Manitoba. It has been fair and moderately warm in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Lake Superior—Fresh northerly winds; partly cloudy and cool with scattered showers. Sunday, moderate north and northwest winds; partly cloudy and quite cool.

Manitoba—Fair and cool. Sunday, fair and becoming a little warmer.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair today and Sunday; not much change in temperature.

CHICAGO CHILDREN TO GET SCHOOLING BY PAPERS, RADIO

Paralysis Closes Schools Until Oct. 1—Course Will be a 'Refresher'

WILL BE EXAMINED

Chicago, Sept. 11 (AP)— More than 300,000 elementary school pupils barred from classrooms by an outbreak of infantile paralysis will get their schooling by radio and newspaper starting next Monday.

The novel educational experiment was planned by Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, when it became likely the schools might not be reopened until October 1st, because of the increase in paralysis cases. They were originally scheduled to open Sept. 7.

Each day newspapers will publish material to guide students in their classes by radio. A staff of school teachers will outline the "home work" in daily one and 15-minute periods over the air five days each week.

Miss Lillian M. Tobin, in charge of Radio Curriculum, said the work in general will be a recapitulation of studies undertaken in the final period of the year's work. The course will be a "refresher" so that students may not lose grasp their work when schools reopen.

Students were warned the experiment is not to empty pleasure. There will be examinations on the material covered when schools reopen.

MACHANG FALLS TO JAPANESE

Marks Progress Into Control of Hopeh Province

Peiping, Sept. 11 (AP)—Japanese military authorities today announced the fall of Machang, 3 miles south of Tientsin, in their advancing Japanese war machine thrust into new important territory.

The fall of the city ended a 24-hour battle in which two Chinese regiments and remnants of the 29th army resisted Japan's march southward, Japanese tanks drenched the entire battle area.

By the conquering of rail lines from Tientsin and a waterway from the seaport Tsiku, Machang was another step toward complete occupation of southern Hopeh Province, backing up the wide swath cut through central Hopeh by Japanese military forces.

Air raids and intensive artillery bombardments preceded the final attack before either side was able to make decisive progress.

ROWE PROMISES AID TO FARMERS

Says His Aim to Improve Farm Products Grades

By C. P. Staff Writer

Welland, Ont., Sept. 11 (CP)—Ontario agriculturists today were promised support from Dr. Earl George, Conservative leader, who declared his agricultural policy if elected at the October 4 voting would be to improve farm products grades and seek a marketing outlet for the producers.

Key point in his plan, he told a Welland political meeting last night, would be to re-open Ontario House to the public and the Canadian National Exhibition government building, both closed by the Liberal regime which came into power in 1934, the Rowe's agricultural policy was propounded in two addresses yesterday, one at Allaston and one in Welland.

Says Liberal Policy Shifting

In his Welland address, he charged Premier Hepburn with adopting a Liberal policy in regards to Labor, Separate Schools and agriculture. For a "square deal" to both public and Separate School supporters was promised by Mr. Rowe.

"I'll never tell politicians differences in the dust for any political purpose," he said in his Allaston address. "My policy is the same as before I became leader of the Conservative party, and it will be the same after I am premier."

Tuberculosis prevailed for more than fifty years under the previous regimes. When Premier Hepburn attained power "he threw the school question into politics, and I'll take it out of politics."

Hepburn Says He Knows of No Letters on Gallonage Tax

By C. P. Staff Writer.

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 11 (CP)—Development of Canada iron ore mines today found a staunch supporter in Premier Mitchell Hepburn who saw in the troubled European situation a threat of a shortage to the Canadian iron industry.

In an address to a Sudbury political gathering last night, he mentioned the possibility of another world war. Scrap iron was being shipped to Japan and Germany in huge quantities which produced the shortage danger. Conservative Leader Earl Rowe attacked the bounty placed on iron ore at the last session of the legislature although he had advocated the same step.

Mines Mines and Liquor Policy.

Mr. Hepburn, who speaks at Little Current this afternoon and at Sturgeon River tonight, said the Conservative leader catered to prohibition sentiment without committing himself in any change in liquor laws. Mr. Hepburn reported the government which put the present liquor act into effect and was apparently willing to let it stand. He cited the restaurants which the Liberal Government opened.

Improvement in Ontario's financial situation was claimed. Mr. Hepburn said the government inherited funded debt of $814,000,000 and $100,000,000 in unpaid bills and overdrafts. Despite this, his administration paid relief costs and other charges last year out of current revenue and produced a surplus of more than $9,000,000.

JAPANESE USE HEAVIEST GUNS NEAR KIANGWAN

Aerial And Artillery Bombardment Launched by Japanese

OFFENSIVE FORECAST

Nantao Civilian Section Bombed by Japanese Airmen

Shanghai, Sept. 11 (AP)—Japan's expeditionary forces today launched aerial and artillery bombardment of Chinese troop concentrations, apparently in preparation for a general offensive against the defenders of Shanghai.

Japanese planes and naval guns concentrated on the key Woosung forts at the junction of the Yangtze and Whangpoo rivers and outranged China's guns.

The attack spread along a wide front from Woosung to Liuho, far up the Yangtze, and a broad section inland came within the range of heavy firing. Heavy casualties were believed to have been inflicted on the Chinese forces.

Heavy Guns Used.

The heaviest guns yet brought into action shelled the powerfully held Chinese positions around Kiangwan, the international recreation centre on Shanghai's northernmost outskirts.

There a Japanese land attack rolled toward the Chinese lines in an early morning attempt to gain important territory, from the defenders. Japanese authorities admitted however that the Chinese were putting up valiant resistance.

Japanese planes swooped over war scarred Shanghai and dropped bombs on the Nantao civilian district, killing and wounding an undetermined number of Chinese, principally women and children. The Chapei native quarter also suffered from Japanese aerial bombs.

Threats of Cholera.

Across the river at Pootung Japanese warships bombarded the Chinese artillery emplacements that have prevented attempts of the Japanese troops in the heart of Greater Shanghai.

Shanghai welcomed rain that broke the heat and a long drought. Chinese said usual Septembers rains were long overdue, and asserted they would greatly hamper the Japanese drive.

Threat of disease remained in Shanghai, where authorities declared that more than 200 Chinese had been segregated suspected of cholera and that 20 new cases a day were being discovered.

BRITISH OIL TANKER IS CAPTURED

London, Sept. 11—British dispatches from Palma, Mallorca, said the insurgent cruiser Canarias captured the British tanker Romford, carrying a cargo of oil to a Spanish government port.

The Romford, which formerly was in the Soviet fleet under registration, is a 5,545 ton vessel. She left Tuapse, Russia, Aug. 31 and was believed to be the same ship attacked by an unidentified airplane 20 miles off Barcelona on Sept. 26.

FOOD CONTROLLER DECLARES RESERVE OF FOOD NEEDED

J. R. Clynes Publishes Memoirs of The Great War

FOOD IN WAR TIME

Controller During Great War is Pessimistic as to Armaments

(By Pat Usher)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 11—(CP Cable)—J. R. Clynes, Food Controller of Great Britain during the war, urges the necessity of accumulating reserves of food in the country as a defence measure in the event of "decades" the first volume of which was published today.

Unless vast quantities of emergency rations are stored throughout the country, Britain would be forced into submission within the first month or two of a war, declared the labor politician who served as Home Secretary in the last Labor government.

Faith Broken With Dead

Pessimistic of the result of mounting armaments, Clynes wrote: "The armaments race was won in 1918. Disarmament grinned at the finishing point . . . we won the race. God help us now, with millions in misery, with festering slums and incredible fantastic debts, we are lining up in grisly price, ready for the start of a race yet more terrible than the last. The starter's fear is already grimacing with upraised pistol . . . The world has broken faith with the war dead, and now God help the world".

Describing the British of his youth, Clynes said he was convinced the country was nearer to complete social revolution than at any other period of modern history. "Not that there is any revolutionary," he said. At present, he added, the most loyal class is the working class.

Picture of King George Fifth

Clynes gives a picture of a meeting of the first Labor Cabinet with King George V in 1924. "We were all quite clear who was kindness and sympathy itself," he said. "I'll never forget his words to me. 'The immediate future of my people and their whole happiness are in your hands, gentlemen. They will depend upon your prudence and sagacity'."

The Labor leader wrote of George VI as "a democratic monarch, known to me in the urgent need for reforms for the benefit of the more unhappy of his subjects".

Mrs. Hall's husband, Frederick, a Canadian, was permitted to enter the United States.

Torrential Rain Ties Up Traffic in Sudbury District

Creeks Cause Serious Flooding in City of Sudbury

BUSES MAROONED

Sudbury, Ont., Sept. 11 (CP)—Rail, highway and Airect traffic in the Sudbury district was at a standstill early today after a night of torrential rain. The fall was measured at 3.36 inches in the 24 hours that flood over known here.

Street railway traffic to Copper Cliff was suspended as result of two serious washouts and highway buses were marooned. Numerous other less minor washouts reported on all district roads. Power service in Sudbury and Coniston was disrupted when power cables were short circuited.

Nolin and Junction Creeks, winding through the main section of Sudbury, were responsible for serious flood conditions in the city.

Many downtown stores had flooded basements and St. Joseph's Hospital was almost isolated.

The heavy rainfall closely followed one of the most severe electrical storms of the season the previous night.

Water was reported to have backed up into the Bellevue Park area at Lake Ramsay where a new intake channel is under construction and caused considerable trouble.

Buses Halted.

Blocked catch basins were responsible for many feet of water in Copper Cliff and near Douglas street and the street railway lines in the Copper Cliff-Coniston suspended washouts.

Buses on the Sudbury-Creighton Mine run were purposed by flood waters in their garage and service will be stopped until perhaps late this afternoon.

Little material damage was reported from the neighboring towns of Capreol, Chelmsford and Onaping with the exception of numerous

DRIVER RETURNS TO FIND CAR ON FIRE

Possible serious damage if not the total destruction of his automobile parked on Front Street was averted by the thoughtfulness of Clerk Ray Weigh, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto shortly after six o'clock last night.

Approaching the vehicle after closing the door McVeigh noticed the interior of the car filled with smoke. Closer inspection revealed a hole five inches in diameter burning in the seat cushion of the back seat. Had smouldering fire glowed around the edges of the hole between the cloud of flame would have resulted. Hurriedly driving the car to a nearby garage, McVeigh extinguished the blaze. It is thought a careless smoker flipped the burning end of his cigarette through the open rear window of the car as he was passing.

INDIAN ENTERTAINS MARKET CROWD WITH ROPE TRICKS

A whirling rope cleverly manipulated by the hands of a bronzed Indian described fantastic figures early this morning at the city market, surrounded by a group of children and early morning marketers. Only one performed roping feats that drew the applause of his onlookers.

Then as silently and swiftly as he had appeared the bronzed one folded up his lasso and disappeared in the crowd.

Annual Banquet Is Held by Minerva Chapter

The annual get-together banquet of Minerva Chapter O.E.S. for members, their families and friends was a splendid success in the Moose Auditorium last evening. The long tables were graced with baskets and vases of colorful flowers. Flowers, and the meal, under her enjoyed the sumptuous supper.

With Lee Hall presiding, Rev. Allan Pepper as toastmaster, a very interesting toast list was presented, by the three bishops and three proposed the toast to the King. The toast to the Queen was proposed by Mrs. Virginia Nugent, past matron, who was responded to by Mrs. Effie Naylor, Grand Chaplain. toast to the visitors was proposed by Mrs. Ada Hubbard, Associate Matron, and responded to by Mr. Harvey Stewart of Unity Chapter, Toronto.

Mrs. Reed, Worthy Matron extended a welcome to visiting members and visitors. Community singing led by Mrs. Fred Johnson, and Mr. Russell Wotten, the latter acting as pianist for the evening. Mrs. Ada Hubbard proposed a vote of thanks to the ladies who served the banquet, after which the Chapter Meeting was held.

Car Reported Stolen At Marysville

While the residents were sleeping robbers entered the garage at the home of John Meagher, Marysville, and stole a Chevrolet coupe sometime after last midnight. The vehicle, a 1937 model coach, bearing was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 79865. The theft was reported to the Provincial Policeman Sam Ervine today, who upon his investigation learned that the Meagher family had heard slight disturbance in the vicinity of their home during the night, but believed the persons moving about to be friendly neighbors and did not arise to investigate.

POLICE BLOTTER

Minor cases of theft have been noted previously in Belleville and vicinity of recent date and local and provincial police have met with considerable success in the matter of the recovery of some of the goods.

A tire, tube and rim, stolen from the automobile of Mr. Johnson, Dundas Street, recently, was recovered by local police abandoned near the scene of the theft yesterday. The articles were returned to their owner today.

Detective Fred Izard reported the finding of a green plush motor rug and two cushions, one black leatherette and the other colored, in the vicinity of Murray Terrace yesterday. The articles were abandoned beneath a clump of bushes, but no reports of such goods having been stolen in this vicinity have, as yet, been received by the authorities. In the meantime the articles are in the custody of the police.

Wilfred Flagler, 244 Bleecker Ave., reported the theft of a rug later grill from his motor car. The valuable had been taken from the Flagler driveway last night, the grill having been removed between the hours of midnight and early today.

Found sleeping beneath a clump of bushes along the bank of the Moira River, George Woodman, of this city, was arrested yesterday on a charge of intoxication. Woodman appeared before H. B. Wright, local Justice of the Peace and was remanded to the cells of the county jail over the week-end.

While purchasing groceries in a nearby corner grocery store, George Barnett, 48 Station Street, informed the police that his child's coaster wagon was stolen last evening. Mr. Barnett had left same using the wagon to transport his purchase of groceries home. The unfortunate parent, on leaving store, Mr. Barnett reported, was the fact he had to carry his groceries home. The theft of the wagon is believed to have been the prank of a juvenile. Six coasters were reported stolen at the police station last night.

While backing her motor car out from the east curb on Front Street yesterday, a lady motorist, clothed with a hydrant. The car front was damaged when it struck the protruding object and the hydrant. The driver reported the case.

Obituary

LATE JOHN STOKES (Tweed)

Tweed (Special)—The funeral of John Stokes, whose tragic death last cast a pall of gloom over the entire community, was held this afternoon from his home on McShannon Street, Thursday afternoon, to Tweed Cemetery, Tweed. Rev. W. A. Sumter of Madoc, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, officiated at the obsequies.

Mr. Stokes, who was in his 54th. year, met his death while engaged in repairing the Bell Telephone line near Thurlbear. He grasped a supposedly "dead wire" which was carrying 2300 volts and was electrocuted. Local and district Hydro employees worked for several hours in the hope that life might not be extinct. Finally all hope was abandoned when the unfortunate man was pronounced dead by the attending doctor, Dr. M. B. Geary, Madoc. Deceased leaves Mrs. J. J. Robertson, Belleville, and Mrs. Frederick Hall of Tweed.

The late John Foster Stokes was born in Prince Edward County, son of the late John Stokes, Sr., and Sarah Brooks. As a young man he spent in Thomasburg district, from which place he went to Hastings County where he was engaged in the lumbering trade for many years. He served overseas in the Fourth Division during the war. On his return he was employed with the late Houston Co. in Tweed. Later he was engaged with the Hydro Commission to Belleville, returning to Tweed in 1931 to enter the employ of the Tweed Hydro.

Fifteen years ago he was married to Miss Edwina Lee Ormsby, of Edinburgh, Scotland, who with a daughter, Jean, survives. Besides one brother, George H. Stokes, former sheriff of Hastings County, also survives.

The funeral was under the direction of Tweed Army and Navy Veterans of which the deceased was a member, with Comrade Fennel, G. E. Bowdby, in charge. As the flag-draped coffin was lowered to the grave, the "Last Post" was sounded. The coffin was almost entirely obscured by floral tributes from various organizations to which the deceased belonged as well as from individuals.

Pall bearers were Clarence Graham, Clarence Moon, T. S. Rath, D. D. Sharpe, Fred Johnson, Detroit, and W. J. Finley, Trenton.

The flower bearers were William Dunfield, Arthur Conger, Lorenzo Bowdby, Bd. Rath, W. J. Woods, Roy Rath, W. J. Austin, Ivan Hazelton, Tom Beatty, Ernest Cronkwright, J. L. McGowan, and E. E. Way.

Those in attendance from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Helen Henry, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Austin, Port Hope; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McKibbon, Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Hazelton, Mr. and Mrs. ohn Houston, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Finley, Trenton.

JOHN E. WOOD

After an illness of three weeks' duration John Everett Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lennard Wood, 57 Hamilton Street, passed away this Saturday morning, Sept. 11th, in his 19th. month.

Besides his parents he leaves seven brothers and two sisters. The family will receive the sympathy of their friends in their bereavements.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. JANE McCANN

Campbellford, Sept. 11 — The death occurred suddenly at her home Tuesday morning of Mrs. Jane McCann at the age of 84 years. Her late husband, Joseph O'Brien, Mrs. McCann, who was in her seventy-fourth year is survived by one sister, Mrs. Jane O'Brien of town and three brothers, Dr. James O'Brien of Peterborough and John and Joseph, both of Madoc. She was predeceased by her husband several years ago.

MISS MARGARET BYRNE

Friends in this city will regret to learn of the death of Miss Margaret Byrne, which occurred on Friday, Sept. 10th, at the residence of her sister, William V. Byrne, 150 Ronton Rd. Toronto.

The late Miss Byrne was a highly esteemed resident of this city for many years and resided at 71 Order Street. She had been visiting at Toronto for some time. In religion she was a devout member of St. Michael's Church in that city.

Interment will be made here. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

BIG PROGRAM IS PLANNED

Armistice Night Promises to be Big Event Here

Armistice Night, observed annually by returned war veterans' units throughout the Dominion on Nov. 11th, is expected to be one of the most memorable on record in this city on that date, according to plans already formulated by executive of local Branch 201, Army and Navy Veterans in Canada.

Beloved Padre of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and one of the most distinguished soldiers in annals of the Corps, Canon Scott, of Quebec will be chief speaker at the gathering in the local Armouries, expected to be attended by veterans from throughout this central district. It was announced at a meeting of the executive meeting of the Branch held last evening.

Plans are not limited to the Armistice Night Program. Instead of making it solely "Armistice Night", it will be a reunion of war veterans from the Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward. Veterans will spend the day and evening have been left to the Army and Navy Veterans, in-Belleville as in previous years. Full committees have been appointed and has been assured, however.

Committees named out of the city will be undertaken in the two counties. Trenton Canadian Legion will hold him for the day as well as Picton will be invited to be present. Officers of the Canadian Air Force Base at Trenton and Canadian Legion will be developed to have the Air Force Band also present.

Both World Veterans, and possibly many more are expected to attend the gathering. Arrangements and preparations for the handling of a record crowd are being made by the committees named, consisting of the executive of the Army and Navy Veterans.

A promise that he would be here for Armistice Night, district and local veterans has been secured from Canon Scott following an invitation sent some days ago by secretary of the unit, James Lemoby.

Armistice Night will be held at the Canotaph following a full parade of veterans to that spot. Services there will be in charge of the Belleville Ministerial Association.

ASSAULT CHARGES HEARD IN COURT

Two Dismissed And Judgement Reserved in One

His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., reserved judgment until Monday's police court session against Raymond Bailey, 22-year-old Foini Anne resident, who appeared in court yesterday charged with assaulting Burns, Charlton, a neighbour, on September 2nd. Similar charges laid against George Bailey, a brother, and Charles Bailey, the father of the former two, resulted in His Worship dismissing the latter two charges and reserving judgment in the case.

The cases were a result of alleged altercations which followed a motor crash in Foini Anne on Sept. 2nd, when a motor car driven by Raymond Bailey is said to have been implicated in an accident with a lad. Much evidence was submitted in a police court hearing that is the greater part of yesterday. Mr. Frank Cushing, local barrister, represented the Bailey boys, Crown Attorney T. D. Donnan, K. C., conducted the prosecution.

During the course of the evidence Raymond Bailey admitted in open court he had struck Mr. Charlton, but added he had been attacked by Mr. Charlton, following an argument relative to the accident. He told him the accident was none of his concern and to keep out of the matter. He swore at and cursed him, he said, but I warded off the blows and then close with him struck him once in self-defence," he stated. Evidence given by Charles Bailey, the brother, denied striking Charlton, claiming he merely acted as spectator during the argument, while Charles Bailey, the father from Toronto of the names of the two, the young men and women to whom I.O.D.E. bursaries have been awarded this year was of particular significance because it marked the conclusion of this part of the Order's War Memorial established in 1920, at that date it was calculated that children of soldiers killed overseas would be too old to go to college, consequently a sum of the War Memorial fund was set aside to be used over that period, both principal and interest, of which, with the awards this year the amount of $250,251.00 has been expended.

Since the inception of this part of the fund 225 young men and women have availed themselves of the opportunity to attend the various Canadian Universities. Included among the seventeen final awards in the fund made this year, is the name of Walter Hilton, 22, Belleville, son of Private Charles Hilton, who died in the service.

Young Hilton, it will be remembered, graduated from Belleville Collegiate Institute and last year attended Western University at London.

A star athlete here, he made a name for himself in his new Alma Mater starring in track and field, basketball and football. Hilton was forced to finance himself on the Western U. gridiron last fall, making a name for himself in the Mustang year, and being a standout in the many battles fought against the best teams of other Canadian universities.

Thirsty Horses And Fountains

It's getting harder and more difficult for Old Dobbin to get a drink in the city. A few years ago there were horse troughs at handy intervals within the limits where fresh water from the city system bubbled endlessly for thirsty animals, but an advancing age has resulted in their almost complete disappearance until today but one is left, an iron trough near the corner of St. Paul and South Front Streets, one of the most popular spots in the city for thirsty horses hauling heavy coal carts, and smaller bread and other delivery wagons alike.

Though the need during the summer months is greatest, there seems to be no great, sweltering days in August and the condition which was acute, it is declared by more humane drivers who management of Beamish Soft for cooling mangled and brief rest.

Gasoline service station employes during the hotter period, however, limited the breach bobby. Even without orders from head offices, pails were secured and every advantage of cool drivers for the watering of their horses at the stations. But the service was restricted further. In some instances a length of hose was available from handy tap but the pail which the patient horse be thoroughly drenched, ending for a brief period at least, the nuisance of flies and heat.

Police Court At Trenton

Trenton, Sept. 11.—The local court session was unusually lengthy yesterday afternoon owing to the number of domestic cases on the docket. After the family rows were straightened an indecent assault charge was dealt with. The magistrate remanded the man charged with the serious offence till Friday for sentence. In the meantime he will spend his time in the county jail.

Bruce Graham charged with criminal negligence and reckless driving was granted a week's adjournment. Frank Kelman of Toronto was assessed $23.75 for operating a motor vehicle in a manner dangerous to the public. A police officer identified Kelman was the driver of a car that crashed into the west end of the bridge on Thursday afternoon, and damaged the bridge to the extent of $39.50. Kelman made restitution also and his permit was suspended for five days.

Harold Klein of Toronto paid $12.25 for reckless driving on the King's highway. His permit was cancelled one day.

G. Willis, Toronto, was found guilty of travelling seventy miles per hour on highway No. 2 and was assessed $12.25. David Dickie of Oshawa pleaded guilty to a charge of driving in a dangerous manner and was fined $12.25 and his permit suspended two days. John Vladyris of Trenton admitted being drunk and was fined $12.25. Magistrate R. J. Butler presided and the Crown Attorney protected the government's interests.

"TREAT 'EM RIGHT"

"DAVE," said Mr. Picobac, addressing the manager of Essex Centre's Gas Pump and Parlour Car Garage, "these motor trailers are getting to be quite a thing. I was sitting on my verandah smoking my pipe and thinking of nothing in particular, and I counted three of them go by."

"There's about half a million of them in the States," said Dave. "If this town was up to date we'd have a trailer city annex here before now."

"You're right," said Mr. Picobac, savouring his pipe, "catering to tourists is one of our biggest industries. We ought to do everything we can to attract 'em and make 'em want to come back here."

"I'll say so," opined Dave. "They're a big help to my business."

"I'm doing my part," continued Mr. Picobac, "I tell 'em all about the good Burley tobacco we grow down here, and then I do 'em the favour of giving 'em a smoke of Picobac. Every man-jack agrees with me that Picobac is a mild, cool, sweet smoke in a pipe."

Picobac is the pick of Canada's Burley crop, grown in sunny, southern Ontario, barn-cured and matured for three years in the wood.

ward Red. An insured Spanish bombing aeroplane was blamed in the instance. Map indicates where recent submarine raids have taken place; the dates and distances clearly show that one submarine is credited to rebel Gen. Franco could not have made all the attacks.

THE ROAD

New York Times has a criticism 'Americans on great holiday weekends which might apply to Canadians as well. The editor uses the title "When Boorishness Kills", to point the moral that every one knows when a holiday comes at a weekend, there is going to be accident after accident with dead and injured. Here are some of the words of the Times writer and Canadians may apply them as they see fit on our roads:

"Present-day motoring has, in fact, some of the aspects of war. Holidays represent its major offensives, ordinary days its trench raids and its sniping.

"The improvement of cars and highways has brought changes comparable with those appearing in the so-called art of war. Smoother and better-graded road surfaces, better brakes, tires and steering gear, greater stability in the car itself have strengthened what might be called the defensive. At the same time improved roads and quieter, more powerful, more easily handled automobiles have reinforced what might be called the attack. Engineering alone cannot solve this problem. It can introduce new safety factors, but a reckless minority of drivers, indifferent to the rights of others, soon overtakes them. Highways capable of carrying a properly driven motor car with reasonable safety at a speed of a hundred miles an hour or more are practicable. But unless our driving habits change such highways would mean more and increasingly terrible accidents.

"The encouraging feature in the situation is that communities which have acted with sufficient determination have been able to cut their automobile death rates almost miraculously. The upward trend in accidents has passed, indeed, from congested areas, where traffic is well regulated, to the open country, which cannot be so well policed. The once quiet, idyllic countryside becomes yearly more dangerous to travelers. Parkways with widely separated lanes, detours round cities and other devices are useful but they do not eliminate the fool, the boor, and—the word is not too strong for a driver who commits such offenses as passing at full speed on a blind curve—the criminal.

"To observers who can look back over two or three decades of motoring it must seem that what we most urgently need is a return to the old code of road courtesy, voluntarily accepted by all motorists of good-will, sternly enforced upon all others. If drivers behaved as considerately when behind the wheel as they do under most other circumstances the automobile death rate could be whittled to a fraction of its present proportions. On the whole, Americans are a good-natured and kindly people. It is only when they get a toe on an accelerator that a certain number of them seem to revert to barbarism. No other name, certainly, can be given to some of the dangerously mad maniacs one witnesses every day on crowded highways.

"Not so long ago, when cars were poorer and fewer and roads worse, it was customary to signal turns and stops, to give way readily—in short, to show consideration for the other fellow. Nowadays a decreasing number of drivers bother about these amenities, except when under the eye of a traffic officer. Some seem to regard them as evidences of an unmanly weakness.

"Enforcement can and should be tightened to take care of this situation, and public opinion should back severer penalties for nonobservance: a two-dollar fine for an act which might cause a fatal accident is absurd. As for the ordinary, well-intentioned motorist, he can help by bringing to the road a little more of the manner of the drawing room. Common politeness will save lives."

ON THE OLD MEDITERRANEAN

The old Mediterranean, avenue of trade for classical Rome, when the ancestors of many Italians as Romans controlled the ancient word and for Venice in the Middle Ages when it held the world's trade, is again the centre of dispute all over the same old subject trade—at this time, trade with the Valencia government. Submarines a product of this day, roam this sea, one or two of them as pirates attacking ships of Britain and France and other nations have promised to put an end to this preying on commerce for mere destruction. There are threats that submarines known to be annoying or threatening shipping will be fired upon or destroyed with bombs by ships of nations, ships of which have suffered loss or destruction at the hands of the sea-pirates.

Meanwhile a conference freighted with vast possibilities is being held by nine nations which seek to rid the sea of the menace of the submarines which are attacking shipping.

There has been much talk all along for some years, there have been threats but peace has been unbroken but for lesser wars and the main pieces of strife, the Ethiopian, Manchurian and Chinese affairs.

It is to be noted today that Britain is speaking with a very firm and fair mind. Strong and guarded, she speaks with an authority which is being regarded. And she has in France a very steady ally in this time of testing.

There is belief held in some quarters that when the Mediterranean patrol is established the submarine menace will disappear. However Russia has spoken very bluntly about a certain power. What may come of her commissar's words remains to be seen.

WHY NOT DO IT NOW?

I like to read about Jack Miner
As each author sings his song;
But Jack is getting older now
And can't stay with us long.

I, too, have packed that deadly gun,
As Jack did in days of yore;
But I got "Kingsville religion"
And don't do it any more.

We love to sing of good old Miner
And the birds about his home;
But the lesson that he taught us—
Have you got that through your dome?

Do you still pack that old shotgun,
And spin your hunting lies?
Are you still a brainless game hog,
Shooting everything that flies?

And what about that boy of yours,
With that dangerous twenty-two?
Have you taught him game protection,
As each father ought to do?

Jack Miner had to make that pond
For those wild geese nd ducks;
And it cost him days of labor
And several hundred "bucks".

Yet, we have hundreds of Canadians
Who own a pond or farm,
Where they could prevent all shooting
And protect our game from harm.

So, you who read this rhyme of mine,
If you own a farm or pond,
In honor of Jack, make it a game preserve,
Ere he heads for the great beyond.

SMITHFIELD IS A SMALL COMMUNITY JUST WEST OF TRENTON, a railway station, general store, a few houses and not much more, but its sons and daughters have gone out into the world and made their mark in a big way—and as an evidence how big they are they have never forgotten Smithfield, pointing with pride to the place that gave them birth. Their love of Smithfield has been shown in various ways, the latest being a bequest of two thousand dollars to be used to furnish the new parsonage now being constructed through the generosity of a Smithfield Old Boy now an executive in the International Nickel Company. The two thousand dollars gift was presented in memory of the late Dr. W. McAuley, of Copper Cliff, by his sister Miss I. McAuley, of London, Ontario, who was born in the original parsonage at Smithfield, her father being pastor at the time. Strange how absent sons and daughters remember the village parsonage. Some weeks ago we visited the village of Enniskillen, in Durham county, we believe, and commenting upon the beautiful parsonage near the village church, was told that it had been presented by an Enniskillen Old Boy who gone out into the world and made good in a big way in the industrial world. Could there be a worthier deed, contributing to the comfort and well being of the underpaid rural minister who is said to work twice as hard as his city brothers for less than half the emolument? Many a hard-worked minister on a country circuit deserves the title "Man of God" if anybody does.

The baseball match between the Printers and the Clothiers was not very fast. It took two hours to play five innings and then the score stood 12 to 10 in favor of the Printers. If either team was stronger in one way than another it was their erratic throwing of the ball. Macdiarmid hammered the ball as though he were locking up the Ontario chases, and Bobby Wilson seemed in a hurry to get to press. The Clothiers tried seven pitchers and three catchers, but none of them have been signed for next season. Joe Board of Hamilton umpired the game and his decisions were never questioned, although it was whispered he had been offered a pair of one dollar and a half pants to fix the game for the Clothiers. He had a pair with him and could not be altured into the path of dishonesty. The following composed the teams: Printers—Black, Macdiarmid, Wilson, LaPalm, Leonard, Ferguson, Dunn, McCoy and Stevenson. Clothiers — Jack Burns, Symons, McGinnis, Gillies, J. Byrnes, Delair, Fahey, Pagee and Meagher.

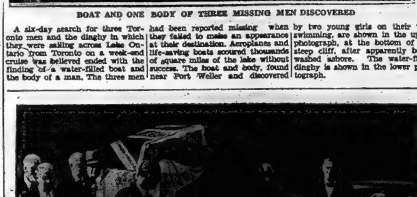
Financial Policy.

The public received the benefit of this financial policy through reduced taxation and building of roads paid for by revenue. The Liberal government increased the provincial revenues by $20,000,000 a year, "and the only new tax we imposed was the provincial income tax."

"I don't think even Mr. Rowe will have the courage to say he will abolish that. He rocks the boat sometimes but he seldom falls out."

Iron Ore Policy.



When Mr. Hepburn mentioned the government's iron ore policy he said that in the rush for new mines so much iron was being shipped out of Canada and the United States that the country across the border appointed a commission to seek a way of checking scrap iron exports. Then Ontario acted.

Technical advisors were brought in and they proposed a bonus of two cents a unit to encourage development of ores in Northern Ontario. The government acted on this advice and Mr. Hepburn said a great iron mine was now being developed north of Sault Ste. Marie.

BOAT AND ONE BODY OF THREE MISSING MEN DISCOVERED

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

It could only have been Bertram, Jane thought desperately. No professional thief would have struck part of such a treasure. It was all so clear that in a moment of frantic temptation, not believing Jane would help him, he had slipped up the stairs and got out through the bedroom. To go where? To do what with jewels that had belonged to the Kaye since the time of Napoleon. What wild notion was in his head?

Jane rose with a swift movement of her tall, slender body. She must find him. Save him. But she didn't know where to look for him to begin. And there were guests still lingering on. Tony would wonder where she was.

The door of the dressing room sprang open. Jane had reached the bedroom, her mind whirling as she tried to plan. At the same moment she swung around to find Lorna standing with the rapid inquisitive glance of a bird.

"Am I interrupting anything?" Lorna's green eyes pried. "I've been hunting everywhere for Bertie Cotter. I thought I saw him come in here."

"No, you didn't." Jane moved instinctively to block the door to the dressing table. Too late.

Lorna caught her arm and her roving gaze fell upon the emeralds blazing against white velvet. The very sight of them maddened her. They should have been hers, just as Tony Kaye should have been hers. And the afternoon had brought her many disappointments. Tony's cool grey eyes had denied the appeal of her small alluring body. Her lips had met his in vain pique. She had lost him to this pale white and cold girl.

"Oh, the beauties!" It was a short, pinched cry of envy. Lorna dipped the red fingers around Jane who tried to close the case. "Isn't it frightful to think of the risk you leave them out? I mean anyone might—"

"Tony got them from the safe because I'm wearing them this night." Jane said it coldly. Her nerves were jangling.

"But are there are the earrings?" Lorna stared greedily down. "Yours are missing, aren't they? Tony's mother wearing them."

Jane lost her patience. "Is it any business of yours?" She snapped the case, snapped it shut and slid it into a drawer of the dressing table. Then she turned to face Lorna.

Lorna's small pointed face roused to curiosity and suspicion. "Of course I suppose it isn't my business," she said, and said slowly. "Though you needn't be so very suspicious about it. Don't forget, Tony wanted to marry me."

"Yes, but he didn't." Jane faced her with a spirit of exasperation. "I don't feel like discussing that or anything else just now. Could you mind leaving me?"

"It's very queer." Lorna went on, raising her voice. "Your manner and—well, lots of other things. You see, I'm quite sure Bertie was in here with you. And he hasn't come back to the dance. There's something very queer going on between you two. I shouldn't wonder" she peered more closely, her face sharpening as she watched Jane's expressive changes, "you didn't want me to look at the emeralds. I was afraid of some thing. Did Bertie tell you about last night? He was an awful fool, losing all that money at baccarat."

"It was you made the fool of him," Jane said, and stopped short. She had given away that she knew more than she should and increased the cause of all this, drove her on. Of last night. But anger at Lorna couldn't help matters.

"Oh, see. He did come to you then. He's been very strange all day." And her lips curled. "Of course I wouldn't expect he minded losing. But one can't know. It's funny what people will do."

"That's enough." Jane stood over her. "I should have remembered what you are. I never should have asked Tony to let you come this afternoon, but I was actually sorry for you. Please go out of here." Precious moments being lost—flying with each shake unless she could find Bertram. She took hold of Lorna's shoulder, and pushed her toward the door. "You'd better be grateful I haven't told Tony what I know or he'd never speak to you again."

Lorna twisted about, her green eyes hating. "You know nothing, I assure you, except what you've read in Peule's studio you thought I proposed for. But we'd both deny it."

And what could Jane do? Indeed Tony was suddenly in the room, the door closed behind him. His black brows rode high over the Kaye nose. "What are you doing here, you two? What's it all about?" He turned to Jane, very visibly annoyed. "I didn't know you have guests who are leaving!"

Jane stood stiff and cold, still power to move or to speak from from her, for now that Tony was there, there seemed no possible way of averting disaster.

Lorna laughed angrily. "I was hunting for Bertie Cotter," she said sharply.

Tony frowned. "You could hardly expect to find him in here."

Jane looked at him. "Of course not. Lorna's been very rude, Tony. I wish you'd get her out of here. I'll explain later."

That was the worst thing she could have said. Tony was bound to explain later that can't be explained now? His coldly demanding For the air of that room was vibrant with unpleasant things.

Lorna moved with quick meekness to the door. "I didn't mean to be rude. I'm sorry, Jane dear. And it really doesn't matter, but there's nothing to keep me from going to the hotel, and he dig come in here. I saw him. And by the way, Tony, what happened to your cousin's earrings? Ask your Alice in Wonderland. Perhaps she can tell you out."

Before Tony could speak, Jane rushed over to him, her arms tight around his neck. "Don't believe anything she says. Tony, I'm in a frightful hurry to make trouble between us. Oh please, darling, trust me. Go back to our friends. I'll come in a minute."

But he unclasped her hands, and held her away. "What did Lorna mean about the earrings? What did you do with the emeralds? I told you to lock them in your drawer."

"Nothing, dear—nothing has happened." With a frightened effort Jane pulled herself together. He must hold her to look them up, she remembered now. But she had been in such a hurry and so excited when the first guests arrived that she had forgotten. Unforgiveably. "They're in the drawer—quite right," she desperately lied.

He looked at her closely. "I don't entirely believe you," he said. "If there is anything wrong—you'd better tell me now—and quickly."

No, she couldn't. Not now. "There's nothing wrong. Lorna upset me." The white distress of her face contradicting her.

By the way he walked to the door, she knew she hadn't convinced him. "I'm taking your word naturally against Lorna's," he said. "I'll give you five minutes to pull yourself in some order. When everyone has gone, you may have something to tell me about this singular performance. It's difficult for me to believe," he added slowly, "that Lorna or anyone else could so upset you." And he went out, the ironical gay laughter whipping around the door.

Jane stood a second, motionless. He hadn't taken seriously Lorna's parting remark about the missing earrings because it never would occur to him that it could be anything but silly malice. He was the harder, all the more dreadful because he thought that she and Lorna were indulging in a beastly quarrel. No time to think of that now. Jane ran into the bedroom, noting the hour as she raced by the clock. What was she doing? Where was she going? Not a chance of catching up with Bertram now even if she had further hope, he had gone back to his hotel. Insane as he might be, he couldn't dispose of valuable jewels tonight. The pawn shops would be closed. And he would not offer such things for sale, not knowing more of Paris than Jane did. He probably wouldn't dare come back here and face it.

She walking slowly to the bed, pulling the telephone on the small table, nearer, with one nervous hand, she pushed aside the pale yellow gown her maid had laid out.

It seemed to her that she never would get the Hotel Georges V. At last. "Mr. Cotter?" She tried to keep her voice steady. Any moment now Tony might come at an end, might come after her.

"Hallo—hallo—Cotter!" An interminable wait.

Then at last finally answered spoke English with a marked French accent. It was a cautious and cold voice and sometimes it send shivers down Jane's spine.

"Hallo, who wishes to speak to Monsieur Cotter?"

Should she hang up? Suppose the English-speaking people had had him arrested already. She must go on. Must find out.

"Mrs. Anthony Kaye speaking," she said faintly.

"Un instant, Madame." Another wait. Then the same voice with a sharper note. "Madame Kaye?"

"Yes. I want to speak to Mr. Cotter." Jane, desperate herself, even tighter, her eye widening and staring into the room. "I am sure now something had happened.

The voice sounded again with slow, grave precision. "I have the regret to inform you, Madame—that Monsieur is dead. The other gentleman seemed to spark out at her, spitting around and around.

"Dead!" Jane dead. Shoe himself. He'd left a note for Madame Kaye. "That's correct." Jane stood over her. "I should have remembered what you are. I never should have asked Tony to let you come this afternoon, but I was actually sorry for you. Please go out of here." Precious moments being lost—flying with each shake unless she could find Bertram. She took hold of Lorna's shoulder, and pushed her toward the door. Making Child "Show - off" Is Harmful

(By Lisa Grenelle)

As nearly as I can recall it, let me quote to you a statement that was made by a child psychologist of the strictest confidence. The names, of course, have been changed. Here it is:

"Grandmother had adopted Aunt Esther when Mother was growing up. Aunt Esther's parents had been killed in a motor accident. Mother told me, and there was no one else to take her except an old great-aunt, whom Aunt Esther hated. But I never could feel sorry for Aunt Esther because of the way she always made a fool of me in front of Grandmother. She never lost an opportunity of showing Grandma and anybody else who happened to be around, but especially Grandma, how dumb I was compared to her Herbert. I was, too; that was the worst of it.

"Horrid little boy, Herbert was, but brilliant. Aunt Esther had taught him a lot of tricks. 'Read to Grandma, Herbert,' she would say, pointing to a sign, and Herbert would read it. At the next sign it was my turn, and I couldn't read it—not with Aunt Esther's eyes on me, and that little triumphant smile on her face. She had hypnotized me, Aunt Esther did; hypnotized me into forgetting everything I had learned, in order that I would look dumb beside Herbert in front of Grandma.

"Lost Memory

"Mother knew what Aunt Esther was doing, of course, and why. She explained it to me years afterward —about Aunt Esther always having to prove herself, on account of being an orphan. But even now, when I understand it all, I still hate Aunt Esther and Herbert worse than poison. I hate them as I wish something awful would happen to them, even though I know I should not, because, on account of them, I always feel sure of myself. Even though I received good grades in school, I'll always feel that I'm really "dumb" underneath, just as Aunt Esther made me out. I'll always be afraid everyone I meet will see through me and realize I don't amount to much. I'm always watching for people to look at me with Aunt Esther's contemptuous eyes, expecting them to smile their triumphant smile—at my dumbness."

We are all human. We all want to feel that even if we ourselves are not superior to other people, at least our efforts are superior. We want our child to appear to advantage beside the child of an older sister who bullied us in our youth, beside the child of a friend we have always envied, beside the child of any woman we do not particularly admire.

Consciously sometimes, unconsciously sometimes, we set our child up, in place of ourselves, to fight for superiority. And if he does not appear to advantage, sometimes consciously but usually unconsciously, we are annoyed and disappointed; we make him feel ashamed; we spur him on to compete further, where such spur he is not ready to compete. Thus we sacrifice his confidence and his pride on the altar of our own vanity.

And sometimes—oftener in fact than I like to think—the child is handicapped by those first defeats for the rest of his life.

Whether one child can read a little earlier than another means absolutely nothing. With the latter mind does not always develop quickest; often does not at first appear very quick or bright.

If you must cherish some feet of other, just to yourself, see through your child, at least until your child is old enough to know what he is doing and why. If you must prove your superiority, prove it yourself, not through your child.

HAD MONSTER TAPEWORM

This is my little friend Jimmy Jones after being relieved of a 25 foot tapeworm. Primarily, I credit Dr. Hamilton's Pills with his recovery. Another medical friend recommended and was treated for tapeworm. Finally it was discovered and expelled. After 3 doses of Mathersey's Pills—the only remedy she was recommended—Mrs. Jones and was treated for tapeworm. Finally it was discovered and expelled. After 3 doses of Mathersey's Pills—the only remedy she was recommended—Mrs. Jones writes: "I must say the remedy is very satisfactory in the entire removal of tapeworm. That means that it is a good one. I am very glad to have used it." Dr. Hamilton's Pills are safe, sure, yet mild. Simply take a warm morning dose and in a few hours the worms, eggs and all, are gone. Pleasant to take. Contain only pure vegetables. Guaranteed to satisfy through your druggist or money back. Imperial Laboratories, Windsor, Ont. Don't wait for the worst—get rid of worms at the first sign. Worms are not your only enemy. Constipation, bad breath and sourness a bottle of Mathersey's Fruit Laxative. Follow the simple directions and if you are not entirely satisfied with the results you get, your money back. Mathersey's Fruit Laxative is for sale in Trenton by your druggist, or by Dr. Hamilton's Pills Remedies Limited, Dept. 12, 211 Bay St., Toronto, Canada. MAGIC OF HAPPINESS A FINE RECIPE FOR BEAUTY

Have you happened to notice a recent photograph of Princess Juliana of Holland? And if so, did you think her charming? Lovely? Radiant? With quite a bit of dash and go about her?

But, surely, that's rather miraculous! Because a year ago she was nothing of the sort. She was then a rather phlegmatic-looking young woman, with that comfortable look that the Hollanders have of being not the least bit in the world under-nourished.

Intelligent? Yes, she's a University graduate. They have fully prepared her to be a queen—but not an embodiment of feminine lure.

Well, what must a girl do to be beautiful?

It's the question women have been asking for millions of years. (For I suppose lipsticks and heightening have flourished almost immemorially.) And the stock answers are familiar to all of you. Be young; or at least as young as you can. Be healthy. Use all the art you can muster in applying your cosmetics. Learn to be graceful and chic; to wear your clothes well.

But there's a new prescription, I'm sure: even than these and here it is: Be happy.

Have you never noted the difference between a girl with all the attributes of beauty, but leading an empty life, and one of no special natural charms, but made beautiful by happiness? If you have, you'll agree with me that joy is the most transfiguring thing in the world.

Now—to go back to Juliana, that fortunate young person who is the Crown Princess and who in a scant day to reign over all those enchanting tulips and windmills—she has in a castle that is all her own and has an upstanding young prince for a husband, and is also, as she recently announced over the radio, though not in so many words, to become a mother.

What has happened to her, of course, is that she has found happiness—happiness that crowns and castles couldn't give her but that a love-union can. There can be no doubt but that the Princess and her royal husband are in love with each other.

They had, you remember, rather a prolonged honeymoon, spent in various countries at a considerable distance from the Dutch borders, during which the Princess, who had been somewhat puritanically brought up, with a good deal of solemnity and decorum and hardly any gayety, learned for the first time how it is to be young. Some of the frivolities of youth she learned, too—dancing and the excitement of wearing a great many becoming clothes. It is said she even drank a cocktail or two.

Certain elderly officials in Holland resigned their heads a little, it is true, on hearing all this, and on discovering that the Princess sometimes enjoyed herself on Sundays as well as on weekdays. As for solemn Sunday travel, they simply couldn't believe that their Princess had permitted herself anything of the sort!

But they must have forgotten their disapproval when they saw her—not only much slimmer and apparently younger, but trans-figured by her romance.

So their next queen was to be a handsome woman, after all! They must have looked at her with pride, those crotchety old men. And when they must have realized they actually liking magic of happiness, equally must for a queen and for a working girl.

GOOD MANNERS

Small Afternoon Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—I have a friend whose daughter is to be married next month. The wedding is to be at the church at four o'clock, and they are planning to keep it small and informal, having about twenty-five persons present.

Announcements are to be mailed after the ceremony. The invitations to the church and to the reception (which will be at the bride's home) are to be written notes.

Many of the groom's relatives are out of town and are not known to the bride or her family. This has caused my friend to hesitate as to the correct form of address to use. Will you please help us? Should the invitations come from the daughter, or should they be written by the mother?

2.—The bride is planning to wear a long dress with a small hat, while the groom will wear a dark suit. Is this correct?

3.—What length dress should the bridesmaid wear?

D.

1.—All of the plans that you have outlined for the sending of the invitations and announcements for this informal wedding are correct. The invitations, the informal notes, should be written by the bride's mother, since she is to be the hostess, and most especially should the bride's mother write wear either the invitation-notes to the groom's relatives. These relatives will not be formally invited directly by the hostess, the bride's mother. And this kind of note can be very charming and hospitable.

2.—If the long dress is a very simple afternoon dress, preferably with a jacket, it will be correct.

3.—The bridesmaid may either wear a street-length ensemble, or a long afternoon-dress ensemble.

Belated Wedding Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

It was married secretly about three months ago. I have now told my immediate family and I would like to announce in the newspaper my marriage to my friends and relatives who live in distant states? Is it proper to send wedding announcements?

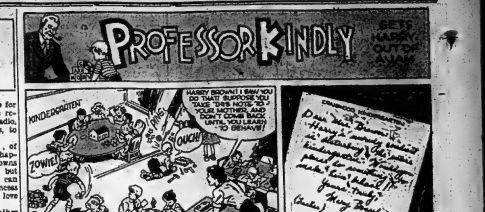
W.

It isn't considered especially good form to send formal marriage announcements after so long a time has elapsed since the marriage. However, in your case I do not incorrect to do this, if you especially wish to, and if there are so many people that it would be impossible to be sent.

My suggestion would be for you to write notes of announcement to the friends and relatives who live at too great a distance to be told by word of mouth. Don't you agree? Explain that you have waited more appropriate, under the circumstances. If you simply send out the wedding announcement; it is inexpensive, and it is more personal and appropriate.

Cigarette-Lighting

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:



My friend contends that if you offer cigarettes to guests and then strike a match, that you neglect to light the other person's cigarette first. I agree that it is common courtesy to do this, but that the true etiquette would be to light your own first. Does striking the sulphur there may be in the match. Please settle this friendly argument.

O.

Although occasionally there does arise this question of "taking" the sulphur fumes, the custom still remains that the man first lights the woman's cigarette and then lights his own. The "taking first" or "guests first" idea seems to be more important than the scarcely-to-be-noticed sulphur fumes.

That Body of Yours

By James U. Barton, M.D.

DANGERS OF REDUCING WHEN NOT OVERWEIGHT

I believe parents and physicians are now drawing a sigh of relief as they find that the "boyish" figure is for growing girls is going out of fashion. The girls found that they were too tired and weak to play or stay up to a reasonable hour. They complained also that the monthly periods became irregular and the thinning of their blood from lack of food made life a sorrow instead of a joy.

And even older girls— women from 20 to 50—who are not really overweight but who have gone on reducing diets have found themselves weak, breathless, nervous, irritable, with a rapid, palpitating heart.

It can be easily understood why fat or overweight individuals can go on a reducing diet safely. Their bodies have stored away plenty of food —fat—which is the very richest food or fuel. Thus when not enough food is eaten to supply the body's needs some of this fat store! in the body is used to make up the difference and so weight is reduced.

However, when no fat or normal weight reduces the food intake so that not enough food is eaten to supply the body's needs, these needs must be supplied from some source or the individual will collapse. To supply this need then the body has to give up some of its other tissue —principally muscle tissue—causing wasting away, weakness, collapse, or even death.

And even overweight individuals when they get down to the normal weight for age and height must not go more than four or five pounds below this or they also can then end up gradually to normal weight with much satisfaction.

It should be remembered then that reducing to the point of thinness or underweight by those who have been overweight and reducing to be discouraged in such cases."

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

The Spice Jar contributes some of the new colors, which will bring us cinnamon brown, ginger brown, bay leaf green and nutmeg mauve.

Comes A Time when summer things pall, and we think with delight of luxury fabrics. So it won't be long before some one will want an off-the-face tricorne shape, trimmed with a draped veil with black chenille dots. Rhinestone accents make a sparkling note.

Don't imagine that the shops are not stocking up on suits because autumn is approaching. On the contrary a bigger stock season than ever that of last spring, is anticipated. One reason is that the fabrics are smoother and swagger fur coat has become an indispensible item.

A good mixture of color will be found in many of the new evening gowns. Chiffon will make a lovely gown in soft pale blue slipper satin, and lines the irregular hem with light magenta velvet.

Feather fly onto the new hats. A bumper beret in black grosgrain has the top covered with flat pads of ostrich in red and blue.

Soon we'll be out looking for blouses to go with Autumn suits. A beauty is the black silk chiffon, tucked tucked into a wide semi-circle; tucked semi-circles also decorate the sleeves. Crystal buttons mark the front of the blouse.

IN MEMORIAM

BEAUDERIE—In loving memory of a dear mother, Ellen Beaudrie, who passed away September 11st, 1936.

One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away,
But you left us to remember,
None on earth can take your place.

A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memory still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"You Can't Have Everything" Spotlighting a swiftly paced parade of outstanding entertainment personalities such as has been rarely seen on the screen, Twentieth-Century-Fox offers a grand festival of top-notch singing-dancing-and-comedy in "You Can't Have Everything," the feature attraction on the Belle screen today and Monday, matinee daily.

Featuring Phil Baker, lilting new hi-de-heights; the Ritz Brothers, triple threats in given; Ida Amecke, screen heart-throb and star of radio's Bigest show; Charles Winninger, Alice Faye, Henry"; Louise Hovick, bringing a new personality to the screen; Rubinoff and his violin; and Tony Martin, romantic rave of the airwaves, Darryl F. Zanuck's latest hit surpasses his famous "Hits, Baby, Sing", "One in a Million," "On the Avenue," "Wake up and Live" and other musical smashes.

Song hits by the ace-song writing team of Mack Gordon and Harry Revel stud the story.

Alice Faye was selected by Irving Berlin and Cole Porter as Hollywood's best song-plugger, plays a singing playwright who wins starring, serious tragic masterpiece is adapted by the Ritz Brothers into a bowling farce. Because he thinks his actress wife is dead, Phil Baker, his sharpened his act. Alice puts the kibosh on his romantic ideas, only to find Phil's escapade true.

Liberally interspersed with a variety of entertainment from bowling to end, the story finally brings Louise Hovick to the fore in attempts of Louise Hovick to get Amecke for herself. Other amusement ranges in the cast include Arthur Treacher, one j-o-n-e Laugh, Phyllis Brooks, sweetest of comedy's stars; Tip, Tap and Toe, Rhythmic six and Ben Carter's Mood Hounds, and his band, the trumpet king of hi-hi hotlest; and Tyler Brooke.

To Norman Taurog the director, some good luck. Here is a well-rounded production with its smooth and impeccable transitions from one variety spot to another.

The Belle Latest World News Events and Woodland Cafe" are clever and amusing Walt Disney Silly Symphony, "Merbabies" will be exhibited on the same program. The feature attraction begins daily at 2.55, 7.30 and 9.25 p.m.

Don't Forget—Tuesday

Three top-ranking stars from the Warner Bros. studio appear in the romantic adventure film, "Garden of Dawn," coming to the Belle Tuesday and Wednesday. Dennis Morgan, Errol Flynn and Ian Hunter. Other favorites in the cast are Freda Inescort, Herbert Mundin and Mary Forbes.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Every Night At Eight" and "Garden of Allah"

To "Every Night at Eight", hilarious romantic musical comedy which has been seen on Broadway for a year and night at 12.05 as grand revival hit No. 2, goes the distinction of combining the timeliness and current popularity of the amateur radio broadcast and brings it to the screen for the first time as a basic theme for a motion picture.

This filmsical serves a two-fold purpose as well, not only in presenting George Raft in an entirely new characterization as an egotistical leader of an amateur dance band but in introducing to film fans Frances Langford, radio sensation of considerable fame.

Crisp, crackling humor that so upfrontlessly identifies the talents of that glib, adept comedienne Patsy Kelly, side-splitting antics of the old blood and attractive Alice Faye, the immensely likable personality quotient of the Three Radio Rogues, also stars of the air waves, the inevitably tuneful songs of Hoagy Carmichael, combined with a romantic story and a half dozen or more catchy melodies, serve to make "Every Night at Eight" screen confection of high entertainment.

The story concerns itself mainly with the adventures of Miss Langford, Frances Langford, and Patsy Kelly, Broadway hoofers, who on Labor Day factory the three decide to try their luck as a singing trio in an amateur night broadcast. They lose to George Raft who takes them in hand. Complications arise when the Sisters and rides with them to success on the radio. Complications arise when Miss Langford and Raft love with him.

The three girls finally rebel at their taskmaster's tactics of handling them and decide to attack their public lives and desert their nightly broadcast to have one evening of fun at a nearby swanky party. They realize their mistake, however, and return to their duties in time to save Raft's skin as well as their gym.

Outstanding song hits in the film include "Then You've Never Been Blue", "Take It Easy", "I Feel a Song Coming On" and "Hands Across the Table."

"Every Night at Night" is a unique comedy musical spiel in its original plot, top notch comedy and the necessary romantic ingredients. Don't miss it.

"Garden of Allah"

Seven years in production, producing the weird music of Africa, featuring an authentic Arabic background in "The Garden of Allah", technicolor production, starring Marlene Dietrich and Charles Boyer, which is shown as smash revival hit No. 1 commencing today midnite at the Capitol.

Jamiel Hasson, technical adviser, costumed Dietrich and Lee Garmes before he unearthed this genuine Arabian background for the colorful cafe scene in which Tilly Losch executes the dance of seduction.

This famous Robert Hichens love story presents lovely Marlene Dietrich as the first time in her career as the beautiful European girl, Domini Enfilden, who goes to the Algerian desert to start a new life and finds romance in a strange and beautiful manner with the arrival of some mysterious, brooding Boris Androvsky, played by Charles Boyer, a runaway Trappist monk.

Basil Rathbone, Aubrey Smith and Joseph Schildkraut are featured with Miss Losch in the supporting cast, which includes Joan Tetzel as Hadjal, handsome young stage star, Camille Andros, Walton and Henry Brandon.

Sunday Night Only

Shown today only at the Capitol Dick Foran, the singing cowboy, in "Cyclone" and Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels in "Beyond the Law". In addition is the rest of the same bill subject to include Pathe News, Universal Cartoon, "Mickey's Man Hunt", Fox Movietone Follies and latest screen snapshots. Last complete show at 2.30 p.m.

TWEED

Tweed—A large crowd gathered at the Arena on Tuesday night attending the Fall Fair dance and hockey Baseball. The entertainment was sponsored by the Old Home Week Committee and attracted people from Northbrook to Plainfield. There were no wise disappointed as the game as played on real ice conditions lived up to advance notices.

Prominent local townsmen made up the two teams assisted by one or two more from each of them. Prominent on the line up of Alex

Louise Hovick and the Ritz Brothers in the first musical of the new season, "You Can't Have Every thing" now on the Belle screen.

Giants Feel Sting of Bees, And Future Heavy Schedule May Prove Their Downfall

Terrymen Have 5 Doubleheaders in Next 21 Scheduled Games

LOSE 2 TO 1

Lefty Grove Hurls Red Sox to 4-3 Victory Over The Yanks

By RED FEDER

A couple of "Simon Legree" era snapping their whips at the Giants, and the Terrymen aren't sure how which is worse—Boston's belittling Bees, or those old villains, the Chicago Cubs.

They still head a two-game lead in the National League tea party today, but between the Bees stinging them on one side, and the Cubs' sizzle terrapens nestling them on the other, there's no telling how long it's going to last.

As though their current series with the Bees weren't enough, what with a 2-1 decision the Boston took in yesterday's 13-inning opener to widen their edge in the season series, the Giants today open the remainder of the season's schedule and found things had been fired up just dandy for the other fellows.

They have five doubleheaders scheduled for the 21 playing days remaining but what provided an extra case of the blues was that four of these bunched up in the middle of four consecutive days during the last week of the season, and two of them were with Boston Bees.

Drought of Pitchers?

Where, Bill Terry wants to know now, is he going to get enough relief pitchers to those four days, Sept. 27 to 30, inclusive, and if he gets them, how is he going to keep the Bees in, four straight?

At the moment, the result of yesterday's setback and the Cubs' lop-eided 11-0 win over the Cardinals, here's the way the standings shaped up:

	Won	Lost	To Play
Giants	78	50	36
Cubs	77	51	34

The Giants' struggle with thegBees was a swell ball game, but it didn't wind up right for the Giants. Hal Schumacher, Giant hurler, Monty MacFayden hooked up in a duel as tight as a thoroughbred's tail for 13 innings, but Prince Hal couldn't get by Willis Fletcher with the bases loaded in the 13th, and Fletcher won their mitch with in sixteen starts against the Giants this season.

Gabby Hartnett and Ton Carlesimo, manitimes, sputtered the Cardinals. Hartnett hammered two homers and Carleton tossed a six-hit, 11-strikeout performance to hand the Gas House Gang.

Lefty Grove handed the Yankees their second straight defeat, pitching the Red Sox to a 4-3 decision. But, since the second-place Yankees were trounced 6-5 by the Indians, in spite of Lefty's victory, that left the Yanks with an 11-game American League lead.

The Pirates topped the Reds 7-4 in the ninth, and the Athletics whipped the Senators 9-3 on Bob Johnson's four runs-batted-in. The rest of the big time (Tigers, Phillies, Dodgers, White Sox and the Browns) had a holiday.

GERMAN TENNIS STAR ADVANCES TO U. S. FINALS

Von Cramm Thrills Gallery as He Stages Comeback

Forest Hills, N.Y., Sept. 11 (AP)—Whether Gottfried von Cramm wins or loses in his final tennis tussle today with the redhead, Don Budge, he will have established himself in the short space of ten days one of the most popular foreign athletes ever to visit the United States.

The feeling of the 14,000 tennis fans, who saw him defeat Bobby Riggs in yesterday's semi-finals of the United States singles tennis championships after dropping the first waited until he was 28 to cross the Atlantic. The final score was 0-6, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

Jacques Lacoste, the happy Polish girl, and little Anita Lizana, pretty Chilean backhand artist, who clash in the women's final, also have made plenty of friends in their first visit, even though they were unable to take the home, hen-coop. The ovation the German Baron received when he left the court was inspired partly by the fact he had assured the fans what they had been under a shot of waiting for—another duel between him and his great rival, Budge—but also was a demonstration for Von Cramm, the sportsman and the courageous batter.

ACTION TAKEN TO STIMULATE HOCKEY IN WEST

C.A.H.A. Moves to Assist Ice Game in Saskatchewan

Edmonton, Sept. 11—(CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association today took action to assist Saskatchewan Clubs whose ranks have been depleted by loss of players moving elsewhere in search jobs because of drought conditions.

W. G. Hardy, C.A.H.A. president of the C.A.H.A. issued a statement here last night to explain the situation. He said he understood four Toronto players would be obtained by Regina, Battleford Beavers, last year's Allan Cup finalists. Hardy's statement said:

"C.A.H.A. after considering the situation created in Saskatchewan by the drought, has suggested to the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association that for this year only the senior city hockey championship branch be allowed to import six players instead of four with the provision that not more than four of these players be imported from outside the branch.

"Similarly all Saskatchewan intermediate and Junior clubs will be allowed to import four players instead of two with the proviso that not more than two of these may be imported from outside the branch."

Fashion of Nail Decoration Discussed in London Papers

London, Sept. 11—(CP)—During the seaside season a controversy has raged in the correspondence columns of the press over the fashion of painting toe nails and finger nails. Professor Thomas Bodkin of the Institute of Fine Arts, University of Birmingham, quoted a Belgian authority as saying:

"The mania of painting and varnishing the finger-nails comes to us from America. Its origin is simple and quite incomprehensible: the great majority of American women, even of those whose incomes would be considered lavish by us, are obliged for want of servants, to do their own cooking and household work. Such manual labors blacken the nails and destroy their transparence and natural polish, hence the recourse to colored varnish."

The authority said the custom had been propagated by Hollywood stars.

KNOTTY LEE'S COLTS SWING POTENT BATS

Ogdensburg Hit With Gusto to Win Play-off

It is almost as hard to pick a winner in the Canadian-American baseball brawl as championship series as it is to find's trained flea escaped from a circus. A few days ago before the regular schedule ended after Ogdensburg Colts' star hurler, Leo Fulks, was rendered hors de combat when spiked sliding into first base, Colts were in the driver's seat, had dcom written all over them.

But yesterday Colts' heavy hitters swung their bats with gusto and slam banged their way to a 21-3 victory over Cayuga "Nets" in the first of their second-division semi-final series. Gloversville Diners, after losing Thursday night's opener stepped back into the picture last night and banded Watertown Cubs a 9-1 trimming.

Cayuga started off with two runs in the first inning but Ogdensburg tied it up in the third of the same frame and then went to town in the second with a seven-run splurge and added four more in the fourth. Before Nets regained consciousness and scored a lone tally in the ninth frame.

Circuit Clouts.

Maurice Van Roboys added two circuit clouts to his season's total of 41 while Lefty Lee and Ed Stegall also collected homers for the winners while Wes Nowak and Jumbo Jim Gray wallops for the visiting Nets.

Triple and a single gave Gloversville's star lead from the start of the fourth inning and when danger signals hoisted in the seventh, Mike Sperrick, released by Bisons early in the season and recently signed by Gloversville, slammed out a "fatty" double to drive home one Boden's tingle. Rust scored again in the ninth when Partrick's rollet a bad throw on Gaudali's roller.

ORILLIA TERRIERS WIN BY 11-10 SCORE

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—Orillia Terriers moved a step closer the Mann Cup finals when they defeated Malton Mountaineers 11-10 at Mimico in the first game of a best of five series in the Senior Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association playdowns.

It was a hard-checking, hard-fought game throughout and it was only in the closing minutes that the Terriers were able to pull out a win. With three minutes left to play Mimico were out in front 10-9 and looked like a win for them, or possibly overtime. But two goals by Ernie Curran from assists by Dick Walsh and Stogie Stegall pulled the game out of the fire for Orillia. The second game of the series will be played at Orillia Monday.

SPORTS HUDDLE

By ALAN GOULD

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Win or lose today in his quest for the Unlited States National tennis crown, Don Budge is our top choice for the Sullivan award, emblem of the year's outstanding United States amateur athlete.

The big league baseball area likely to be affected by managerial changes between now and the end of the 1938 season is now confined mainly to Boston, Brooklyn and St. Louis . . . If Bill McKechnie leaves the Bees, he will be only because he gets an offer from the management that the Boston club can't match. . . . The Yankees may be playing third base regularly since Aug. 3 but Red Rolfe's batting average from .259 to .297 and become the choice of many baseball writers for the all-star game third base position.

Kallibrids figure the world championship Yankees may be better bet to beat the Cubs than the Giants in the October big money tussle for the reason, among others that their pitching ace, Gomez and Ruffing, could be started twice.

An all-Metropolitan series would be a natural but it never appears, except in case of bad weather, whereas there would be one and maybe two extra days in the Polo grounds, in a New York-Chicago contest. . . . Slight chance when the Yankees start anybody but Gomez and Ruffing. Also Joe Sewell never stuffs cotton in his ears and braces himself for the reverberations.

Yesterday's Stars

By The Associated Press

Lloyd Waner, Pirates—Bill four for six and drove in winning run with ninth inning single to best Reds 7-4.

Bob Johnston, Athletics— His home run and single drove in four runs in 5-3 victory over Senators.

Tex Carleton and Gabby Hartnett, Cubs—Carleton pitched shutout, fanning 11 as Hartnett hit two homers in 11-0 win over Cardinals.

Lefty Grove, Red Sox—Stopped Yankees 4-3 with seven hits.

Mace Brown and Danny MacFayden, Bees—Pitcher drove in both run in 13-inning 2-1 win over Giants; MacFayden, light with men on bases, pitched 11 scoreless innings.

Johnny Heving, Indians—Held Tigers to two runs for four innings and drove in two runs with double in 8-5 victory.

Ruse Resourcefully Used

Montreal, Sept. 11—(CP)—If a minister can sound the truth, then Pop Popiowski, who played with an Intermediate football team here last year, shouldn't have much trouble making the grade with Montreal's Big Four Indians this season.

Here's the story behind Pop's prank that had Indian officials pulling their wool away from their eyes today:

A week or so ago there appeared at the Indian's training camp at Molson Stadium, a young man who announced himself as being one Aloysius O'Cape, who had played football at "Lasalle University in Utah."

No, he was not an "import" in the accepted sense of the word; as a matter of fact, Mr. O'Cape explained he was just in Montreal for a short time—passing through, as it were—and when he read about the gridiron drills he got the old yearning to handle a football again. The Indians made him welcome.

So Aloysius went to work. And as he looked good in the process officials shook their heads and considered their ill-fortune that he was not a resident here. Then Aloysius' bubble burst.

Came Cecile Osborne, an outside wing with Montreal's Intermediate Fastwards, to report for a tryout, and encountering Mr. O'Cape soon after his arrival, he looked him over and said something like this: "Why, hello, old boy. Glad to see you. Have you been?"

This familiar greeting between a Montrealer and a stranger from "Utah" left a few of the bystanders puzzled but they expressed no surprise that Osborne knew Aloysius quite well. Aloysius was equally amazed at their surprise. "Why shouldn't I know Pop Popiowski? We played with him every week-end" he answered logically.

Pop looks like a good bet to catch on with the squad.

BATTLE RAGES FOR 4TH HOLE IN "INT" LOOP

Orioles And Bisons Virtually Tied Going Into Stretch

(By The Associated Press)

The scrambling Buffalo Bisons Newark may keep Baltimore out of the International League Playoffs if the Birds don't watch out.

The one-thousandth of a point stood between the Birds and a definite place in the post-season series but that fraction was enough for assuming gigantic proportions in the eyes of the jittery Orioles.

The fourth place Orioles need but one victory of the three games left to clinch that berth, regardless of or one defeat by Buffalo, who have the same left to play with Rochester, to assure themselves a berth in the playoffs.

Here's the way the Birds and Bisons would wind up if Baltimore was to win all three, while Buffalo was to win they two:

	W	L	Pct.
Buffalo	76	77	.4967
Baltimore	75	78	.4966

But the Orioles aren't counting too much on the Bisons losing and are keeping their fingers crossed with the hope of stopping the rampaging Bruins at least once.

The Bears branded the Birds a set back in the Bisons last night when they bowled them over 10-1 and 4-0 in a twin bill. Chiefly responsible for the Bisons victories were their pitchers Alley Donald and Ed Bergs.

It was Bergs' 31st win of the year against four defeats, and Donald's 16th triumph against two losses.

Rochester's Red Wings put the Bisons down, but not out, when they blasted their way to an 8-5 victory over the home run route, Johnny Welwood, Lou Scoffic and Johnny Hopp belted for the circuit to aid Ralph Kleine in his 20th triumph of the season.

Montreal's second-place Royals, while Syracuse and Jersey City deficit of five strokes. Bobby while Baltimore and Buffalo were idle.

BILLY BURKE NEW THREAT IN GOLF GAME

Cleveland Entry Favorite to Win Canadian Open

By ELMER DULMAGE

Canadian Press Writer

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)— Billy Burke from Cleveland, an easy-going sort of fellow who isn't going to worry about rain or blow, was a hot warm favorite today to succeed Horton Smith as Canadian open Golf Champion. Burke was probably the second choice with most people around St. Andrew's Club.

But burly Bill was the most dangerous man in the field nevertheless, of the potential scoring abilities of Ryder Cup veterans Horton Smith Cooper, Ralph Guldahl, slammin' Sam Snead, Ky Laffoon, old-timer Leo Diegel and a half-dozen more high grade par busters.

Burke proved when he started. Burke fired a 68 on his opening round to establish a commanding lead one under par score yesterday.

His first round was the best of the 67-72—139 tally of Cooper and two up on Guldahl, United States Open champion, who had 71-68—140.

Cooper Strong

Cooper, the best in any tournament he enters, held his own yesterday, matching par 71 and 68 on his smashing first round of 67. The lighthorse, a former champion, is a strong favorite and many favorite to finish in front.

Burke's score back, Guldahl also was no worse than even money. The big American champion posted a dazzling 69 yesterday and could easily have had a score in the low sixties because of short putts that dropped for him.

Sterling was in the running were Ghezzi, Diegel, young Ben Hogan from Fort Worth, Tex., Al Watrous of Detroit and up-and-coming Ed Oliver of Wilmington, Del. They were deadlocked at 141, only three strokes off the pace. Horton Smith of Chicago, stood alone with 72-70 —142.

Only Canadian with a chance to win, Bobby Alston of Ottawa, started off with a 74 and finished with a 73 for a fine 147.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Collins

According to the records of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association the Toronto St. Cyprians signed no player by the name of Walsh. Coach "Pop" Woods contacted Secretary Bill Snyder, Hamilton, relative to players Bridgen and Walsh, who played for St. Cyrs. here, but not in Toronto. "Have James Briden's certificate intact, but no certificate for any player named Walsh," was the substance of the reply Skipper Woodley received from the O.B.A.A. yesterday. The burning question now is—how did player Walsh compete in the T.A.R.A. junior finals versus the Columbus boys if he was not signed?

"Are you going to pretend Walsh?" we asked Coach Woodley Sunday. "I don't see why you should have to post $25.00 per a protest when it is quite obvious that the O.B.A.A. has no certificate signed by Walsh. The T.A.R.A. seems to be at fault and according to the O.B.A.A. constitution any club playing an ineligible player in a championship game shall be disqualified and suspended from the association with games on hand being awarded to the opposing team. If I understand the constitution correctly, the title should be awarded the Toronto-Bellevills series and move right into the provincial semi-finals" commented Skipper Woodley today.

At any rate the local juniors are not putting up any too great a squawk, feeling the various associations are wholly responsible and should make amends.

We understand Tony Pacenkowski, Kingston lone moundsman, registered a registered letter from the future Alma Mater, St. Lawrence University, ordering him to report for football practice next Monday. Incidentally Tony is a football player of parts, but if he deserts the Ponies at this stage playoffs he'll not only leave Joe Daley's name out on the well known limb but stranded without resemblance of a pitcher on their roster. In the third game of the C.O.B.L. finals today at Kingston the starting pitcher will undoubtedly be Bill Schowalk for the Ponies and Jack Turner for Oshawa.

Too many words of praise cannot be affected the officials and members of the newly inaugurated Bowling Alley at Frankford in conjunction with the Quinte Skating Club at the corner of Victoria Street and Dufferin Ave. Starting from scratch last spring this club has accomplished much in the line of providing facilities for Bellevillo's growing needs, more than any other organization of its kind we know of. Besides the establishment of six fine lanes this city centre, the club installed floodlights on two of their courts recently, these lights being the finest equipment that money could purchase. Tennis is one of the finest modicums of exercise known for the younger generation, as the game tends to exercise every muscle of the human body and also keeps the mind keen and alert. To General Chairman Ivan Scott and his energetic band of associates we say: "keep up the good work, you are all right."

Rumours that the Montreal Maroons would carry their National Hockey League franchise to some other city this season, were squelched yesterday by Senator Donat Raymond, President of the Canadian Arena Company of Montreal Senator Raymond assured the Montreal press reporters of the continuance of the Maroons franchise in that place, where the colorful Montreal Canadiens also hold sway.

For the lovers of boxing we are glad to announce that the fight game will be returned to the Belleville Arena on Sept. 22nd. Jack Corbett, local boxing impresario, signing contestants will all be supplied from the Toronto district, the bout where a boxing school is continually in operation. Corbett says there are splendid mittmen residing at the Airport, so some really good boxing bouts are in store.

"There is no chance of an amalgamation of the Junior Canadian and Lake Shore O.H.F.U. Presque this season," said one newsboy, "stated Convener Bill Fry of the O.H.A. Intermediate additional candidates for the local Intermediate league will be sent next week, when the final seasons of practice will be held.

The veteran old Lefty Grove can still fool the best of 'em. "Mechanical" his pitching may be a rare shape as he pitched the Red Sox to a 4-3 win over the high flying mighty Yankees. The loss in no way dramatically the Giants are in a tough spot, although they enjoy a two game lead over the Cubs.

The Tobe boys, Sammy of New York, Zeke, of Toronto, and Abe of Northern Ontario, are all home together their parents for the holiday. Sammy and Zeke took to baseball, while Abe favored basketball during their athletic endeavours in this city. Incidentally Sammy is the only one to have a world's series and also says Joe Louis won handily. Believing prize fighting to be less than any other organization of its kind we know of, besides the Deaf Tourist Tells of Compensations and Drawbacks of Deafness

"When deaf persons sleep they enjoy a tranquil rest denied that of normal persons," declares W. J. Heard of Freeport, Maine, now enjoying a tour of Ontario and other provinces in company with his family.

"But their fear of accident, of fire, for example, cracking through some house or unfamiliar building in which they may stay, is ever present, it was added by the visitor.

Compensations

"However, the deaf have compensations which are not enjoyed by those who are gifted with normal hearing. They do not have to listen to idle prattle, they are immune to most of the noises which make life a nerve wracking existence for others. Their world may be silent, but on the whole it is an enjoyable one.

"Many of the world's great men have been deaf, a condition which far from handicapping them has urged them to greater things. Consider Edison, the greatest inventor, for example," invites Mr. Heard.

It was a strange interview granted to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, carried on in an exchange of written notes across one of the tea room tables at the city tourist camp where the family rested briefly yesterday afternoon before continuing their trip east to Quebec Province and ultimately home. The trip started in Windsor some two weeks ago and has been replete with many side trips through the northern part of the Province. It has been an enjoyable one in every respect, according to the visitor, including the trip to Oshawa and the famous motorcycle who have attracted more than ordinary fame south of the border.

Son as Driver

Though Mr. Heard has left the driving of his expensive car up to his son, John, 11, deafness does not handicap the owner or driver of a car.

"The deaf are more acute. They have a sort of second sense, a gradier sense of responsibility," it was explained in the neat handwritten note passed to the reporter. "In fact I have yet to hear of a deaf person being implicated in an accident."

Deafness which followed a severe illness several years ago crept gradually upon the visitor, until it was a condition which came to be accepted without complaint. In fact, it was a not too unwelcome one for permitting an escape from many noisy theories of every day life. A jeweller and watchmaker by trade, he is thus able to concentrate more upon his work than from many distractions which would ordinarily occur.

Deaf Need No Pity

"Don't pity the deaf; they don't need it. We enjoy a state which is denied others, and never worry." Observation and eye sight is strengthened when one is deaf, it was declared in the article on the pad which was passed over the table.

Just a few years previous conditions were being made in the large trailer for the eventful trip. Not an incident escaped the sparkling eye of the tourist-visitor who watched the family, consisting of his son, daughter, Helene and Mrs. Heard busying themselves the task.

"On a trip like this we probably see more than others. We are not annoyed by the honking of cars or the rattle of traffic in the street. We are left more free to appreciate. Our other senses are keenly acute."

Artificial Aids Passed up

Mr. Heard passes up all artificial aids for hearing, he prefers, upon his own statement, to be "just as he is," without a hearing aid, and nothing to distract him from the outside.

"It's pretty nice to be able to miss all those election speeches we are going to hear about on the side pretty soon," he commented in the last of the written notes.

Pavement of Highway No. 34 to Be Completed States Dr. Faulkner

Official information has been received by the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, that the paving of No. 14 Highway will be completed as far as Maxwell this year. Work on the road is expected to be resumed within a few days.

It was expected that work would continue without interruption, but owing to the fact that a long haul is now necessary for stone for the continuation of the road seven miles from Stirling north, and other conditions, it was reported by the Bentley Construction Company that the work could not be completed for the price originally quoted, according to reports.

After consideration of the project by the Department, it was decided to put the remainder of the work up for tender. This tender for the completion of the road from south of Gilmourtown to Maxwell has now been awarded the same Bentley Company and will be commenced at once.

Father, Sons Live in Toolshed, Get Water from Hydrant

Detroter Lived With Boys in Trailer For Time

PLACED IN SHELTER

Detroit, Sept. 11 (CP)—For the last month Rudolph Descaro and his three sons have been sleeping in a tool shed near a suburban park, doing their cooking in the open and getting water from a fire hydrant, although Descaro has been receiving $60 a month from the welfare department.

A park keeper reported the case and police brought the father and his children, Melvin, 13; Rudolph, eight, and Ray, four, to the police station.

"Nobody wants children in their house," said Descaro. "I lived with the boys in a trailer camp for a while, and then we found this shack. Electric light is connected for the amount of $325,000.

The company has been operating at a loss for several years, and has been unable to pay bond interest since July 1, 1930.

The bondholders approved sale of this company for $325,000, and when the sale being completed, the proceeds and other assets of the company will be distributed among the bondholders.

DRAWERS RIFLED IN LOCAL OFFICE

Nothing Reported Missing in Office of London Life Company

Burglars forced their way in the office of R. S. Smith, manager of the local London Life Insurance Company office, Standard Bank Building, and rifled the drawers and desks of the office, but nothing was reported missing last night. Sergeant Arthur Booth investigated and reported the would-be robbers could have gained entrance by two means, first by manipulating the lock and secondly by means of an open transom. The drawers of Mr. Smith's private desk had been jimmied open with the use of a wide sharp instrument. No attempt was made to enter the cashier's department where the company money was secured in a large safe. "What any person would want out of my personal desk is a mystery, as I keep nothing of any material value in there," commented Mr. Smith, who seemed satisfied no papers had been disturbed, leading the authorities to believe cash was the object of the breakin.

POINT ANNE SOFTBALL TEAM PLAY OFF TODAY

Word was received in the city today that the third and deciding game, in the third round intermediate O.A.S.A. playdown between the Point Anne "Cementers" and the Long Branch intermediates, would be played at Big Gorge field in Port Hope this afternoon. Each club won their home game in the first two games played, Point Anne winning by a score of 13 to 2 one week ago and Long Branch energized in winning by a scant margin of 1-0 upon the return game. Coach Frank Sedore announced before leaving for Port Hope, that Stanley "Ding" Lettman would most likely be the Cementmen's starting pitcher, retaining the slugged Lorne Bateman and his fireball for relief purposes. The winner of today's game advances into the provincial softball semi-finals.

KIDDIES BEG FOR BLOTTERS FROM OFFICES

With the re-opening of schools in the city, the open season for begging blotters from local business houses and stores by youthful residents has also been declared. Grain Yield Slightly Lower Than Estimated Oat Yield 33 Bu. Per Acre Compares With Average of 35.4 Bu.

Grain yields to the district this season have not been as many as originally expected, it is indicated by reports of both growers of the section and the current report for the Province by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Dry weather during the latter part of the season is held by David Thrasher, well known farmer of Sidney Township as one reason for the not too plentiful growth in some sections of the Township, while it is reported by the Ontario Department that in central and southwestern parts much grain was damaged by incessant heavy rains which caused sprouting. "Much of the crop can be put to feeding purposes," the report declares.

A preliminary estimate places the oat yield at 33 bushels per acre, as compared with 28.5 bushels in 1936 and a preceding 30-year average of 35.4 bushels per acre.

Potatoe crop prospects were reduced in many sections by dry weather at critical growing periods and production will be lower. If frost holds off for another three weeks the crop may run 85 per cent normal in eastern Ontario the report states.

With such famous veterans of the greens as Leo Diegel and Lighthorse Harry Cooper leading a starry field in the early stages of the Canadian Open at St. Andrew's Club, Toronto, the race for Canada's premier golf award, the Seagram Gold Cup, was still wide open as the tenth end of the second day with a platoon of the continent's most noted players still within striking distance of the title. Lawson Little of San Francisco, former king of the amateurs, is the defending champion. The title plus the Seagram trophy plus the $1,000 in cash which goes with it, drew a field of 170 experts for this year's open. R.C.A.F. OFFICER FRACTURES ARM IN CAR ACCIDENT

Flight Lieut. A. W. Morrison's Car and Truck Sideswipe in Passing

DRIVER BADLY HURT

Compound Fracture of Arm at Elbow Most Serious Injury Received

A pet dog was instantly killed, a motor car completely demolished when Flight Lieut. A. W. Morrison, R.C.A.F., Trenton, sustained a compound fracture of the left arm after the automobile he was driving was implicated in the early morning with a large truck, at the eastern limits of the town of Trenton, at the end of the second day with a platoon of the continent's most noted players still within striking distance of the title. Lawson Little of San Francisco, former king of the amateurs, is the defending champion. The title plus the Seagram trophy plus the $1,000 in cash which goes with it, drew a field of 170 experts for this year's open. Flight Lieut. Morrison's personal pet dog accompanied his master on the ride and was killed as the car turned over. Lieut. Morrison miraculously escaped with a broken arm, several severe body lacerations, the result of flying glass and general shock. Dr. Stobie rendered today the left arm had sustained a compound fracture at the elbow, the injury being most serious.

Motorcycle Policemen Jack Whitty, Trenton and Sam Irvine, Belleville, investigated the accident. "No charges have been laid in the matter as yet, we have not concluded our investigations," stated Traffic Officer Whitty to the Ontario Intelligencer today.

ROWE PROMISES

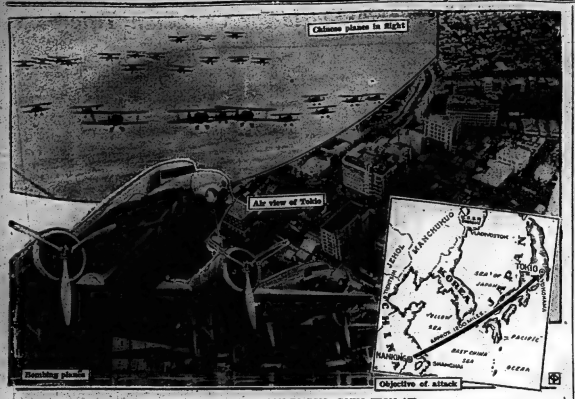
anything he had done for the farmer. "In Fort William the service clubs are taking up collections to give agricultural education to children because the grants for education were cut off so the government might build up a $9,000,000 gold port for election purposes."

If his party attained power, said Mr. Rowe, he would not only reopen Ontario House in London but he would endeavour to find markets for the Ontario farmer and promote agriculture generally.



Mr. Rowe in his Welland address charged the Premier with changing his platform according to editorials in the Toronto Globe and Mail. One editorial got a new Hydro policy; another resulted in repeal of the government's Separate School legislation; a third found the premier declaring himself prepared to request from Ottawa foreign labor relations. This was something he had no power to do.

Then the Globe and Mail produced an editorial on the liquor question and the premier announced he would favor "a coalition beer policy" which would place a Supreme Court judge in charge assisted by elected Conservative and Liberal members.

TRUCK LOADED WITH TOMATO CRATES UPSETS NEAR BRIGHTON

Some 250 crates of tomatoes owned by the Canadian Canners, en route to the packing plants at Wellington spilled over No. 2 Highway three miles east of Brighton, yesterday afternoon when a large truck driven by Howard Marshall and Geo. Hayes of Bloomfield, left the highway and overturned in the ditch. Fire which followed the accident badly damaged the truck. Marshall received burns on the head and deep cuts on his body. Hayes received superficial injuries which resulted in his admission to the Belleville General Hospital for examination.

"SUICIDE" CHINESE FLIERS PLAN TO BOMB TOKIO FROM AIR

A sensational plan to bomb Tokio by air in retaliation for the havoc wreaked upon Shanghai may be carried out by 400 "suicide" Chinese fliers who have volunteered their services. First objectives would be Japanese munitions plants and troop centres, to be followed by a devastating attack on the Japanese capital itself. Nearest point in Japan to the Chinese mainland is more than 500 miles across the China sea. But the distance from the Nanking airport to Tokio is approximately 1,200 miles or 2,400 miles for the round trip and the aeroplanes can carry fuel for nearly 1,500 miles. Besides, they would be subjected to the withering fire of anti-aircraft gun.

It was during the revolution of August, 1933, which unseated President Gerardo Machado, that Batista rose to power.

GIVES UP "IRON LUNG"

Stricken with infantile paralysis almost a year ago, Ines Woolham (above), 23-year-old St. Boniface Man., says has given up her "iron lung" to another Manitoba child suffering from infantile paralysis of the respiratory organs. Miss Woolham gave up her place in the lung when a 6-year-old child was brought to Winnipeg hospital in a critical condition. Unable to sleep outside the lung for any length of time, doctors are hoping that another lung, now in use, will soon be available to allow Miss Woolham a good rest inside.

CHINESE REFUGEES FLEE ACROSS IMPROVISED BRIDGE TO SAFETY

Fleeing Chinese, in a mad scramble to escape the screaming shells and sudden death from the air, are shown crossing an improvised bridge of planks laid across sampans into the safety of the international settlement at Shanghai. Periodic shelling and bombing of the native quarter has taken the lives of more than a thousand non-combatants. Latest reports from China indicate the Japanese war machine has been halted on three fronts by heroic resistance on the part of Chinese soldiers.

Prize Package

By FRANCES L. BARRY

McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

"You may be a mystery man," smiled Sylvia with her favorite wide-eyed stare, half-innocent, half-coquettish, "but I'm not one thing, at least, about you; you can dance, Mr.—Mr.—"

"Mickie is my name," her tall partner informed her. He adjusted her wrap, and the feet of his arm across her shoulders sent a pleasant glow through Sylvia's spine. She recognized the symptom. This man had it, too.

"Mickie is not a very high-sounding name, is it?" he was philosophizing. "I'm usually called Mickey by folks who like me."

"Is that so?" Sylvia purred demure. She was not surprised to find the arm that had adjusted her cloak was not about her.

She supposed he was a college man. Most of the crowd were. What was it Mickey Maxson had said in introducing him? A "mystery man."

Then he kissed her.

"I've been waiting for that kiss," he told her, "for eight long months. The first one I had from you was lovely—tempting example."

Sylvia stiffened. A premonition of disaster was upon her. When before had she let him beat bridge in this fashion?

She reminded. Rudely reminded.

"You weren't so dressed up that day," the bronzed young man was telling her. "But you were just as lovely. Angel is becoming to you. You were like Aphrodite rising from the foam. Aphrodite with a scarlet bathing suit—and a chip on her shoulder."

"How amusingly you recall the situation," applauded Sylvia icily. "Please take your arm away."

The scorn in her voice was such that she had no doubt in the world the man stepped back before her biting cry.

"So that is why your face was so familiar," he said in calm assert. "To think that I could ever forget the one and only Micky, Micky, the invincible, the undisputed mower of lawns and digger of dams. Micky of Oxlock House, handy man of Outook viage. After seeing you for three summers in overalls, I hope I'm to be forgiven for failing to recognize you in evening clothes."

"Sylvia—" he stretched out a placatory hand.

"Miss Selkirk, please. You have humbled her enough. I suppose you think you saved my life that day in the surf. How dare you? Who asked you to row out after me with your smelly old fish scow? Who asked you to haul me out of water like a bedraggled cat or a lobster pot or something? I'd have got ashore somehow."

"I'm sorry I have made a mistake," he said; "but it was to my advantage, indeed. You never gave me a chance to explain before."

"No explanations are necessary," he pouted. You acted like a rube! Everything you did tonight you have acted like a cad."

Mickie looked as he grieved a child.

"It is an insult—from a man who is practically a servant."

"So you realize that, do you?" he asked. "Then after all? You judge a man by how he serves an hostess? Is that the way you've served?"

Sylvia had gathered her wrap about her. She was a fool to keep loading back to the dance floor. She was wholly ashamed of herself now.

It was hours later that she had her first chance to confide in Mervion Maxson. Marion's first question was an open one.

"Whatever became of the handsome Mr. Mickie?" she demanded. "I've seen him since he danced with you."

"I think he has left the party," Sylvia informed her, "and it is just as well he did."

"Don't tell me you didn't fall for him. He was the prize package of the evening."

"Yes?" Sylvia was prepared to triumph. "Do you know who the prize package is?"

"I should say I do. You and I may be strangers in town, but we learn fast, dearie."

"What do you mean?"

Marion smiled wisely. "You gretched quickly enough," she told Sylvia. "I guess you know your partner today. Well, Mrs. De Stigeur told me."

"About this man? That he is—"

"That he is THE Micky Mickles, All-American halfback, Phi Beta Kappa man, president of the university's most exclusive fraternity, heir apparent to the Mickle millions—"

"But he can't be. He—"

"Never mind the bluff, Miss Innocence. I know you must have recognized him. According to Mrs. De Stigeur, he's spent his last three summers at his Maine home where—four parents take you, Prince Charlie stuff. Working his way through college. Catching lobsters or codfish or crabs, or something. He even dodges the reporters—but he didn't dodge you. Why whisk the matter?"

"Nothing," gasped Sylvia faintly. "I mean I wasn't worry. Worry. From his expression when he was dancing with you, you made an impression. I'll stand all right."

"I certainly did," gasped Sylvia.

Employment in Sweden is much greater than a year ago.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Sept. 11 (AP)—Whirlwind buying put rallying power behind the stock market today after recently slumping leaders bounced up 1 to 3 or more points at the best. The ticker tape was several minutes behind at intervals as blocks of 1,000 to 2,000 shares changed hands. Transfers approximated 1,300,000 shares.

At Amsterdam, only leading European markets open, international stocks exhibited strength. Purchasing orders from abroad on balance were reported by houses with foreign connections.

Sharp spikeuons on the right-about were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, American Rolling Mill, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Goodrich, Timken, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania and Southern Pacific.

CHEESE BOARD

Three prizes were again registered on today's grading of the Belleville Cheese Board.

A total of 2352 white and 54 colored cheese were offered. Colored brought 13¼ cents. 324 of the white brought 13¼, cents, while the balance sold at 13 1-16 cents.

Initial bid registered was 13½ cents.

Buying was among Mr. McCreary, Mr. Hart, Mr. Meyers, Mr. Fralelgh and Mr. Hunter.

Buyers present were Messrs. Taylor, Hart, Hunter, McCreary, Cook, Morton, Fralelgh, Murphy, Meyers and Ashton.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Sept. 11—Demand has shown a distinct improvement this week on the local egg market. Sales were again good yesterday and prices moved fractionally higher on the month receipts in the city, while on small lots to the retail trade the quotations of a six-cent range on top grades were dropped. Return to the city of many residents who have spent the summer in the country, and cooler weather, have imparted the strength to the butter demand, dealers say. Butter was a little steadier yesterday. Cheese was quiet and inclined to be easier again. Potatoes and poultry were unchanged. Receipts were 343 cases of eggs, one box of butter and 4,915 boxes of cheese, including truck arrivals.

At the Canadian Commodity Exchange trading was more active, and 400 boxes of Quebec fresh 27 score butter sold at 26 3-8c and 400 sold at 26 1-2c, the latter being the closing price, up 1-8c from the previous day. Small lots to the retail trade were quoted at 26½ lobbers at 27 1-2c for solids and 28c for prints.

The cheese market was 13 5-8c to 13 3-4c for No. 1 Ontario white; 14 3-8c to 14 1-2c for No. 1 Ontario Colored.

On the egg market graded shipments for free cases became mostly 26 1-2c for A-large, 26 1-2c for A-medium, 22-23 1-2c for B and 20c for C.

CITY MARKET IS CROWDED TODAY DESPITE THE RAIN

Prices Remain Generally Firm, Fine Display Greets Shoppers

EGGS HIGHER

In spite of a drizzling rain that fell from sullen lowering skies a fine display of fruit and vegetables was available for Saturday morning shoppers at the city market today. Par-seeing vendors brought tarpaulins with them to cover their perishable produce. Others awaited temporary stands to protect themselves and their wares from the fine drizzle which soaked vendor and shopper alike. Towards midmorning a heavy rain started to fall which drove vendors and shoppers alike to the crowded spaces of the inside market.

Prices held generally firm on nearly all staple produce. In the fruit market, potatoes which had held the spotlight for the past week were conspicuous by their practical absence today, a feature of which was the decline in price to fifty-five cents for selects and forty-five cents for No. 1's which was asked for the few baskets available.

Apparently there is no let up to the supplies of canalaoupe and watermelon. Growers who visited the present crop would be a record one seem to have had their prophecies fulfilled. Today's supply was equally as heavy as that of the past week. Prices remained steady with the canalaoupe quotations holding at from five cents up and the basket from ten cents up.

Discerning shoppers with an eye to the preservation season took advantage of the fine prices offered in plums and green gages. Bradshaws, Bradley's, Slim Damsons were offered at thirty cents for six-quart quantities, with the popular Burbank variety selling at thirty-five cents for the same quantity.

St. Lawrence apples made their 1937 debut today selling at the low price of twenty-five cents per basket. Prices were quoted at thirty and thirty-five cents per peck. Crabapples were quoted at twenty-five cents per large basket.

Tomatoes were plentiful in varying quantities. Basket lots remained at the same level as pre-Saturday prices, selling at fifty cents. Basket lots were offered at fifteen and twenty cents. Sweet corn appeared to be holding its own with the white variety gradually displacing the yellow kernels. Dozens were offered at ten and fifteen cents while some vendors offered their stock at two dozen ears for twenty-five cents. Potatoes showed no change in price from former levels, bushels being offered at eighty cents, with peck lots remaining firm at twenty cents. Table squash was offered at from fifteen cents each to the individual variety selling at five and ten cents. Bunch-lots of onions, beets, carrots and radishes sold at prevailing prices. Cabbage and cauliflower, the latter of very good quality, was offered from ten cents up, according to size. pumpkin in varying sizes sold at from fifteen cents.

Seeking shelter from the rain a large crowd of shoppers and vendors thronged the inside market where a fine display of dairy produce was available Eggs showed a sharp rise with "A" selects quoted at thirty cents generally, however, were available at twenty-seven and twenty-five cents. Mediums were offered at twenty-six cents while pullets were quoted at twenty and twenty-two cents.

Farmers' butter showed a slight rise today with two-pound rolls selling at sixty and sixty-five cents. Honey was offered in varying quantities at ten cents per pound with comb honey selling at fifteen cents.

Home-cooking stands did a thriving business today with housewives taking advantage of the many fine bargains offered.

Chickens were offered at from sixty cents to as high as $1.25 each. Broiler were quoted at from seventy-five cents per pair. There was no fish available at the market today.

OFFERS COURSE IN WAR

Dr. William Alfred Eddy (above), president of Hobart college, N. Y., has announced that a course in war will be introduced into the curriculum of his school. The course will "constitute a progressive preparation for the assumption of civic responsibility in the community wherever the graduate will live." Underlying causes of armed strife will be considered by the students.

NEW AFTERNOON DRESS

Kay Francis wears a dress that was especially designed for her use in a forthcoming picture. The afternoon dress of rust jersey features a note of subtle drapery. In vivid contrast are the important accessories. The huge gauntlet gloves are of beige antelope, while the interesting bag is of a brown pigskin with trim of olive wood. The pumps are of matching brown pigskin.

MISSION SEIZED BY JAPS

Professor Fred W. Grieze, of Washington, D. C., one of two who will three other officials of the Seventh Day Adventists, were driven from their mission building in the heart of Shanghai. Japanese soldiers confiscated the property despite the fact that the mission flew many United States flags to identify it as American property. The Japs are using the building as an anti-aircraft base. Professor Grieze, in charge of the mission in Shanghai.

MAY RESIGN

German Minister of Economics and Reichsbank President Dr. Hjalmar Schacht (above) is rumored in political circles as having tendered his resignation from these two important posts in the German government. Dr. Schacht had wished to resign some time ago, but was prevailed upon by Adolf Hitler to continue in the posts. It is expected the German chancellor would confer with Schacht during the Nuremburg congress which both are attending.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Sept. 11 (CP)—With the exception of Hull, where liveweights rose 15 cents to $9.75 and dressed weights increased 20 cents to $12.45, hog prices on Ontario markets reporting today were generally unchanged from yesterday.

Liveweight—Stratford $9.85, Hull $9.75, Peterborough $9.90, Stratford $9.50, London $9.50, Chatham $9.25.

Dressed weights — Barrie $13.25, Hull $12.60, Kitchener $13.70, Peterborough $13.10, Stratford $13.70, London $13.70, Chatham $12.85.

WAR ON PIRATE SUBS BY END OF THIS WEEK

35 British, 25 French Destroyers Concentrated For Anti - Pirate Drive

Scheme is Submitted to Germany And Italy Today

SWIFT ACTION SEEN

Only Offered Opportunity to Patrol Fythenanian Coast

Geneva, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Reports in League of Nations circles said tonight that Italy had accepted the principle of a nine-power plan for an anti-piracy patrol of the Mediterranean.

The note asked "clarification" of the zone which Italy would control under the plan and what obligations there would be to extend port facilities to the contracting powers, including Russia.

A British spokesman, questioned about the report, said he had not seen such a reply, but that it was expected momentarily.

London, Sept. 12 (CP)—By the end of the week, it is proposed, 60 British and French destroyers will be driving pirate submarines out of the Mediterranean.

In Berlin and Rome today, British and French diplomats submitted the Nyon scheme to the German and Italian governments and invited their co-operation. Britain's attention was drawn specifically to the provision that the patrol should include Cyrenhenian Sea. It is not contemplated that Germany and Italy participate in the patrol work.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thesman
Science Service Meteorologist

Football weather! All writers on climate and weather in relation to our activities say that we must be cool to do our best work — especially brain work. That is where the football players have the edge on the baseball players in that the former have selected the cool months to fall to think out and carry out those plays that spell victory. The temperatures as the most important weather element for us to-day, says Hunnigston, between 50 and 60 degrees to do our best work. That is about the temperature range from September to Thanksgiving Day.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Sept. 12.—(CP)—High pressure and quite cool weather covers Ontario and the greater part of Quebec while pressure is low off the Atlantic Coast. A fairly deep disturbance is centred over the Northwest portion of Hudson Bay. Showers have occurred in Quebec and West Matthews through in other districts weather has been fair. It has been moderately warm and humid in the temperatures were recorded yesterday in Saskatchewan and Southern Alberta.

Lake Superior—Moderate southwest winds; fair and becoming little warmer. Tuesday, moderate to fresh southwest to northwest winds; mostly fair and warmer; probably a few scattered thundershowers in west portion.

Kenora and Rainy River—Mostly fair and moderately warm today and Tuesday.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Fair and moderately warm today and Tuesday.

Manitoba — Fair tonight and Tuesday; not much change in temperature.

GALES AND RAIN SWEEP DISTRICT SATURDAY NIGHT

Winds Cause Power Interruption and Leave Trail Broken Branches

WEATHER MUCH COOLER

High winds lashed to almost gale-like proportions swept over the city on Saturday night, leaving a trail of broken branches and losses in its wake. Dead twigs and branches torn from trees by the wind littered city lawns and gardens today. Men and other implements for cleaning lawn debris were brought from summer retirement as residents gave their premises a clean-up.

Dropping temperatures sent residents of city and country alike scurrying for warmer clothing. Sweaters and topcoats were brought out from their summer resting places as shivering people sought respite from the chilly breezes.

Power was disrupted for nearly an hour on Saturday night when one of the worst wind and rain storms struck this part of the district. Patrons at the Capitol Theatre were forced to wait over fifty minutes while power was being restored. Belleville General Hospital was also without power for a short time.

A pall of smoke hung over many homes yesterday as residents started fires in their homes, in an effort to obtain some degree of comfort from chilly atmosphere.

Highway traffic however, seemed to be little affected by the change in the weather. A steady stream of motor-vehicles wound its way through the city all day, with American cars predominating. One observer stated he saw fifteen cars bearing American licenses pass his home at one time.

FALL OF TREE DARKENS VILLAGE

Frankford Business Interrupted in Saturday Night Storm

Frankford, Sept. 13 (Special) — Accompanied by driving rain a miniature hurricane swept over Frankford district on Saturday night. Trees and limbs were blown down, pedestrians had their umbrellas were left holding the handle and in the midst of the week-end shopping the town was plunged in darkness when power service was cut off for over two hours by trees falling across the electric circuit. The town reminded one of the pioneer days with, its unlighted streets and shops and homes dimly lighted with candles and oil lamps. Customers in the barber shops relaxed with half shaved faces or with a hair cut until, with the lights operations could be finished.

New X-Ray Machine Turns Corners Around Body's Bones

Will Photograph Slice of Any Tissue at Any Depth

USE IN TREATMENT

Chicago, Sept. 13 (AP)—X ray surgery which is entirely painless and harmless and which promises to give everyone a look at a slice of his or her liver—if they are interested—was demonstrated here today before the opening session of the Fifth International Congress of Radiology.

This relatively new use of X-rays with a machine which automatically makes them turn corners around bones and photograph a slice of the body at any depth desired and was described by Dr. Sherwood Moore, men of diseases.

LABOR MINISTER URGES TRUST AND GOODWILL

Absolute Industrial Peace Probably Very Distant Goal

CAPITAL AND LABOR

Trades And Labor Congress Open Annual Convention

By GUY K. RHOADES
Ottawa, Sept. 13 (CP)—Labor Minister Norman McLeod Rogers today before the opening session of the 53rd annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada for forbearance in industrial relations. At the same time he said that "unless we are prepared to pay the price of co-operation, the last day of freedom, it would seem that industrial peace in the absolute sense is probably a far distant goal."

500 Delegates Attend.

Welcomed on behalf of the Dominion government more than 500 delegates, the largest convention one of the largest in congress history, the minister urged mutual confidence between the great contending forces and declared that "the right of the individual to associate with others for all lawful purposes is a vital element in our inheritance of freedom. Without that freedom of speech and freedom of the press."

Mr. Rogers said that in the future both employers and employees "must find it necessary from time to time to make a stand, to risk results in strike or lockout."

Collective Bargaining.

However, he declared, "once the conflict is over, attention should be given to developing relations which will make another conflict less probable. "To do this requires a attitude of forbearance on both sides. It requires mutual respect and good faith in the observance of agreements. Goodwill and good faith are fundamental. They are indispensable in the development of collective bargaining."

The minister recalled that in one of his last speeches as Britain's prime minister Earl Baldwin expressed the view "collective bargaining must be the method used to lead to industrial peace in a democratic state."

Freedom of Association.

The president of collective bargaining depended on freedom of association, he said. "Take other rights if parties will but the attempt will it shall be exercised with a sense of responsibility to the community which stands above all other associations whether of employers or employees.

"In the long run our recognition of the obligations of freedom is the key to the true measure of our ability to enjoy the blessings of self-government. I believe the practice of collective bargaining will go steadily forward in Canada as it becomes more and more apparent that organization, whether of labor or of rights, is conscious also of its responsibility to contribute by every right and mutual confidence in the conduct of industrial relations."

4 MORE ILL AT TRANSCONA

Winnipeg, Sept. 13 — (CP) — Transcona remained the centre of the infantile paralysis outbreak in Manitoba today with four of the 14 cases reported during the week-end coming from that railway town 10 miles east of Winnipeg.

Health authorities in the town continued their campaign to give every child under 16 years of age the first shots in efforts to curb the disease.

C. N. E. Looks for Better Year in '38

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)—Directors of the Canadian National Exhibition today looked forward to 1938. They had reason to be optimistic, after one of the most disappointing years in some time. Hopes were high for a record attendance figure, after the year's fair after the 10-day exhibition fell 127,000 short of the decrease of 301,000 over last year.

The attendance figure was distributed by civic officials to the current epidemic of infantile paralysis. This year's attendance was 1,302,000 against 1,502,000 in 1936.

Elwood Hughes, O.B.E. General Manager, told the closing luncheon of Directors Saturday 1937 had been one of the most disappointing in some time. The show itself had received favorable public support. Strictly a Toronto Fair, "we body as any depth desired and was described by Dr. Sherwood Moore, men of diseases.

Beauty Queen Declines Movies, Radio, Vaudeville

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 13 (AP) —A soft-spoken, blue-eyed school girl reigned as the number one beauty queen of the United States today — much to the embarrassment of a steel pier-full of city officials and beauty contest experts.

And while the officials, frustrated and weary, declared "she can't do this to us", Miss Belle County, 17-year-old Miss Bertrand Island of Cinderellaville, told Miss America of 1937, went right on doing it.

"If" being a complete and wholehearted snubbing of the fruits of her victory: a six-week vaudeville contract, a $500 offer for five days on the steel pier, and a flying trip to Hollywood for a screen test incidental.

"No movies, radio or vaudeville fame" she said today. "I'm going to stay in bed and get rid of this cold, and then back to school for me."

A streamlined youngster of five feet six inches and 120 well-placed pounds, Miss Cooper is strictly an amateur beauty with no ulterior designs.

U. S. ENGINEERS ON HYDRO ROLL DECLARES ROWE

Says Man on Back Concessions 'Bribed' by Cheaper Hydro Rates

By C. P. Staff Writer

Oakville, Ont., Sept. 13.—(CP)—Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative Leader, today was bound for a week's tour of points in Ontario to continue his campaign for the Oct. 6 elections. He spoke Saturday at Oakville where he charged President Roosevelt with "dictation" to the Province of Ontario (United States private power interests."

"I charge and challenge him tonight to deny that he has on the payroll at the present time the engineering firm of Stone and Webster of Boston who are tied up with private power interests of the United States and are planning Hydro into the ground."

Further, Mr. Rowe who is bound for Port Arthur, demanded the Premier produce a written statement from Stone and Webster.

Convict Stands Second Trial for Murder

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 13—(CP)—For the second time within six months, Dewey Bruce, 24, a Kingston penitentiary prisoner will go on trial this week for the murder of Guard Albert McCormick.

Supreme Court opens here today before Mr. Justice Hazel Jeffery and the case against Crosley may be proceeded with at once. Crosley faced trial at the Spring Assizes and after the case had proceeded almost a week, the jury reported it hopelessly could not come to an agreement as one of the jurymen refused to discuss the matter with the other jurors. A new trial was ordered.

Crosley is alleged to have stabbed McCormick several times.

PARALYSIS CASE IN MARMORA

School is Closed For Short Period At Least

Marmora, Sept. 13 (Special)—The first case of infantile paralysis was discovered here on Thursday, a seven-year-old boy attending Public School, being the victim. A meeting of the School Board and the Board of Health was called and it was decided to close all schools at once for at least ten days.

40-MILE GALE SWEEPS EAST

Annapolis Valley and Coastal Points Bear Brunt of Storm

Halifax, Sept. 13—(CP)— A 40-mile-an-hour gale that swept over Nova Scotia from the north over the weekend left a heavy mark on the province today.

The famous Annapolis Valley apple belt and coastal points bore the brunt of the storm which did disrupted communication facilities throughout the Province and caused damage to smaller buildings. Trees were uprooted by the wind.

The 275-ton Halifax fishing trawler Lemberg ran aground on the rocks at the entrance of the Sable Island—and the heroic work of the life-saving crew succeeded in taking the 25 men off the vessel.

Considerable damage was wrought by the strong winds accompanied by heavy rain and reliable estimates placed the loss at 250,000 barrels valued at $625,000. This was estimated at about 10 per cent of the crop, figured to be 2,500,000 barrels.

Coastal craft dragged at their anchors all along the coast and many smaller fishing vessels were smashed on the rocks.

HEPBURN ASSAILS ROWE'S STAND ON IRON BOUNTY

States Rowe Offers Ireland Chairmanship of Liquor Board

By C. P. Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 13 (CP)—After a week's tour of Northern Ontario, Premier Mitchell Hepburn today moved eastward on another leg of his campaign for the Oct. 6 Ontario elections. He speaks tonight at Peterborough.

Mr. Hepburn wound up his northern tour Saturday at the counting-in story of Algoma-Manitoulin which, he said, would be split up again into two ridings when redistribution of Ontario's electoral districts is undertaken.

When the last session of the legislature was in progress he had no fight of an election then, he stated. Consequently the redistribution had placed the constituency.

William H. Ireland, Trenton, former member of the legislature and now president of the Ontario Conservative Association, has been offered the chairmanship of the Liquor

IRELAND DENIES HE IS 'IN LINE'

Has Never Been Approached For Job, C. B. Fost, He Declares

Trenton, Ont., Sept. 13 (CP)—W. H. Ireland, president of the Ontario Conservative Association, denied today he is "in line" for the chairmanship of the Ontario Liquor Control Board in the event of a Conservative victory in the Oct. 6 election.

Premier Hepburn said in a speech Saturday at Bracebridge that Mr. Ireland was being held ready by the Conservative party to take the post.

"I have never been approached in any way to position the Liquor Control Board and I have never even considered the matter," Mr. Ireland said.

DEBRIS LEFT BY HEAVY GALE IN W. ONTARIO

Farm Buildings Blown Down, Orchards Damaged

STORM CUTS SWATH

Damage Fairly Heavy in Some Parts of Province

(By The Canadian Press)

Damage from the week-end gale that lashed Ontario in a winding loop from Toronto along the coast of Lake Erie through the Georgian Bay district up to Northern Ontario today was estimated at many thousands of dollars. Hardest hit was the Sudbury district where five inches of rain fell.

Railway lines were washed out and highways made impassable. Houses were flooded and automobiles perched in trees uprooted overnight when the usually docile Nolin and Junction Creeks were flooded and burst their banks, the former course through Sudbury streets.

Toronto Suffers Damage

Toronto suffered when yachts tied to buoys were capsized and a seaplane ridden at anchor in Toronto Bay sunk. Trees were uprooted and the roof of the Argonaut Rowing Club smashed by the wind-lashed waves.

Hydro Lines Down

Hydro and Georgian Bay section trees and telephone poles were uprooted. Motorists found it impossible to drive against the storm. At Meaford orchards were ruined by the wind and work crews were hard put to clear highways of fallen trees and poles.

15-Foot Waves

Waves men were forced to leave their boats and seek shelter when the storm caught them on a fishing expedition. They had to wade ashore and leave the boat to be battered by high waves. Fishing gutters and reported waves 15 feet high crashing against the cement piers at Meaford as they returned from their trips with chilled and ravaged passengers.

The storm in Western Ontario left scattered debris reminiscent of the flood last spring when the Thames river overflower its banks and caused thousands of dollars damage. Farm buildings were blown down by the wind and scores of orchards damaged.

The upper storey of the Harold Dennis home in Tilbury Centre County, was blown off but Mr. and Mrs. Dennis and their child, on the ground floor, were safe. A summer wide swath was cut by the storm in the farming, orchards and buildings flattened.

U. S. Customs Officer Turns Back Woman Ill with Paralysis

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 11 (AP)—The first shots fired in the Spanish war being turned back from the United States border as the Spanish Loyalist guard was established here recently.

A customs officer at the international border reported having stopped and refused admittance to Spain a woman passenger seemed ill. He called in a physician, who examined and the case was diagnosed as infantile paralysis. The officer, a woman, was told to return to the Dominion with his passenger.

The Dominion were reported to have come from Cromland, Ont. Their names were not disclosed.

'SEND THEM BACK'

Indianapolis, Sept. 13 (AP) — A woman telephoned Desk Sergeant Kenneth Bell at police headquarters and said:

"Suppose a man and a woman were engaged and there were showers and presents. Then something happens and the engagements off. How would you divide the presents?"

He was wondering if you could send police out here to make some legal division of the presents," he asked.

Schley gave her a tactful "no" and advised:

"Divide them yourselves—or send them back."

Japanese Aggression Is Charged by Chinese Who Invoke Article XI

General Belief is That Powers Will Decline to Send Aid

SANCTIONS POSSIBLE

Such Measures Were Adopted Against Italy Over Ethiopia

Geneva, Sept. 13 (AP)—The faint possibility of an international naval blockade of Japan by League states appeared today with China's action in invoking Article XI of the League of Nations Covenant in protest against "Japanese aggression".

This article often considered the Covenant's most powerful clause. If the League Council finds that Japan has launched an unprovoked war of aggression upon China, it may act under Article XI, which permits any action which effectively will safeguard peace. Measures of this nature ally believed here that European powers would decline to send armed forces to China through League invitation, even if Japan were found guilty of waging an unprovoked war of aggression.

Question of Naval Blockade.

In past assembly resolutions, the article has been interpreted as suggesting a naval blockade, meaning like a naval blockade.

Should Japan refuse to accept temporary membership in the council to defend the case against her, as provided in Article XVII, which China also invoked, economic and financial sanctions will be given invitation to League members to contribute a quota and navy forces for China's protection might be brought against the land of the rising sun.

Such sanctions were decided against Italy in an attempt to stop her Ethiopian campaign.

Geneva, Sept. 13 (CP-Havas) — Echoes of the Shanghai-Japanese and Spanish wars resounded ominously here as Spanish Premier Juan Negrin formally appealed to the 1931 League of Nations in the presence of delegates of 54 nations.

China formally appealed against Japanese aggression and invoked Articles 7, 10, 11 and XVII of the League Covenant, through its chief delegate, Dr. Wellington Koo. The appeal was addressed to Joseph Avenol, Secretary-General of the League.

Insurgents Protest.

A Spanish Insurgent delegation headed by the Duke of Alba protested that the League was not recognition of Valencia delegates as the official representatives of Spain. Negrin assembly's credentials committee declined to consider the protest.

The Chinese delegation asked the League to take "appropriate and immediate measures" to check activities cited, dealing with League principles of international aggression, threats of war, and steps to be taken in disputes between the League members and non-member countries.

Forces Against League.

In his address opening the assembly hereafter, Premier Negrin discreetly refrained from any pointed reference to the Spanish struggle but warned that "forces are gathering in the "powerful" forces which threaten its destruction."

The Chinese note called the attention of the League to the fact that Japan has invaded China and is pursuing this invasion with its full army, air and naval forces."

Crew Seek Vessel Pounded in Ocean

Halifax, Sept. 13.—(CP)—Captain Lorller Thorlakson of Halifax and the crew of the 275-ton trawler Lemberg arrived at the Sable Island life-saving crew, watched today as their fishing vessel pounded to pieces on the nearby Atlantic.

The Halifax fishing trawler ran aground 100 miles off Nova Scotia, during a storm Sunday and her crew of 25 were taken off by Superintendent Charles Faulkner and a 13-man life-saving crew.

The Lemberg was abandoned as a total loss on Northeast Bar, 22 miles from Sable Island's main station. She apparently struck while seeking refuge from the storm.

More Paralysis Cases Reported

(By The Canadian Press)

List of those stricken by infantile paralysis throughout Canada early-ed. upwards during the week-end, but health authorities believed lower cooler autumn weather would soon exert a curbing influence.

Today there were more than 1,700 reported cases of the disease throughout the Dominion, with nearly 1,400 in Ontario. Manitoba had 130, Saskatchewan nearly 100, Alberta half that number, and Quebec and the Maritime combined about 90.

Death toll from the disease stood at 70 since the epidemic first made appearance in June. Deaths have reached double figures only in Ontario, which reports 4 deaths, of which 3 were in Toronto district. Five have died in Manitoba, two in Saskatchewan, five in Alberta, three in Nova Scotia and four in the other Maritimes Provinces and Quebec.

7 LIVES LOST IN ACCIDENTS

Level Crossing Crash Takes Toll of Three

(By The Canadian Press)

Seven lives were lost in Ontario during the week-end through highway accidents and a level crossing crash, the persons of a Free-man, near Hamilton, when a train plunged into an automobile.

The level crossing victims were Joseph Dawson, 48, and Mrs. Sussie Conoker, 40, both of Hamilton. They were riding with Arthur Conoker, 45, when a Canadian National Railways gas-electric train struck their car.

Dawson was hurled through the windshield and when he was found picked up while Mrs. Conoker died in the ambulance. Mrs. Conoker the latch struck on the side where Ellis sat he escaped serious injury.

Identification Sought

Hamilton officials today still sought to identify a pedestrian struck and fatally injured near Waterdown by an automobile. John Byers, 55, Saltfleet, was fatally injured Saturday by an auto driven by Frank Smith of Winona on the Niagara highway.

John Deadlin, Jarvis chorold, was killed when struck by a car at St. Catharines while riding a motorcycle. Police questioned the car driver, Miss Wilma Toronto, of Dover died in St. Catharines hospital.

Prominent Thamesford District resident, Daniel Spicer, 75, was fatally injured when struck by an auto near Thamesford. An inquest will be held Thursday.

John Deadlin, garage mechanic, was struck and killed at Brantford by a car driven by Gordon Cowell and police say the man accidentally waited into the right front fender.

DRUNKEN DRIVER GIVEN 10 DAYS

Five Men Arrested as Sequel to Sunday Motor Crash

Five residents of the Tyendinaga Indian Reserve were arrested on charges of disturbing the peace and violation of the Liquor Control Act early Sunday morning following a motor accident on Albion Street. The five men were riding in an automobile and are alleged by police to have collided with another parked automobile on Albion Street, the property of R.—Smith, Belleville.

The men were arrested by Constables Evans and Taylor, and gave their names as Calvin Corby, the alleged driver of the car, Lawrence Percy Corby, Fred Sero and Amey Brant. The cars were taken into custody and held to appear in today's local police court. In the accident the left rear fender of Mr. Smith's car was badly damaged.

Calvin Corby was charged with driving a motor car while intoxicated. He pleaded guilty. "There was an accident in connection with this matter," explained Chief Kidd.

There was no alternative in these cases, ten days in the common jail" counselled His Worship.

A second charge of operating a motor car without first having obtained an individual operator's licence also brought a plea of guilty.

A fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed with ten days of a consecutive sentence being necessary in default of the payment of the fine and costs.

The men intimated they would endeavour to raise the fines.

Rural Citizens Near Campbellford Take No Chances on Paralysis

Rural citizens in the vicinity of Campbellford are taking the threat of infantile paralysis seriously and have boycotted Campbellford citizens completely. It was announced on Saturday that a Campbellford egg dealer sent his truck out on the road through Consecutionville on business generally is good, but was forced to return home without purchasing a single crate of eggs. Sellers generally admit a very poor trade. A second instance of a village confectioner who sent three of his employees to the Wooler fair to establish a soft drink stand is also reported. They, too, returned and owners of the booth were from Campbellford as they were barred from the grounds.

PETTY THIEVES ACTIVE LOCALLY

Station Street Residence Entered And Robbed Saturday

Burglars were quite active in the vicinity of North Belleville on Saturday night, one case of housebreaking being reported, another the absence of the family of Frank Thompson, 150 Station st. Sunday night, burglars entered the home and stole a $20.00 wrist watch, a flashlight and articles of wearing apparel from the family clothing including shirts, a pair of trousers and socks.

Upon the arrival of local police to the scene, Mr. Thompson stated that the front door of the home had been left unlocked in order that other members of the family entrance upon their arrival. "We did not leave the house until nearly 10.00 p.m. and upon our return at midnight found that we had been robbed," stated Mr. Thompson.

Later in the evening break thieves stole $2.00 worth of groceries from Garnet Benn, local delivery boy. Young Benn was delivering groceries near the Tweed Milling Company and during his absence persons ransacked his delivery box and stole a dozen bottles of peanuts butter to the value of two dollars.

3 PICTON MEN ARRESTED HERE

Following a hectic struggle, during which a chase was given, Detective Fred Izard arrested Herbert Peterson, Picton, for the local Canadian National Express office on Saturday, Leslie George Dafoe and Donald Dalmer, also of Picton, and alleged companions of Peterson, were also taken into custody, the trio being turned over to Police Trenton police regarding investigations regarding the alleged attempts of Peterson to cash a cheque in the amount of $110.50.

Saturday afternoon Detective Fred Izard received information that a man, who was described as 30 years of age, attempting to produce tall, wearing a blue suit and grey cap, had tried to cash a cheque for $110.50 at the Trenton Creameries, at a local bank. When the man was questioned as to his rights to the cheque, he stated he had procured the same "in some business transaction." The bank officials became suspicious and telephoned the Trenton police. The man hurriedly left the local bank.

Later on Saturday afternoon Detective Izard observed two men loitering at the intersection of Bonnacord and Bridge Streets. Investigations revealed the third man to be a local Canadian National Express office and endeavoring to cash a cheque. The officer advanced upon the man, who immediately tore the cheque into small pieces and took flight. A short hustle resulted in the man being handed and placed under arrest. Later the two Dalmard boys were also apprehended. The three were held in the custody and later turned over to the Trenton police where the matter of issuing a cheque is still being investigated.

POLICE COURT

"I'm guilty all right, but if I pay this debt will I have to stand trial just the same?" asked Harry Hogan, carnival concessionaman when he appeared before Magistrate F. Butler K.C., on a charge of fraud today. Hogan was charged, with failing to pay a $7.50 taxi bill the aftermath of a five hour drive around Belleville on Sept. 2nd last. Appearing with the charge of fraud first, young man," commented His Worship. Hogan pleaded guilty, made restitution and paid an additional $7.25 costs before he was discharged on "suspended" sentence.

Owing to the absence from the court of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnelly, the case against Mrs. Raymond Bailey, Point Anne, was matter of an assault charge, stand given. The evidence in the matter was heard last Friday. His Worship reserving judgment again today until next Friday.

Today's session of police court was light the remaining cases all being alleged violations of the Liquor Control Act, that brought pleas of guilty in each incident.
